ILLUSTRATED EDITION OF

THE LIGHT OF ASIA;

Or, The Great Renunciation. Being the Life and Teaching of Gautama, Prince of India and Founder of Buddhism. By SIR EDWIN ARNOLD, M.A., K.C.L.E., C.S.I. Holiday edition. Bound in Oriental colors, with a new portrait of the author by Damman, and illustrative cover design. Square 12mo, gilt top, $1.50; full gilt, gilt edges, $2.00.

The illustrations are taken, for the most part, from photographs of Buddhist sculptures and frescoes found in ancient ruins of India, averaging 2000 years old, many of them being identified by eminent archaeological authorities, both in India and at home, as actually illustrating scenes in the life of Gautama Buddha, the founder of Buddhism, and the hero of Mr. Arnold's poem.

The design on the cover illustrates the four principal events in the life of Buddha, the Birth, the Meditation, the Preaching and the Nirvana. It is taken from a bas-relief found at Sarnath, near Benares, and now in the museum at Calcutta.

THE WINDS, THE WOODS AND THE WANDERER.

A Fable for Children. By LILY F. WESSELHOEFT, author of "Sparrow, the Tramp," and "Flipwing, the Spy." With illustrations. 16mo, cloth, $1.25.

In the story of "The Winds, the Woods and the Wanderer," the author has endeavored to depict an artistic temperament that is misunderstood by the practical natures by which it is surrounded—one that hears the voice of the "dear Lord God," as the Germans have it, speaking through the rustling of the forest-trees. This same artistic temperament the untutored Indian youth possessed; and the two natures were drawn together by the love of the beautiful that was implanted in the soul of each, and that interpreted to them the voices of Nature which to others are as a sealed book.

DEAR DAUGHTER DOROTHY.

List of New Books.

History of the American Episcopal Church:

From the Planting of the Colonies to the End of the Civil War.

By Rev. S. D. MCCONNELL, D.D. 8vo, cloth, $2.00; with gilt top, $2.25; half calf or half mor., $3.00.

The Story of the Church in America is interesting to the last degree. It has never yet been told in a portable, readable form. The position of the Church in American Christianity, its vicissitudes, the influences which have made it what it is, its excellences and its shortcomings, are all traced with outspoken honesty in this volume.

The Makers of Modern English.

A Handbook to the Greater Poets of the Century. By W. J. DAWSON, M.A. 12mo, cloth, $1.75.

The World and the Man.

Being the Baldwin Lectures for 1890, by the Right Rev. HUGH MILLER THOMPSON, D.D. 12mo, cloth, $1.25.

It is as keen and suggestive as anything ever written by the author, and is sure to be widely read.

God Incarnate.

The Bishop Paddock Lectures for 1890, by Rt. Rev. H. T. KINGDON, D.D., Bishop-Coadjutor of Fredericton. 8vo, cloth, $1.75.

 We have published this season 25 entirely new Children's Books, by the best authors, bound very attractively and fully illustrated.

New Books for the Christmas Trade. Published by THE CENTURY CO., New York. Ready about October 10th.

The Autobiography of Joseph Jefferson.

One volume, octavo, 475 pages, richly ornamented vellum cover, gilt top, uncut; in box, $4.00.

What Joseph Jefferson would have to say of his own eventful life, of the great men and women he has met, of the famous Jeffersons that preceded him, and of the creation of such a world-famous character as "Rip Van Winkle," would be interesting in any form; but when issued—as this is—with 75 full-page portraits of celebrated actors and actresses, beautifully printed pages and a superb cover of white and gold, it becomes one of the most delightful books ever offered to the public.

By PALMER COX. 150 large pages (9½ x 8), illuminated cover, $1.50.

Twenty-five thousand copies of the first Brownie Book have been sold within the past three years, and it is believed the selling qualities of this second book will equal that of the first. The advance orders are already very large. Buyers of children's books want plenty of pictures to amuse the youngsters, and these Brownie Books are just the thing. The new book is uniform with the old in size and style of binding. Price of each, $1.50.

By WASHINGTON GLADEN. 200 pages (9¼ x 6¼), illustrated, $1.25.

This is a collection of Christmas stories, some of which have been published in St. Nicholas in past years. It is a beautiful Christmas gift-book for a boy or girl.

Bound Volume of St. Nicholas.

Edited by MARY MAPES DODGE. In two parts, each containing the numbers for six months; 1000 pages, large octavo, richly illustrated. Cloth, $4.00.

These two volumes make one of the best of Christmas gifts for a child of from 8 to 16, or even older. The services of the best writers and illustrators are secured for St. Nicholas, and its contents are always interesting and instructive.

Only retail prices are given above; discounts to dealers made known on application. Write for "Trade Price List."

LEE AND SHEPARD'S ARTISTIC GIFT-BOOKS

FOR THE SEASON 1890-1

A NEW VOLUME BY MARGARET MACDONALD PULLMAN
SUMMERLAND

With 63 original illustrations, engraved on wood by George T. Andrew, and printed under his direction. Size, $9\frac{1}{2} \times 12\frac{1}{2}$ inches. Oblong quarto, artistic cover of two colored cloths, beautifully ornamented, full gilt \$3.75; turkey morocco, \$4.00; tree calf, \$10.00; English seal style, \$7.00.

These new illustrations by the talented artist of "Days Serene" remind one very forcibly of Birket Foster, there is such a calm, peaceful serenity about them, such as one finds in the English landscapes, and in them Mrs. Pullman demonstrates anew that she possesses not only talent of a high order, but a true conception of the beautiful in nature. "Summerland" breathes through all its pages, and each full-page illustration is ushered in by a gem from the artist's pencil, giving the title, each of which is a poem in itself.

The cover, in two colors of cloth, is made from the author's design, and is very artistic. The high quality of Lee and Shepard's art-books, including paper, printing and binding, is maintained throughout the present work.

MISS JEROME'S LATEST WORK

AN OLD LOVE-LETTER

Designed and illuminated by IRVING E. JEROME, author of "One Year's Sketch-Book," "Nature's Hallelujah," "In a Fair Country," "A Bunch of Violets," "The Message of the Bluebird," etc. Antique covers, tied with silk. Boxed, $1.00.

Miss Jerome, in this the sixth book of her matchless art works, has entered a new realm of illustrative art, and has given us not only a novel but a beautiful combination of text and delicate illumination, in which artistic talent and tender religious sentiment are tastefully blended. Each page of this chaste volume contains an apt quotation from the New Testament, in which the spirit of Divine love shines forth. These loving words are set in ornamental lettering, surrounded on each page by an original design illuminated in the old missal style of colors and gold, printed in fac-simile of Miss Jerome's original drawings, producing a brilliant effect, the whole forming a delicate and exquisite love-letter. The covers, with appropriate designs, are printed on rich, antique paper, tied with silk floss, which is secured to the cover by a seal.

LEE AND SHEPARD'S NEW CALENDAR ALL AROUND THE YEAR— 1891

Designed in sepia tint and color by J. Pauline Senter. Printed on heavy cardboard, gilt edges, with chain, tassels and rings. Size, $4\frac{1}{2} \times 5\frac{1}{2}$ inches. Boxed, 50 cents.

The marvellous success which has attended the production of Messrs. Lee and Shepard's Calendars in previous years has led them to bring out an entirely new one for 1891, which far surpasses any yet issued in the designs and quality of workmanship. In addition to the calendar for each month each card contains a charming design and an appropriate sentiment, in delicate tints and colors. The designs are mostly of chubby children in various scenes, drawn in the picturesque style of the artist, and, altogether, it is the handsomest and most delicate calendar yet offered. The cards are tastily tied with white silk cord, and a chain attached by which they may be hung on the wall or elsewhere, and are so arranged on rings that they may be turned over like the leaves of a book as each month shall be needed for reference.

WILL PUBLISH OCT. 10:

In and Out of Book and Journal.

By A. SYDNEY ROBERTS, M.D., with fifty spirited illustrations by S. W. VAN SCHAICK. 12mo, decorated cloth, $1.25.

A collection of bright, witty, sententious sayings gathered from various sources, the pictorial interpretations of the text being characterized by peculiar genius, delicacy of touch and sense of humor.

The Distribution of Wealth.

By RUFUS COPE. Large 12mo, cloth, $2.00.

An examination of the extent and sources of our wealth and its distribution in the different branches of industry and trade. The author discusses in a popular manner the various important economical problems now so generally agitated, and by his keen logic adds materially to their solution.

The Two Lost Centuries of Britain.

By WILLIAM H. BABCOCK. 12mo, cloth, $1.25.

The author here gives us a trustworthy account of the period intervening between the evacuation by the Romans and the commencement of authentic history of modern England. He has earnestly and critically sought out the truth embodied in the various legends and traditions current concerning that time, and has woven them with the facts derived from various authoritative sources into a most interesting and reliable narrative, which will prove a valuable addition to historical literature.

Hermetic Philosophy.

Including Lessons, General Discourses and Explications of "Fragments" from the schools of Egypt, Chaldea, Greece, Italy, Scandinavia, etc. Designed for students of the Hermetic, Pythagorean and Platonic Sciences and Western Occultism. By an Acolyte of the "H. B. of L." 12mo, cloth, $1.00.

Heriot's Choice.

The latest issue in Lippincott's Series of Select Novels. By ROSA N. CAREY, author of "Esther," "Aunt Diana," "Only the Governess," "Wee Wife," etc. 12mo, paper, 50 cents; cloth, 75 cents.

Miss Carey has grown steadily in public favor as a writer of stories of domestic life in England which shows it at its best. She has drawn her pictures with great artistic skill, and her coloring is broad, vivid and true. Her books are always pure and clean, far removed from the undertone of immorality which taints most French novels and many English ones of the present day.

Allen, J. Romilly. The monumental history of the early British Church. N. Y., E. & J. B. Young & Co., 1889. 14+255 p. S. cl., $1.25.

Having briefly sketched out the methods by which the archæologist arrives at his conclusions, the author proceeds to show how far the history of the early Christian Church in Great Britain can be elucidated by a careful examination of the vestiges it has left behind it, in the shape of ecclesiastical structures, sepulchral monuments and portable relics. The relative functions of the historian and the archæologist are clearly defined. The writer has also written "Early Christian symbolism in Great Britain and Ireland," a volume of Rhind lectures.

They offer together an interesting sketch of the rise and development and prosperity of the Catholic religion in the United States, together with the leading causes that have contributed to its extension.

Brown, Mrs. E. W. The whole world kin: a pioneer experience among remote tribes, and other labors of Nathan Brown. Phil., Hubbard Bros., 1890. 600 p. ll. 12", cl., subs., $1.50.

Browne, Theo. Stephenson, [pseud. for Miss G. Hamlin.] In the riding-school; chats with Esmeralda. Bost., D. Lothrop Co., [1890.] c. 2-205 p. sq. S. cl., $1.

The book contains minute reports of the elementary instructions given by French, English and American masters, and prepares the reader for private lessons, class lessons, exercise rides and music rides, and warns her of some of the difficulties of road riding. It also gives advice as to gymnastic exercise useful to the equestrian; hints as to dress in the school, and the latest fashions in dress for the road, with estimates as to cost. It is written in a bright, chatty series of talks with a supposed girl pupil. It is an open secret that the author, whose pen-name only appears on the title-page, is Miss G. Hamlin, one of the bright newspaper women of Boston.

Buntline, Ned., (pseud.) Buffalo Bill's best shot. N. Y., Street & Smith, [1890.] c. 4-188 p. 1 il., D. (Sea and shore ser., no. 23.) pap., 25 c.

Clark, Susie C. A look upward. Bost., Lee & Shepard, 1891 [1890.] c. 3-215 p. D. cl., $1.25. The doctrine of "spiritual science" is here explained in a series of chapters called Glad tidings, The law of progress; Diverse receptivity; God and the soul; Spirit versus matter; Good and evil; The bondage of fear, The healing power; Suggestions for treatment; What constitutes a healer; Gifts of healing; Spiritual growth, etc.

Clark, Susie C. The round trip from the Hub to the Golden Gate. Bost., Lee & Shepard, 1890. 2-193 p. D. cl., $1.

The route was through Canada to Chicago, across the plains to Santa Fé, and "over the desert to Paradise," which means in prose Pasadena. A chapter is devoted to Pasadena and its environs, to Los Angeles, Santa Monica, Santa Barbara, Riverside, San Diego, San Francisco, Santa Cruz, Monterey, Salt Lake City, etc.

Compayré, Gabriel. The elements of psychology, tr. by W. H. Payne. Bost., Lee & Shepard, 1890. c. 6+315 p. D. cl., $1.

Contains only the essentials of psychology; written in terms readily intelligible to the ordinary reader; its tone and treatment are in accord with the Christian spirit, hence it is specially adapted for the use of teachers of youth.

Oragin, Belle S. Elsie Gray: a story of every day. Phil., Presb. Bd. of Pub., [1890.] c. '89. 2-384 p. il. S. cl., $1.25.

A story for young people. It deals with real life, showing how its incidents and lessons improve the character.

Oralk, Dinah Maria, [formerly Miss Mulock.] John Halifax, gentleman: a novel. N. Y., A. L. Burt, 1890. 12", (Burt's lib. of the world's best books.) cl., $1; hf. cf., $2.

Dane, Daniel. Vengeance is mine. N. Y., Cassell Publishing Co., [1890.] 4+367 p. D. cl., $1.50.

A novel. The hero, Arnold North, is a scientific man of high standing in London, who, notwithstanding his devotion to science, finds time to fall in love, and that, too, with another man's wife. The book abounds in startling incidents, and the characters are cleverly drawn.

Darwin, C. The origin of species, by means of natural selection; or, the preservation of a favored race in the struggle for life. N. Y., A. L. Burt, 1890. por., 12", (Burt's lib. of the world's best books.) cl., $1; hf. cf., $2.

De Quincey, T. Confessions of an English opium-eater and selected essays; ed., with notes, by D. Masson. N. Y., A. L. Burt, 1890. por., 12", (Burt's lib. of the world's best books.) cl., $1; hf. cf., $2.

Douglas, Amanda M. In trust; or, Dr. Bertrand's household. Bost., Lee & Shepard, 1891 [1890.] c. '66. 2-383 p. D. (Good company ser., no. 2.) pap., 50 c.

Drummond, H. The perfected life: the greatest need of the world. N. Y. and Chic., Fleming H. Revell & Co., [1890.] c. '87, '90. 1+25 p. S. pap., 20 c.

The author specifies many complicated and useless ways by which men and women seek to perfect their lives, and then gives as the one simple and effectual method the 16th verse of 1st Corinthians. Every man is a reflector, shows the environment in which he lives, therefore by making Christ a constant companion man will grow more and more like the perfect man. The greatest need is to keep your idea perfect.

Eales, S. J. St. Bernard, abbot of Clairvaux, A.D. 1091-1153. N. Y., E. & J. B. Young & Co., 1890. 3+258 p. S. (The fathers for English readers.) cl., 80 c.

Gives a picture of Western Europe when Bernard was born in Burgundy, France, in 1091. Before his birth his mother dedicated him to the church, she having herself deputed to be a nun in her girlhood. He was studious, and his austere education was softened by his mother's thoughtful tact. His manly and courageous character was combined with great tenderness of disposition, and from his earliest youth he rendered kindly service to all about him. His life in the church is made interesting by the author's style. Ten years after death he was canonized. Gives list of authorities from which the facts of the biography are drawn.

Ebers, G. Uarda: a romance of ancient Egypt; from the German by Clara Bell. N. Y., A. L. Burt, 1890. 12", (Burt's lib. of the world's best books.) cl., $1; hf. cf., $2.

Elliot, George. [pseud. for Mrs. J. W. Cross.] Romola. N. Y., A. L. Burt, 1890. por., 12", (Burt's lib. of the world's best books.) cl., $1; hf. cf., $2.

Emerson, Ralph Waldo. Essays, 1st and 2d ser. N. Y., A. L. Burt, 1890. por., 12", (Burt's lib. of the world's best books.) cl., $1; hf. cf., $2.

Fawcett, Edgar. How a husband forgave: a novel; [il. by Télémaque Eksergian.] N. Y., Belford Co., [1890.] c. 3-225 p. D. (Belford American novel ser., v. 2, no. 10.) pap., 50 c.

A story of fashionable New York City life. The text is taken from John Stuart Mill and reads: "The moral regeneration of mankind will only recommence when the most fundamental of the social relations is placed under the rule of equal justice."

Frédéricq, Paul. The study of history in Holland and Belgium; from the French, by Henrietta Leonard. Balt., Md., Pub. Agency of Johns Hopkins Univ., 1890. c. 3-15 p. O. (Johns Hopkins Univ. studies, 8th ser., no. 10.) pap., 50 c.

Frémont, Jessie Benton. Far-west sketches. Bost., D. Lothrop Co., [1890.] c. 8-206 p. D. cl., $1.

Story sketches of a Christmas Day in Southern California, of the troublous times when Frémont was a leader and a power in New California, of the Sierras and the "big trees," of a ball on the border, of camp life in California and Arizona, and of many other times and places all told in the direct and taking way that makes Mrs. Frémont a peculiarly acceptable delineator of American frontier life.

Gallagher, G. W. One man's struggle. N. Y., Funk & Wagnalls, 1890. c. 3-169 p. D. cl., $1.

A temperance story, said to be founded on facts; tells of a crusade made by a brave and zealous young minister upon the saloons of a New England manufacturing city.

Gallagher, Rev. Mason. The true historic episcopate as seen in the original constitution of the church of Alexandria; introd. by J. McDowell Leavitt, D.D. N. Y., Funk & Wagnalls, 1890. c. 36+342 p. D. cl., $1.

The chief obstacle to church union among Protestants at the present time is the dogma of the historic episcopate held by the Protestant Episcopal Church. The author, formerly a High Church Episcopalian, now in the Reformed Episcopal Church, endeavors to present abundant evidence that the view that the laying on of hands of a third order in the ministry is essential to a valid ordination was unknown in the Primitive Church, and is repudiated by the better writers even of the Protestant Episcopal Church, many of which he freely quotes.

Gilbert, B. A narrative of the captivity and sufferings of Benjamin Gilbert and his family, who were surprised by the Indians and taken from their farm on Mahoning Creek, in Penn Township, Northampton Co., in the spring of 1780. Lancaster, Pa., S. H. Zahm & Co., 1890. 38 p. 8°, pap., 60 c.

Guizot, François P. G. The history of civilization in Europe, tr. by W. Hazlitt; with a biographical sketch of the author. N. Y., A. L. Burt, 1890. por., 12", (Burt's lib. of the world's best books.) cl., $1, hf. cf., $2.

Guernsey, Lucy Ellen. The hidden treasure: a tale of troublous times. N. Y., T. Whitaker, 1890. c. 5-339 p. ll. D. cl., $1.50.

The hidden treasure is a copy of the Wycliffe Bible hidden by a martyr of the Inquisition before he went to the stake. England, in the years 1507-1536 is the scene of a well-told story of the Reformation and the breaking up of the convents and monasteries.

Haferkorn, H. E., and Helse, Paul, comps. Handy lists of technical literature, a reference catalogue of books printed in English from 1880 to 1888 inclusive, with a select list of books printed before 1880. Pt. 3, Engineering and mechanics. Milwaukee, Wis., Helse & Hafer-korn, 274 Grove St., 1890. c. 7+168 p. O. cl., (corr. price.) $2.75; pap., $2.50. Key to same, 12 p. O. pap., 25 c.

Harkness, Albert. An easy method for beginners in Latin. N. Y., American Book Co., [1890.] c. 11+348 p. ll. D. hf. leath., $1.20.

The work is at once a book of Latin exercises, a Latin reader and a sufficient grammar for the beginner. It is intended to introduce the learner to such a practical and working knowledge of the Latin language as will enable him to read Caesar or Nepos with some degree of pleasure.

Hector, Mrs. Annie F., ["Mrs. Alexander," pseud.] Blind fate: a novel. N. Y., H. Holt & Co., 1890. 1+326 p. S. (Leisure hour ser.) cl., $1; pap., 30 c.

A husband's jealousy receives so much encouragement from the mean and petty nature of his mother, that in a moment of desperation he stabs his wife to the heart. He goes for a long time unsuspected of the murder, while an innocent man is being watched by the detectives. Just as the web begins to be woven around the husband he commits suicide. A love affair brightens the many sombre episodes of the novel. Scenes and characters taken from English refined life.

Horton, Rob. F. Inspiration and the Bible: an inquiry. N. Y., E. P. Dutton & Co., [1890.] 10+256 p. D. cl., $1.25.

The author intends his book to be a bridge across the chasm between Biblical scholarship on the one side, and the general way of regarding the Bible on the other. He attempts to show the abiding foundations of the Bible unmoved and immovable, and at the same time to recognize and allow for all the facts which the acute and earnest study of a generation of Biblical scholars has brought to light. He addresses himself especially to the thoughtful unbelievers of the present day. It is a valuable summary of some of the important results of Biblical criticism.

Addressed to the laity at large, as well as those who are in process of education. Though called an "introduction," no special pains have been taken to simplify or popularize its treatment. Prof. Ladd says: "Though much of its language is somewhat foreign to that of common life, the subjects of which it treats are those which lie upon the minds and hearts of all the thoughtful. If to such any of my thoughts can be an introduction, or a vide mecum in reflection, my purposes will be the more completely attained."

Mable, Hamilton Wright. Mystudy fire. N. Y., Dodd, Mead & Co., 1890. 4+199 p. D. bds., $1.25.

Twenty-two chapters of musings upon men and things indulged in by the editor of the Christian Union at his pleasant fire-side, often surrounded by his dear wife Rosalind and their two lovely children. Many of his thoughts are given to books, and include some delightful criticisms on the writers of the hour, as well as on authors already conceded to be standard, if not classic. The chapters on genius and poetry are exquisitely written.

The author is rector of St. Stephen's P. E. Church Philadelphia. He defines the position of the Episcopal Church in America, describes its vicissitudes and the influences which have made it what it is; points out its excellences and shortcomings with outspoken honesty. Dr. McConnell attempts to show that the religious history of this country is as peculiar and far-reaching as its political history, and that the influences which shape it are as actively at work now as they have been at any time. The special characteristics of American Christianity are tellingly put before the reader.

This book traces Phillips' career from his boyhood to the time when he became one of the despised Abolitionists. It tells of his part in the great struggle, and of other leaders connected with him in it. Then, after victory, how he still worked for Negro suffrage—the last step in the black man's freedom. The book is filled with extracts from his letters and speeches, and gives three of his speeches in full, viz.: "The lost arts," "Daniel O'Connell," "The scholar in a republic."

Mead, Theodore H. Our mother tongue. N. Y., Dodd, Mead & Co., [1890.] c. 3+328 p. S. cl., $1.50.

Written with the view of enabling the reader, without the aid of any other instruction, to correct any defects and imperfections that may exist in his manner of speaking our common language. These defects are found in the quality of the voice itself, in our manner of using the voice, in modulation in articulation and pronunciation. All these points are treated in a thoroughly practical manner, the cause of the various defects being made clear, and detailed instructions given by following which they may all be cured. A vocabulary is appended containing some thousands of words commonly mispronounced in one way or another, and the correct pronunciation is given without the use of arbitrary signs, but yet in a way to be quite unmistakable.

When the writer of this book, several years ago, stood in need of a work to instruct him in the art of spaniel training, he found that none existed which was at all suited to his needs. He was therefore forced to study out the subject for himself. The training system described in this book is the result of his labors. It will be found very useful to sportsmen.

Apart from its interest as a tale of strange adventures, Pellow's narrative is valuable as a geographical document. It is a fairly accurate picture of Morocco between 1715 and 1735, of its cities, towns, public buildings, etc. Pellow visited many parts of the country for the first time, and several which not improbably have not been visited by any other European traveller. He was, moreover, a soldier under Muley Ismail, Muley Dehbbi, Muley Abdelmack and Muley Abdallah, and was an eye-witness to most of the sanguinary episodes of their reigns.

Friedrich Ernst Schleiermacher was born in Breslau, November 31, 1768, at a time when rationalism was sweeping over Germany, threatening utterly to overwhelm the Christian faith. During his ministry he preached about four volumes of published sermons. The present volume gives twenty-seven, selected to give a wide range of subjects, and arranged as far as possible in the order in which they were preached. He died in 1834. A biographical sketch is given in this volume.
- Schurman, Jacob Gould. Belief in God; its origin, nature and basis; being the Winkley lectures of the Andover Theological Seminary for the year 1890. N. Y., C. Scribner's Sons, 1890. 8+266 p. S. cl., $1.25.
The Winkley lectureship of the Andover Theological Seminary has been occupied by experts in theology, economics, political science and law. The theories were largely historical or sociological, and generally of a practical bearing. An abstract subject seemed desirable for the present year, and the Sage Professor of Philosophy in Cornell University delivered the six lectures here collected in the month of March. The author has no desire or motive except to discover truth, and says that he will be deeply grateful for dispassionate criticism.

- Smith, C. E. The world lighted: a study of the apocalypse. N. Y., Funk and Wagnalls, 1890. c. 3-218 p. D. cl., 75 c.
The imagery of the first chapter of Revelation—the "magnificent array of light-bearers, seven golden candlesticks, the sun"—gives the author the idea that the fundamental idea of the Apocalypse and the key to the meaning of its symbols is the progress of truth in enlightening and saving the world. This he strives to make clear with reverence and enthusiasm.
- Smith, F. Harrison. Through Abyssinia: an envoy's ride to the King of Zion. N. Y., A. C. Armstrong & Son, 1890. 7-263+4 p. il. D. cl., $2.
When England became involved in war in the Eastern Soudan on behalf of Egypt in 1885, she was powerless to subjugate the Soudanese and effect the relief of the Egyptian garrisons in Soudan until assisted by King John of Abyssinia, or Zion. In 1885 the author was selected to go to Abyssinia as the bearer of a letter from the Queen to King John, and of the sword of honor. He started the end of January, 1886, and this volume gives a detailed account of his travels and of the various peculiar incidents of his sojourn in strange countries, among a strange people.

This book is the result of several years' practical work in the class-room. It has been the practice of the author to teach the subject of physiology topically, objectively and with such simple experiments as can be performed with inexpensive apparatus. The notes prepared for the use of pupils have been revised and extended from time to time, until they have grown into the substance of this little book.

Stockton, Frank R. Ardis Claverden. N. Y., Dodd, Mead & Co., [1890.] c. '89, '90. 498 p. D. cl., $1.50.

The novel is thoroughly American, the scenes being laid partly in the south and partly in New York, but there is introduced into it a type of English character which has not yet been used in fiction. This type is found among the well-to-do English people who have adopted Virginia as their homes. The story contains many incidents, including a deadly encounter in the black darkness of a cave, the hanging of horse thieves, a duel, and other scenes of dramatic action. There is a great deal of outdoor life in the story, and artist life in the great city is also treated of, two of the most prominent characters being artists.

An attempt to trace back the history of a single Indian tribe into the prehistoric or mound-building age. Dr. Thomas has already presented to the public some reasons for believing the Cherokees were mound-builders, but additional evidence bearing on the subject has been obtained. A more careful study of the Delaware tradition respecting the Tallegwi satisfies him that we have in the Bark Record (Walam Olum) itself proof that they were Cherokees. He thinks the mounds enable us to trace back their line of migration even beyond their residence in Ohio to the western bank of the Mississippi.

These lectures continue the line of thought opened in "The world and the logos" and "The world and the kingdom," two former works by Bishop Thompson. The temptation of Christ is taken as the text, from which many lessons are drawn on the social and political questions of the day. The titles of the several lectures are: The outlook, Led up, Tempted, Bread, Kingdoms, The law of the case, The end.

Tiffany, Francis. Life of Dorothea Lynde Dix. Bost., Houghton, Mifflin & Co., 1890. c. 12+392 p. por. D. cl., $1.50.

A remarkable story is embodied in the life of Dorothea Lynde Dix. It tells of a woman in ill-health, with limited means, and with no political or social power behind her, who by sheer force of will and the strength of her convictions revolutionized the methods or want of methods used in caring for the insane in the United States, and succeeded in establishing State asylums in almost every State in the Union. During the late war she was at the head of the hospital department for the soldiers, and did most valuable service, which the government fully recognized. She died recently at the advanced age of eighty-five.

Ward, Elizabeth Stuart Phelps, and Herbert, D. Come forth. Bost., Houghton, Mifflin & Co., 1891 [1890.] c. 4+318 p. D. cl., $1.25.

"Lazarus, come forth," was spoken by Christ in the village of Bethany. On this miracle the authors of "The master of the magicians" found a novel having for historical background the vicinity of Jerusalem, Bethany and Capernaum, the customs and manners of the Sadducees and Pharisees, the decrees of social caste and the Biblical incidents of the time of Christ. Lazarus is supposed to be a master-builder. The heroine is the beautiful and queenly daughter of the High Priest, Annas. The descriptions are vivid, and the two romances running through the story are full of life and poetry.

Weatherly, F. E. Nancy Lee. N. Y., E. & J. B. Young & Co., [1890.] no paging, il. obl. Fe. pap., 25 c.

Wider hope (The): essays and strictures on the doctrine and literature of future punishment, by F: W: Farrar, E. H. Plumptre, D.D., and others, with a paper "On the supposed Scriptural expression for eternity," by T: De Quincey; and a bibliographical appendix of recent works on eschatology as contained in the British Museum. N. Y., E. P. Dutton & Co., 1890. 11+436 p. D. cl., $1.25.

De Quincey's article was first published in The Instructor, in 1853. In 1857 Canon Farrar preached his five sermons on eternal hope. The most noteworthy comment they called out was a group of essays and strictures, contributed by a number of eminent writers, clerical and lay, to the pages of The Contemporary Review. From these pages James Hogg has edited the present volume.

Within the past few years so many changes have been made in the older methods of sugar analysis, and so many new methods devised and researches of importance to sugar chemistry accomplished, that a concise treatise embodying these changes is most desirable and timely. A list of books and of periodical literature bearing on sugar analysis is appended.

Wright, Julia McNair. Sara Jane: a girl of one talent. Phil., Presb. Bd. of Pub., [1890.] c. 2-320 p. il. S. cl., $1.15.

Sara Jane is a young girl in her Aunt Maria's boarding-house. She is less than sixteen when introduced, but she is the centre of all the household life, a pervasive, inspiring presence everywhere. She is one of those cheerful people who never complain and never tire. She settles all difficulties, keeps all the complicated machinery in motion. As the story progresses Sara Jane's usefulness extends beyond the boarding-house and reaches many other lives.

The Publishers' Weekly.

FOUNDED BY F. LEYPOLDT.

OCTOBER 4, 1890.

The editor does not hold himself responsible for the views expressed in contributed articles or communications.

All matter, whether for the reading-matter columns or our advertising pages, should reach this office not later than Wednesday noon, to insure insertion in the same week's issue.

In case of business changes, notification or card should be immediately sent to this office for entry under "Business Notes." New catalogues issued will also be mentioned when forwarded.

Publishers are requested to furnish title-page proofs and advance information of books forthcoming, both for entry in the lists and for descriptive mention. An early copy of each book published should be forwarded, to insure correctness in the final entry.

"Every man is a debtor to his profession, from the which, as men do of course seek to receive countenance and profit, so ought they of duty to endeavor themselves by way of amends to be a help thereunto."—LORD BACON.

OLD BOOKS WITH NEW TITLE-PAGES.

The Bookfinder, of London, boldly touches upon a subject which, notwithstanding its intimation, has come up for discussion more than once, especially in that portion of the press which has most to do with books and book-producers. We quote from The Bookfinder as follows:

"The practice of putting new title-pages to old books has been in use for years, and by force of example is steadily increasing. The addition of a new date appeared for a time to be considered sufficient, but of late years, grown bolder by degrees, many of our publishers, including some in the highest standing, have taken to adding 'Second edition,' when the only alteration from the original work is the addition of these words and a change of date. This refers principally to scientific works. From every point of view this practice is indefensible. It is misleading to the public and the retailer, and amounts to nothing more or less than a fraud.

"We challenge all the offenders in this respect to answer this question: Why do you put 'Second edition' on the title of your book and date it the present year, when it is the fac-simile of the first edition published some years ago?

"There can be but one answer. We shall be told that it is the custom of the trade, and that it has become permissible on that account; but that is no answer whatever.

"The true answer is, 'Because we wish the public to believe it is a revised and improved edition and brought up to date.'

"Now we contend this is as bad as the dairy-man who labels his three-months' old eggs as new-laid, or the newsboy who cries false news and sells you the morning paper for the evening special. The last offence is punishable by imprisonment, but as far as we know, no one has yet even dared to raise his voice against this iniquitous practice of the publishers.

"We have been told that no publishers will advertise with us after the appearance of this article. Perhaps that accounts for the silence on the point of that portion of the press who have most to do with books and book producers. We, however; refuse to believe it, and think that when the publishers fully recognize the gravity of the offence, it will speedily become a thing of the past. Our publishers as a body are upright and honorable gentlemen, and we look to them with confidence to abandon the present pernicious practice without more ado.

In the case of works of so-called literature it generally makes very little difference whether the title-page tells the truth or not. It is quite different, however, with scientific literature. In this progressive age changes are rapidly made in every department of science, and, as a rule, the publisher keeps abreast of these changes, modifications and improvements, by the reissue again and again of old books to which new matter has been added, and which frequently are partially reset, forming practically new books on their subjects. This is what a student expects to get when he finds a standard work announced to be in a new edition. Unfortunately there are some unscrupulous enough to label a book as a new edition, when in reality nothing is new in the book excepting the date. We have in mind an American reprint of a famous French cook-book which, from time to time, is announced as "a new and revised edition." As a matter of fact it was printed from "a new and revised edition," but since then the work has passed through ten more editions; and, though the author of the book is now dead, will probably go through ten more editions. The latest French edition of this work has for years been as little like its "new and revised" American namesake as the present issue of Webster's Unabridged Dictionary is like the reprint of the 1847 edition. We know the same to be true, though not in such an aggravated form, of scientific and medical works published abroad as well as in this country. This practice is pernicious and, as the Bookfinder rightly says, "amounts to nothing more or less than fraud."

Juggling with title-pages, by the way, is a trick as old almost as the art of printing. It was complained of in Italy before 1550; and shortly after that Johannes Gymnicus, of Cologne, was charged with the practice when reissuing the writings of Leonhard Thurneyser. Ludwig Elsevier, of Antwerp, the founder of the reputed firm of printers, was an arch-offender in this direction. He helped along the sale of his 1615 edition of "Meursius" and his 1616 edition of "Aristotle" by prefixing new title-pages. He did not even hesitate about putting the name of another printer or bookseller on the new title-pages of some of his old slow-selling books. In a number of cases he omitted all typographical marks and name and put in their place a sphere. At times he "augmented" an old edition by changing the folios, so that the last page of the so-called "new and enlarged edition" would bear a higher figure than the original issue. And again he would create new books by binding two old ones together in one volume, as he did with his 1611 edition of "Culverius" and his "Les Tactiques d'Elie et de Leon" of 1613.

What has been accomplished by the modern publisher in the way of putting forth old books under new titles has been interestingly illustrated by Mr. James Lyman Whitney, of the Boston Public Library, in "A Modern Proteus." Doubtless much of this occurs through thoughtlessness, but cases are frequent, indeed, which would seem, to all intents and purposes, to be fraud.

THE event of the season has been the sale of the plates and stock of the old house of Robert Carter & Brothers on September 23. There were present about twenty-five bidders, and the prices were good beyond expectation. The whole list, with a few exceptions, was disposed of, the total realized being $54,293.12. As this figure is but a little below the price put upon the stock by the estate, we presume all concerned may be congratulated upon the result, from a money point of view. Not so, perhaps, from another—of course entirely sentimental—standpoint. It was the policy of the Carter Brothers, as it is that of A. D. F. Randolph & Co., to keep their books only in what they considered legitimate bookstores, and therefore they consistently and persistently refused to sell their books to bazaar, dry-goods men, or to the so-called Library Associations and Literary Agencies. Their new owners will have no such considerations, and the old Carter books will, no doubt, speedily fall in line with the rest. Mr. Randolph will now be alone in the stand he has taken against selling books to any but those keeping a bookstore exclusively. We intend giving in a future issue the names of the purchasers and the books that they bought.

IN their latest contribution to the copyright controversy waged intermittently in the Evening Post, Messrs. Funk & Wagnalls make the following suggestion: Let the signatures of the members of the book trade who are honestly in favor of international copyright be procured to some such agreement as this:

"We, the undersigned publishers and booksellers of America, pledge that we will not publish nor handle any copies of an unauthorized reprint of a foreign book made after the date of this agreement."

This does not strike us as being so much "to the point" as Messrs. Funk & Wagnalls insist it is. Supposing "the leading publishers," who honestly believe in copyright, were to sign such an agreement, what would bind those who are honestly not in favor of such a measure? No, gentlemen, there is but one way—human nature being still in an unregenerate state—and that is, as the Epoch tersely puts it, "to have a law by which everybody shall be compelled to respect literary property without regard to its origin."

THE seventh annual conference of the Newsdealers and Booksellers' National Association will be held at 510 Sixth Avenue, New York, Tuesday morning, at nine o'clock, October 7. We understand that a "plan for an opposition to the American News Company" will form one of the topics for discussion. We would caution our friends the newsdealers not to "bite off more than they can chew." That is what they have done heretofore, and that is one of the reasons why the American News Company is still in tolerably good health.

A NEW ENGLAND hodge-podge shop-keeper, in hawking about a "Webster's Big Dictionary" for one dollar each, makes this damaging confession: "Of course the binding is poor, so is the paper. . . . A foundryman says they are cheaper than coal." That is what we suspected; being manufactured wholly of "wood stock," the so-called book may serve a purpose as kindling wood. It is good for nothing else.

A DECISION IN THE WEBSTER'S DICTIONARY SUITS.

JUSTICE MILLER, in the U. S. Circuit Court, St. Louis, Mo., September 26, rendered an important decision in the series of suits brought by the Merriams against the publishers of the 1847 edition of Webster's Dictionary. The point the plaintiffs wish to gain is that the publishers of the reprint print plainly, in connection with the title, an announcement that it is not the latest revised work made by the Merriams. Defendants here demurred. Justice Miller overruled the demurrer, but in doing so said practically that the plaintiffs had no good ground for suit, as the life of a copyright is only forty-two years, and plaintiff's exclusive right had expired. The Court was of the opinion that the complainants sought to establish the doctrine that a party who enjoyed a monopoly because of a copyright for nearly fifty years was entitled to a continuation of that monopoly. The copyright was accepted with the understanding that at the end of the period for which the copyright is granted the work shall become the property of the people. That is the law, and the monopoly cannot be extended beyond the life of the copyright.

This is the first expression by a court of standing on this matter, though one of the attorneys said in the argument that there were suits filed by the complainants pending all the way from Maine to California.

THE "KREUTZERSONATA" ACQUITTED.

JUDGE M. RUSSELL THAYER, President Judge of Common Pleas Court No. 4, Philadelphia, on September 24 rendered an elaborate decision holding that Tolstoi's "Kreutzer Sonata" is not an obscene book. Charles Arentzen and other book peddlers were arrested at the instance of the Law and Order Society for selling the book. The case was elaborately argued before Judge Thayer, District Attorney Graham appearing as the prosecutor. The case was not sent to a jury, but treated as a question of law to be first passed upon by the Court. Judge Thayer in concluding said: "The work may be offensive to our opinions and convictions, just as others are which are daily sold in our bookstores without objection or challenge from anybody, but it cannot be justly said to be of an obscene or lewd character, nor is it, either in its sentiments or language, in any degree calculated to minister to corrupt or licentious practices, or to gratify lewd desires or to encourage depravity in any form.

"The Court was reminded upon the argument that the Czar of Russia and the Post-Office officials of the United States have condemned this book as an unlawful publication; that the former has prohibited its sale within his dominions, and the latter have forbidden its transmission through the mails. "Without disparaging in any degree the respect due to these high officials within their respective spheres, I can only say that neither of them has ever been recognized in this country as a binding authority in questions of either law or literature. The defendants have committed no offence against the laws, and are therefore discharged."

THE BOOKSELLERS' AND STATIONERS' PROVIDENT ASSOCIATION.

AT a meeting of the Board of Trustees of the Booksellers' and Stationers' Provident Association, held on the evening of September 24, the following new members were elected: John R. Bergh, John Anderson, Jr., Walter W. Pollard, Charles A. Marvin, Emanuel Pergament, Frederick Vilmar, J. Kimball Roddy, C. A. F. Untiedt, J. M. F. Upaike, Le Baron D. Scribner, Howard W. Bible, George H. Scruton, Richard Weedon, Richard Horton, David M. Owen, all of New York City; and George W. Bible, of Bay Ridge, L. I. WILBUR B. KETCHAM, Secretary.

COMMUNICATIONS.
RE-SELLING SUBSCRIPTION-BOOKS.
"A" SUBSCRIBES and pays for a copy of Stanley's book. After reading, he sells, or exchanges it with his bookseller. Question: Under the decisions of the courts regarding subscription-books, can the bookseller offer it for sale in his store, and not render himself liable to a penalty? BOOKSELLER.

[Probably he can. "A" certainly can do as he pleases with his own. A subscriber is not under contract to keep.—ED. P. W.]

OLD BOOK CHAT.
AT Sotheby's a copy of the first edition of the scarce little volume, "The Loving Ballad of Lord Bateman," illustrated by G. Cruikshank, and published at 2s. 6d. by C. Tilt, has recently been sold for £11 5s.; Hasteed's "History of Kent" was knocked down for £17 15s.; and a copy of the first edition of the "Vicar of Wakefield" for £20 10s.

SOME MS. fragments of Dante's "Divina Commedia" have been found at Sarzana in two parchment rolls, discovered among the papers left by Signor De Tomei, a notary. They are of great importance, says the London Athenæum, as they belong to one of the first copies of the poem ever made. The Biblioteca Marciana of Venice has recently acquired a valuable codex of the "Divina Commedia," written in the first half of the fifteenth century, in semi-Gothic characters, and with marginal notes in Latin made by the same hand. The MS. belonged to the rich library of the Counts Piloni of Belluno.

AMONGST the large number of Greek papyri found by Mr. Flinders Petrie in the Fayoum, and now being examined by Prof. Sayce, are portions of Plato's "Phædrus," in a text of the time of Alexander.

THE Trustees of the British Museum have published in fac-simile the papyrus of the Egyptian Book of the Dead, obtained for the Museum in 1888 by Mr. Budge. The papyrus bears the name of one Ani, a "royal scribe" and "scribe of the sacred revenues of Thebes." It was probably written in the fourteenth century B.C. P. Le Page Renouf, Keeper of Oriental Antiquities in the British Museum, wrote an interesting introduction for this issue.

Truth, of London, asserts that in this year's book sales the most striking feature has been "the extraordinary decline in the value of the classics, Elzevirs and Aldines, for which there would have been a most eager competition only a few seasons ago, now fetching only a few shillings." First editions are now in brisk demand, notably those of Burns, "which have just doubled in value (having risen from £66 to £120) in three years. A work which has risen in value with unprecedented rapidity is Halliwell-Phillips's edition of Shakespeare, in sixteen folio volumes, of which only 150 copies were printed. In May, 1881, a copy sold for £51, but the other day another copy, similar in every respect, fetched £171."

NOTES ON CATALOGUES.

THE SMITHSONIAN INSTITUTION, Washington, D. C., has just issued a Check List of its publications to July, 1890, prepared by W. J. Rhees. It forms No. 745 of the Smithsonian Miscellaneous Collection. (34 p. 8°, 2 c.)

J. L. KOBER, Prague, has just issued "Český katalog bibliografický za rok 1889," a catalogue of all books, journals and printed music published in the Bohemian language in 1889, prepared by L. K. Zizka and Bohuslav Foit.

GINN & Co have published separately the bibliographical titles collected for Garnett's translation of "Beowulf" during the past few years. The author hopes that the full bibliographies that appear annually in the "Jahresbericht über die Erscheinungen auf dem Gebiete der germanischen Philologie" and in the "Anglia" and the prospective translation of Wülker's well-known and excellent "Grundriss zur Geschichte der angelsächsischen Literatur," with additions, will relieve him of the labor of collecting these titles in the future, as the student of "Beowulf" will be able to find them by reference to any one of these works. (8 p. 16°.)

Catalogues of New and Second-hand Books.—A. S. Clarke, 34 Park Row, N. Y., odds and ends. (No. 30 of Literary Junk Shop, 32 p. 16°.)—Robert Clarke & Co., Cincinnati, Second-hand law-books. (No. 15, 56 p. 12°.)—F. M. Crouse, 38 N. Delaware St., Indianapolis, Ind., Miscellaneous second-hand books. (Sept. 25, 1890, 4 p. 8°.)—Excelsior Publishing House, 29 Beekman St., N. Y., Contents of popular recitation-books, for the use of booksellers and newsdealers, alphabetically arranged. (30 p. 16°.)—Mr. Evans, 197 Essex Road, Second-hand scientific books, and a large collection of works relating to Africa. (No. 1, 1890, 514 titles.)—D. G. Francis, 12 E. 15th St., N. Y., New and old books. (No. 96, 916 titles, 8°.)—Francis P. Harper, 17 E. 16th St., N. Y., Miscellaneous. (No. 45, 848 titles, 8°.)—M. Herold, Cincinnati, O., List of works on penmanship, illumination, lettering, etc. (4 p. 8°.)—T. and J. W. Johnson & Co., 535 Chestnut St., Phila., Trade List, October, 1890, to Law Booksellers only. (4 p. 8°.)—S. B. Luyster, 98 Nassau St., N. Y., Collection of choice, interesting and scarce books. (No. 174, 410 titles, 8°.)—Luzac & Co.'s Monthly List of Oriental books. (No. 6, 16 p. 16°.)—Joseph McDonough, 53 State St., Albany, N. Y., Miscellaneous second-hand books. (No. 67, 843 titles.)—Macmillan & Co., N. Y., Announcements for fall season. (8 p.)—George H. Rigby, 2413 E. Cumberland St., Phila., Choice and rare books. (No. 1, 228 titles, 16°.) This first catalogue is a splendid specimen of bibliographical work, and speaks well for its author and publisher.

BUSINESS NOTES.

ATLANTA, TEX.—Roach & Trice, booksellers, have dissolved partnership.

BATTLE CREEK, MICH.—F. E. Peaslee, bookseller, has gone to California, where he will in future reside. Great regret is expressed by the local press because of Mr. Peaslee's removal.

BLOOMINGTON, ILL.—A. Mansfield wants to sell his bookstore.

BUCYRUS, O.—W. G. Lewis, bookseller, has sold out.

DENVER, COLO.—Glasgow Kelse & Co., booksellers, are selling out.

EDWARDSVILLE, ILL.—W. D. Harnist, bookseller, has sold out.

EMPIRE, MO.—Holden & Hopkins have removed their bookstore from Zincite to this place.

EVANSVILLE, IND.—Schmitt & Kramer, booksellers and stationers, have gone out of business.

FORT WAYNE, IND.—M. P. Stockbridge, bookseller and stationer, has been succeeded by Charles A. Stockbridge.

GREENFIELD, MASS.—F. H. Brown & Co. have just had their bookstore in Colonnade Block renovated. The old show-cases, which have been in the store nearly fifty years, have been displaced by some fine oval front, cherry and nickel cases, which greatly improve the appearance of their store.

HAMBURG, IA.—Rees & Sproul, booksellers, have dissolved partnership.

IOWA CITY, IOWA.—C. H. Pendleton has gone out of the book business.

ISHPEMING, MICH.—F. E. Cahoon has removed his book business from Saranac to this place.

KENNETT'S SQUARE, PA.—E. W. Entricken, bookseller and stationer, has been succeeded by Entricken & Swayne.

LAKE CHARLES, LA.—E. J. Chavanne, bookseller and stationer, is dead.

LAWRENCE, KAN.—J. H. Lane, bookseller, has gone out of business.

LINCOLN, ILL.—The partnership heretofore existing between Tunis Newkirk and Charles C. Reed, under the firm-name of Newkirk & Reed, has been dissolved by mutual consent, T. Newkirk retiring. The business will be conducted by Charles C. Reed, who assumes all debts of said firm of Newkirk & Reed.

LITTLE ROCK, ARK.—Borg & Danheiser, booksellers, have dissolved partnership.

MARION, IND.—Lee Davidson, bookseller and stationer, has sold out.

MINNEAPOLIS, MINN.—Farnes & Rothie, booksellers and stationers, have been succeeded by Farnes & Stevens.

NAPOLZON, O.—Theo. Suhr & Bro., booksellers and stationers, have dissolved partnership.

NEW YORK CITY.—At the regular meeting of the trustees of the Welch, Fracker Company, held at their office, Sept. 3, Arthur E. Welch ceased to act in the capacity of President, and Willard Fracker was duly elected to that office by a majority vote of the trustees.

NEW YORK CITY.—The certificate of incorporation of the Smith Publishing Company of New York has been filed, and the company is to print, publish and sell books, pamphlets, etc. Trustees, Titus K. Smith, M. Owen Roberts and Henry R. Pennover.

RED WING, MINN.—A. W. Pratt, bookseller and stationer, has been succeeded by Pratt & Pratt.

ROCKFORD, ILL.—E. P. Chaney has sold out his stock of books and stationery.

Kendall, who has been associated with that firm for many years past, takes his place. The business will hereafter be conducted under the firm-name of Timberlake & Kendall, at 122 Norfolk St., as heretofore.

SAN FRANCISCO, CAL.—Joseph A. Hoffmann, owing to the erection of a large building on the site of his store at 808 Montgomery Street, has been obliged to take temporary quarters at 120 Sutter Street. He devotes himself largely to his jobbing, subscription and agency business. He would like to receive two copies of the latest catalogues of publishers and stationers.

"PICK-UPS."

ON THE SHELF.—Miss de Muir: "Papa always gives me a book as a birthday gift." Miss de Mianor: "What a fine library you must have."—Puck.

THE LITERARY TASTE.—He (with a faint blush): Have you read "Bel-Ami"? She (innocently): Oh, yes. That is to say, I have read his "Looking Backward" and a number of his essays.—Washington Star.

LITERARY AND TRADE NOTES.

THE United States Book Co. will publish in this country Moncure D. Conway's monograph, "George Washington's Rules of Civility, traced to their sources and restored."

THE ALBANY BOOK CO. announce for October 10, "Looking Further Backward," by Arthur Dudley Vinton, still another answer to and continuation of Edward Bellamy's well-known novel.

THE WORTHINGTON COMPANY announce that they have just ready "With Clive in India," "A Tale of Waterloo," "In the Reign of Terror," and "With Pike and Dyke," all by Henty. The volumes are illustrated and bound in cloth.

THE HISTORICAL PUBLISHING CO., Philadelphia, will publish, about the middle of October, "From Manger to the Throne," T. De Witt Talmage's life of Christ. The book will be sold by subscription, and owing to the extensive advertising it has received, will probably have an immense sale.

F. J. SCHULTE & Co., Chicago, have just ready a new novel, entitled "A Kentucky Colonel," by Ople P. Read. The story was first published in serial form in The Arkansaw Traveller, and attracted considerable attention for its wit and pleasant narrative. "Caesar's Column," published by this firm in May, has already passed into the seventh edition.

JULIUS BIEN & Co., New York City, have nearly ready an "Atlas of the Metropolitan District," comprising the environs of New York within a radius of fifty miles. The maps will be engraved on copper and printed in color, and "will give on a large scale all the details of the topography, hydrography, and economic features" of the area in question, with population according to the new census.

DUPRAT & Co., 349 Fifth Ave., N. Y., are to publish early in October an édition de luxe of Shakespeare's "Antony and Cleopatra," limited to 150 numbered copies, printed in Paris by Jouaust, on Japan and Holland paper. There will be seventeen illustrations, faithful to the archaeology, designed and etched by Paul Avril, and an introduction by W. J. Rolfe. The plates are to be destroyed, and will not be used elsewhere. The prices range from $30 to $50.

E. W. DAYTON, manager of the estate of Wm. R. Jenkins, sends out the following notice: "Several publishers having sold goods to a firm styled 'Sabiston & Murray,' under the supposition that they were the successors to this business, the trade are hereby notified that any representation to that effect is false. Mr. William R. Jenkins died in June, but this business will be continued exactly as before, in the interest of the heirs. We trust this notice will be sufficient to protect our friends against any misrepresentation of this character."

THE Lew Vanderpoole Publishing Company has just issued "Eteocles, a Tale of Antioch," by Jessie Agnes Andrews (a thirteen-year-old child), and has in press, "Seemingly," a novel, by Mrs. Rockwood and Lew Vanderpoole, which is expected to be of particular interest to Bostonians, as Mrs. Rockwood is a native of Worcester, Mass., and writes of New England life and scenes with the faithfulness of one to the manner born. A second novel, by A. C. Wheeler (New Crinkle), will depict a part of stage life hitherto unknown to the public.

THE AMERICAN BOOK CO. have in hand for publication during the current school year revisions of several of Gray's Botanical series, and new works in both Gray's and Wood's series of botany; a new text-book in the "Elements of Geometry," by Prof. Seth I. Stewart; entirely new editions of "Webster's School Dictionaries," conforming to the latest standard; "Maxwell's Complete Grammar;" additional books in the Latin and Greek series of Prof. W. R. Harper, of Yale University; a new edition of "Cathcart's Literary Reader," and a "Second Book in Physiology and Hygiene," by Dr. Kellogg of the Michigan State Board of Health.

THOMAS NELSON & SONS have just issued the marvellous "Finger New Testament." This wonderful specimen of printing and binding exhibits the properties of the famous "Oxford India paper," and weighs in limp binding about three quarters of an ounce, is only one inch in width, three and a half inches in length and one-third of an inch in thickness, yet it contains 552 pages (the whole of the New Testament), in a type which, though necessarily minute, is yet clear, distinct and perfectly legible. It is neatly bound, flexible calf, rounded corners, and is nicely calculated to fit the vest pocket.

HENRY HOLT & CO. have just issued "The Principles of Psychology," by William James, Professor of Psychology in Harvard University. The author says in his preface that the "treatise has in the main grown up in connection with the author's class-room instruction in psychology, although it is true that some of the chapters are more 'metaphysical' and others fuller of detail than is suitable for students who are going over the subject for the first time. The consequence of this is that, in spite of the exclusion of the important subjects of pleasure and pain, of moral and æsthetic feelings and judgments, the work has grown to a length which no one can regret more than the writer himself." He marks special chapters to which beginners may confine themselves, and hopes that by offering much he will be giving something to many. The two volumes are a most important addition to Holt's Advanced Course of the American Science Series.

WARD, LOCK & CO. have in preparation a cheap edition of Charles Darwin's "Coral Reefs, Volcanic Islands and South American Geology," with critical and historical introductions specially written for this edition by Prof. John W. Judd; a new series of standard works to be issued under the general title of The Macaulay Library of Great Writers, in which they have already under way Macaulay's "Essays and Poems," Walton's "Complete Angler" and "Sheridan's Dramatic Works," to be followed by others; an enlarged edition of "Every Man His Own Mechanic;" the second volume of the new series of "Amateur Work, a cyclopædia of constructive and decorative art and manual labor;" "England's Battles by Sea and Land," a complete record of the naval and military conflicts of the British nation, fully illustrated, in two volumes; "The Red, Brown and Black Men of America, and Their White Supplanters," by G. T. Bettany, illustrated; "The Dark Peoples of a Land of Sunshine," a description of the peoples and tribes of Africa, also by G. T. Bettany, illustrated; "Short Plays for Drawing-Room Performance," specially written for amateurs, by I. Broughton, André and others; "Dickmont," by Arthur Lee Knight, and "Of Langridge Towers," by R. M. Freen books of adventures for boys; "Stories Lads and Gallant Heroes," by Cecil M. "The Adventures of Two Brave Boys," M. Freeman, "Stirring Adventures At Ashore," by W. H. G. Kingston, three books for boys in the series of Beeton's B. Books, edited by G. A. Henty; "How Character in Handwriting," a new graphology, by Henry Frith; "Half a Scientific Amusement, or, practical chemistry without apparatus," translated the French of Gaston Tissandier, by Hent; a new volume in the Scientific Recreation "Beeton's Christmas Annual for 1890" will consist of a new humorous and story of military life, entitled "Bro Arms," by W. M. Watkins-Pitchford, ill. and ten new volumes in their series of Prior Books, chiefly by Sarah Tytler.

A "Life of Schopenhauer," by Professor Wallace, of Oxford, will form the volume in Mr. Walter Scott's Great Writers.

THE second volume of Dr. Bellesheim's schichte der Katholischen Kirche in Irland, publication of which work was announced May, is expected to be issued this month.

HACHETTE & C^{ie}, Paris, announce an important work on early printing, to be issued under the auspices of the French Minister of Public Instruction. The author is M. O. Thierry-Pou. Bibliothèque Nationale. The work will be titled "Premiers Monuments de l'Imprimerie au XV^e Siècle;" and it will be ill. with 289 fac-similes, reproduced by heliogr. During the fifteenth century the art of printing was practiced in France at no less than 400 places, and there were 145 printers and booksh.

THE time for subscribing to Prof. Gall's "Old-Saxon Texts," announced four months ago, has been extended to Nov. 1. In addition to what has already been published, one of the plates will contain a photolith. of some very interesting seventh century drawings by an Anglo-Saxon hand. The accompanying plates is written in German, an English version will also be published. It is provided that a sufficient number of English subscribers come forward by the date mentioned. The publisher is Mr. E. J. Brill, Leiden, 1

TERMS OF ADVERTISING.

Under the heading "Books Wanted," subscribers only are entitled to a free insertion of five lines for books out of print, exclusive of address (in any issue except special numbers), to an extent not exceeding 100 lines a year. If more than five lines are sent, the excess is at 10 cents per line, and amount should be enclosed. Bids for current books and such as may be easily had from the publishers, and repeated matter, as well as all advertisements from non-subscribers, must be paid for at the rate of 10 cents per line.

Under the heading "Books for Sale," the charge to subscribers and non-subscribers is 10 cents per line for each insertion. No deduction for repeated matter.

Under the heading "Situations Wanted," subscribers are entitled to one free insertion of five lines. For repeated matter and advertisements of non-subscribers the charge is 10 cents per line.

All other small advertisements will be charged at the uniform rate of 10 cents per line. Eight words may be reckoned to the line.

Parties with whom we have no accounts must pay in advance, otherwise no notice will be taken of their communications.

Parties desiring to receive answers to their advertisements through this office must either call for them or enclose postage stamps with their orders for the insertion of such advertisements. In all cases we must have the full address of advertisers as a guarantee of good faith.

Houses that are willing to deal only on a cash-on-delivery basis, will find it to their advantage to put after their firm name the word [Cash.]

No. 16. DARWIN'S CORAL REEFS, VOLCANIC ISLANDS AND SOUTH AMERICAN GEOLOGY.

A volume of inestimable value to the Scientific and General Reader.

In the October issue of the Minerva Library, the Editor has collected, in one handsome volume, three of the late Charles Darwin's most important works—"The Structure of Coral Reefs," "Volcanic Islands" and "Geological Observations on South America." "The Structure of Coral Reefs" has always been regarded as one of the most fascinating of all Darwin's books, and his theories on the subject—despite much recent controversy—still hold the field. Each of the three works is prefaced by a separate historical and critical introduction, written especially for the present volume by Professor Judd, F.R.S., an intimate friend of Darwin, and one of the most distinguished geologists of the day. The introductions are in themselves sufficient to make this issue unique.

THE FOLLOWING VOLUMES ALSO ARE NOW READY:

|---|---|

THIRD AND FINAL VOLUME OF THE CYCLOPEDIA OF Music and Musicians.

Edited by JOHN DENISON CHAMPLIN, Jr. Critical editor, WILLIAM F. APTHORP. With over 1000 illustrations, including 36 full-page etched portraits. Three vols., 4to. Decorated parchment binding, uniform with the "Cyclopedia of Painters and Paintings." This edition limited to 500 numbered sets. $25.00 per volume, net.

This volume completes an important work which takes its place as an acknowledged authority in its special field, and ranks with its predecessor, the "Cyclopedia of Painters and Paintings," as an invaluable work of reference, while it resembles the latter still further in the skill and conscientious care with which it has been prepared, and the sumptuously handsome form in which it is issued. The third volume contains full-page etched portraits of some of the greatest of the modern masters of music—Rameau, Rossini, Rubinstein, Saint-Saens, Scarlatti, Schumann, Schubert, Spohr, Spontini, Verdi, Wagner and Weber.

Against Heavy Odds.

A Tale of Norse Heroism. By HJALMAR HJORTH BOYSEN. With 13 full-page illustrations by W. L. TAYLOR. 12mo, $1.00.

The adventures of Ingomar Vang, a brave Norwegian lad, and his manly, courageous and successful fight against adverse fortune, form the theme of a story of fascinating interest. The illustrations are in Mr. Taylor's best style.

Aspects of the Earth.

A Popular Account of Some Familiar Geological Phenomena. By Prof. N. S. SHALER, of Harvard. With 100 illustrations. New and cheaper edition. 8vo, $2.50.

"The subjects are as interesting as the way in which they are treated, and the illustrations are not only numerous but excellent."—New York Tribune.

Bric-a-Brac Stories.

By Mrs. BURTON HARRISON. Illustrated and cover designed by WALTER CRANE. New and Cheaper Edition. 12mo, $1.50.

"It would be difficult to find a more delightful collection of fairy tales. The book is illustrated with twenty-four fascinating drawings by Walter Crane."—Boston Herald.

STATEMENT TO THE TRADE AND THE PUBLIC ABOUT THE HENTY BOYS' BOOKS.

A publishing house in New York is out with a circular in which they call attention to "Our new and one American Edition of the Popular Henty Boys' Books," which they are pleased to term "Unauthorized."

We contend, in the absence of an International Copyright law, we need no more authority to publish any foreign copyright than do other publishers.

We have always been and are in favor of any equitable law or plan by which the rights of authors may be protected, and will willingly co-operate with other houses to bring about such a law; but until it is brought about we do not intend to ask any authority to publish any and every book we may feel disposed to.

As to their threat to sell below our price, they ought to know us better than to put out any such statement. What is to hinder our selling below them again? and the public will be the gainers.

But apart from the question of copyright is the Trade courtesy we have always religiously observed; namely, where an American house has commenced the publishing of any series of author's works, we have abstained from any interference; we did so in the present case. We found on full inquiry, that no American edition was in the market, and we did not conceive that because one firm had imported a supply of these books, that we were thereby restricted, by right or courtesy, from publishing an American edition; such an absurd plea would shut out all the cheap reprints in the market.

Be that as it may, we have made an entirely new set of plates of these books from new type, together with the characteristic illustrations, and are publishing them at a fair price; and it is a question for The Public and The Trade now, whether they will support us, who print the books in this country, or prefer to favor foreign manufacturers.

CHICAGO AND NEW YORK.

MORE NEW BOOKS.

Chuck Purdy. The story of a New York boy. By W. O. Stoddard. 12mo, $1.25.

A capital story of boy life in New York City, strong, honest, breezy, practical and absorbing. By one of the favorite writers for young people.

The hero has some novel yet not improbable experiences, and not only the boys but their elders will be led along from chapter to chapter with eager interest.

Stories of Famous Precious Stones. By Mrs. Goddard Orpen. 12mo, $1.25.

A book on precious stones from which the dry details of the mineralogical treatise and the lapidary's catalogue have both been excluded is a good deal of a treat. Mrs. Orpen has not only chosen representative jewels, but she has given them an appropriate and fascinating setting.

"Primarily a collection of facts, the book has many of the fascinations of a romance."—Brooklyn Times.

In the Riding-School. By Theo. Stephenson Browne. 12mo, $1.00.

A bright, chatty series of talks with a supposed girl pupil. It contains minute reports of the elementary instructions given by French, English and American masters, and prepares the reader for private lessons, class lessons, exercise rides and music rides, and warns her of some of the difficulties of road riding. It also gives advice as to gymnastic exercise useful to the equestrian, hints as to dress in the school, and the latest fashions in dress for the road, with estimates as to cost.

Five Little Peppers Midway. By Margaret Sidney. Illustrations by W. L. Taylor. 12mo, 512 pages, $1.50.

"The author has lost none of her power to charm, for she writes from an experience in which wisdom and sympathy have been felicitously blended."—Saturday Evening Gazette, Boston.

"Margaret Sidney stands side by side with Louisa Alcott in fresh, unstilted style, in refined sensibility and in pure and wholesome depiction of home life among children."—Journal of Education.

On the Hills. By Prof. Frederick Starr. 12mo, $1.25.

A capital series of "geological talks."

The formation of glaciers, the discoveries of curious fossils, extinct fish, stones, birds, etc., coal formations, mountain making, earthquakes, erosion, are some of the subjects treated in this attractive book.

"Prof. Starr has made the pursuit of science really fascinating."—School Journal, New York.

Wednesday the Tenth. A tale of the South Pacific. By Grant Allen. 12mo, 75 cents.

A thrilling story of hardship and adventure among the islands of the Southern Pacific Ocean.

A Real Robinson Crusoe. 12mo, $1.25.

A remarkable book, detailing the adventures and strange experiences of a company of castaways on a Pacific island. It outrivals the famous experiences of the fictitious Robinson Crusoe, and is strictly true from beginning to end. Edited at the narrator's dictation by J. A. Williams.

U. S.: Curious Facts in United States History. By Malcolm Townsend. 500 pages, full indexes, 12mo, cloth, $1.50 net; paper, 75 cents, net.

"As a volume to be kept on the desk for quick reference, 'U. S.' is admirably adapted, and the business man, editor, politician and citizen generally will find it a most useful compendium."—N. Y. Tribune.

"Should be in every private, public and school library in the country."—American Bookseller.

Aunt Hannah, and Martha, and John. By Pansy (Mrs. G. R. Alden) and Mrs. C. M. Livingston. 12mo, $1.50.

Aunt Hannah is the aunt of the young minister (John), and Martha is his wife, and two delightful women they are. The story has to do with the trials, joys and perplexities of a minister's life, and is decidedly pointed, graphic and full of interest. Both pastor and people will find valuable suggestions and food for thought.

Far West Sketches. By Jessie Benton Frémont. 12mo, $1.00.

Mrs. Frémont, beyond any other woman, saw the picturesque, the tragical, the humorous and the noble aspects of the pioneer movement.

Her experiences with Gen. Frémont in the early days of his romantic Western career have given her material for numerous vivid pen pictures of frontier life, whose charm is much increased by her attractive style of writing.

Finding Blodgett. The story of a boy and his dog. By George W. Hamilton. 12mo, $1.25.

A stirring story of effort and pluck, and how a boy labored for justice—and got it. An excellent bit of character sketching of life among the drovers.

Wide-Awake DD. Cloth, $2.00; boards, $1.50.

No young photographer can afford to go without Alexander Black's "Confessions," and their highly suggestive illustrations. All the young folks will be delighted with "Bony and Ban," by Mary Hartwell Catherwood, and that jolliest of boys' stories, "Gid Granger," by William O. Stoddard.

The Pansy for 1890. Boards, $1.25; cloth, $1.75.

Besides the usual entertaining miscellaneous matter, this volume contains two complete books by Pansy, and one by Margaret Sidney.

Our Little Men and Women for 1890. Boards, $1.25; cloth, $1.75.

It aims to get the little people interested in the wonders of the world they live in; and it does it. 75 full-page pictures and hundreds of smaller ones.

Babyland for 1890. With colored frontispiece. Cloth, $1.00; boards, 75 cents.

Bright stories, odd conceits, sparkling jingles, to make the baby laugh and learn together. "Polly Pry and Toddlekins" is a baby serial in twelve chapters.

Baby's Annual for 1891. Colored pictures and illustrations in black and white. Boards, $1.25.

A book of jolly good times for the very little people—quite enough to last them the whole year round.

THE LOTHROP MAGAZINES

Will offer unusual attractions for the forthcoming year of 1891. Among the attractions of WIDE-AWAKE will be four delightful serials.

Five Little Peppers Grown Up. By Margaret Sydney. Half a million people know all about the "Five Little Peppers and How They Grew." Fully a million will want to know how the Peppers "turned out."

On Time. A brilliant, realistic and exhilarating railroad story, by Kirk Munroe.

Marietta's Good Times. A really remarkable story of a real Americo-Italian girl, by Marietta Ambrosi.

Miss Matilda Archambeau Van Dorn. By Elizabeth Cumings. A sparkling girls' story, full of entertaining people, ancestors, dolls and dogs.

OUR GOVERNMENT, a series of articles by Hon. John D. Long, will have a special value.

Besides short stories and practical papers, sketches, pictures, poetry and information by Mrs. John A. Logan, Susan Coolidge, Agnes Repplier, Elbridge S. Brooks, Harriet Prescott Spofford and other famous authors.

The younger magazines, "The Pansy," "Our Little Men and Women" and "Babyland" will also have a brilliant array of stories, poems and pictures, to delight their numerous subscribers.

Send for prospectuses and new catalogue.

D. LOTHROP COMPANY, Publishers, Boston.

The undersigned, having purchased a number of plates with sheet stock of the Executors of the Robert Carter & Brother's Estate, will at once reissue such works in new style of bindings, and in most cases at reduced prices.

A full list of these new works to be added to our catalogue will be issued shortly. Among these may be mentioned the "Autobiography of John G. Paton," 2 vols.; the "Works of Rev. Richard Newton" and "Rev. W. W. Newton;" Secker's "Nonsuch Professor;" "Spurgeon's Sermon Notes," 4 vols.; and by the same author, "Feathers for Arrows," "Gleaning Among the Sheaves," "The Golden Alphabet," "All of Grace," and "Spurgeon's Gems."

In addition to these, the list will include many of the choicest works of Macduff, Guthrie, Bonar; also D'Aubigne's "Reformation", 5 vols., Kitto's "Bible Illustrations", 8 vols., and a number of juveniles.

Perhaps our most important purchase was the plates of the five-volume, large quarto edition of Matthew Henry's Commentary, but as we have an entirely new edition in press (ready Oct. 15) in large type, 6 vols., which will without doubt supersede all others except the very cheap edition, it is doubtful if we shall use these plates for the present at least. The cheap edition referred to (3 vols., issued by Messrs. Carters at $8.00) we also control. The list price will probably be advanced to $10.00 per set, but with long discounts will be supplied to the trade at a lower net price than heretofore.

A full price-list will be sent upon application. Early orders solicited.

(IN PRESS.)

THE LIGHT OF THE WORLD.

By EDWIN ARNOLD,
(Author of the "Light of Asia.")

In this poem, Jesus Christ is the "Light of the World," as Buddha is the "Light of Asia." About 250 pages. 12mo, cloth, $1.50.

This authorized edition will be printed direct from manuscript, now en route from Japan. The work will appear in America before it is issued in England. Ready this month. Mr. Arnold regards this as his greatest work.

SAMANTHA AMONG THE BRETHREN.

A NEW STORY.

By JOSIAH ALLEN'S WIFE.

This is Miss Holley's latest and very best book; indeed it makes one "smile through tears." Says a reader: "Samantha fairly outdoes herself." Says BISHOP NEWMAN: "It is irresistibly humorous and truthful; the best of all that has come from her pen." Copiously and characteristically illustrated by over 125 pictures. 12mo, cloth, $2.50.

Education in Heroism, or our Hero Stories, being 12 Biographies of 12 AMERICAN REFORMERS.

(Editor of the Series of 12 American Biographies.)

In an appendix is given in full three of Mr. Phillips' masterpieces of eloquence, viz., the famous lectures on The Lost Arts, the lecture on Daniel O'Connell and the Phi Beta Kappa Oration at Harvard. 591 pages, 12mo, cloth, $1.50.

Bishop Potter: "An overmastering temptation to turn aside from everything else until I have finished it."

Jno. Wanamaker, P. M. General: "Am reading with very great satisfaction."

Hon. Abram S. Hewitt: "Has the charm of romance. . . . I do not know of any novel which has given me so much pleasure for many years. . . . I shall recommend all my friends to read the book."

Gen. O. O. Howard: "Delights my heart."

U. S. Senator Frye: "It is profoundly interesting."

Jno. G. Whittier: "Sincerely thank thee for thy excellent biography."

Geo. Wm. Curtis: "Have read life of Phillips with the deepest sympathy."

HORACE GREELEY, The Editor.

By FRANCIS NICOLL ZABRISKIE.

In this biography the author has produced a work of singular fascination. 398 pages, 12mo, cloth, $1.50.

"Whoever reads the book will not regret it as time misspent. . . . Whoever misses reading it and the knowledge which it conveys of an original and extraordinary character, will suffer loss."—The Princeton Press.

"A book which the young, especially the boys, will surely read with interest and profit."—The Chicago Post.

"So vividly portrayed as to give us a striking picture of the man."—The Brooklyn Citizen.

"A very fresh, readable account of the life of this eccentric and remarkable man."—The St. Louis Central Baptist.

"The poor boy sitting with brothers and sisters around one milk pan on the floor, each dipping out his porridge with his own spoon . . . thrown on the world with only his hands, his head and his trade at twenty: entering New York with a coarse shirt, short pants, rough shoes, no stockings, with a pack on his shoulder and ten dollars in his pocket, and founding the mighty N. Y. Tribune! are so portrayed as to give us a striking picture of the man."—The Richmond (Va.) Christian Advocate.

NOTES IN SEASON.

WORTHINGTON COMPANY have just ready in their International Library Paul Heyse's "Children of the World."

HENRY ALTEMUS (The Philadelphia Bible Warehouse) has in preparation Jerome K. Jerome's new book, "Told After Supper."

MACMILLAN & Co. will publish on the 15th F. Marion Crawford's latest novel, "A Cigarette-Maker's Romance." They will also publish immediately Kipling's "The Book of the Forty-Five Mornings" and "Plain Tales from the Hills;" also, Gladstone's new book, "Landmarks of Homeric Studies."

MR. JOHN BARTLETT, 165 Brattle St., Cambridge, formerly of the firm of Little, Brown & Co., and well known as the author of "Familiar Quotations" and "The Shakespeare Phrase-Book," has now ready for delivery "A New and Complete Concordance, or Verbal Index to the Words, Phrases and Passages in the Dramatic Works of Shakespeare." It is a quarto volume (9½ x 11½) of 1650 closely printed pages, in good clear type and printed on paper of extra quality. It is a valuable addition to Shakespeariana, and it will be an invaluable handbook for reference to students and writers, presenting as it does words and quotations by a most comprehensive and easy method.

HOUGHTON, MIFFLIN & Co. publish to-day "Sidney," Margaret Deland's new novel; the holiday edition of Nathaniel Hawthorne's "Our Old Home;" a dainty edition of Lowell's "The Vision of Sir Launfal;" Birthday Editions of Oliver Wendell Holmes' "The Professor at the Breakfast Table" and "The Poet at the Breakfast Table," each in two volumes; "The Inverted Torch," a memorial volume, by Edith M. Thomas; "Legends and Lyrics," a selection of Whittier's Poems, and "Pastorals, Lyrics and Sonnets," a selection of Wordsworth's poems, both in the White and Gold Series; a school edition of Horace E. Scudder's "Fables and Folk Stories;" and "Doctor Zay," a novel by Elizabeth Stuart Phelps, in the Riverside Paper Series.

ROBERTS BROTHERS will publish on the 18th "Our New England," the text of which is by Hamilton Wright Mable, and the illustrations photogravures from nature by A. W. Elson & Co., with remarques drawn by Frank T. Merrill; "The Day's Message," a dainty little volume of cheerful and helpful selections in prose and verse for every day in the year, chosen by Susan Coolidge, with a cover design by Mrs. Whitman; "Her Great Ambition," a story by Annie Richardson Earle; "The Drifting Island, or, slave hunters on the Congo," a sequel to "Kibboo Ganey," by Walter Wentworth, with illustrations by F. T. Merrill; and "In My Nursery," rhymes, chimes and jingles for children, by Laura E. Richards, author of "The Joyous Story of Toto," etc.

THE CASSELL PUBLISHING Co. will publish shortly "The Life, Letters and Friendships of Richard Monckton-Milnes, Lord Houghton," by T. Wemyss Reid, with portraits of Lord Houghton, who wrote more charming letters and had more distinguished friendships than almost any man of his time; "English Sanitary Institutions, reviewed in their course of development, and in some of their political and social relations," an exhaustive volume by Sir John Simon, the result of twenty-eight years' experience and of various official relations to the business of sanitary government, in which the author has avoided technicalities as far as possible; and a novel by Mrs. Burton Harrison, who has written almost perfect short stories, but has not yet tried so large a work as she has now undertaken in "Flower de Hundred," a story of a Virginian plantation, amusing, pathetic and historically correct, which it is said has been read by one of the best judges in the country, who has guaranteed it an immediate and lasting sale.

WEEKLY RECORD OF NEW PUBLICATIONS.*

The abbreviations are usually self-explanatory. c. after the date indicates that the book is copyrighted; if the copyright date differs from the imprint date, the year of copyright is added. Books of foreign origin of which the edition (annotated, illustrated, etc.) is entered as copyright, are marked c. ed.; translations, c. tr.; n. p. in place of price, indicates that the publisher makes no price, either net or retail, and quotes prices to the trade only upon application.

A colon after initial designates the most usual given name, as: A: Augustus; B: Benjamin; C: Charles; D: David; E: Edward; F: Frederic; G: George; H: Henry; I: Isaac; J: John; L: Louis; N: Nicholas; P: Peter; R: Richard; S: Samuel; T: Thomas; W: William.

Sizes are designated as follows: F. (folio: over 30 centimeters high); Q. 4to: under 30 cm.; O. (8vo: 25 cm.); D. (12mo: 20 cm.); S. (16mo: 17½ cm.); T. (24mo: 15 cm.); Tt. (32mo: 12½ cm.); Fe. (48mo: 10 cm.). Sq., obl. nar., designate square, oblong, narrow books of these heights.

Adams, H: History of the United States of America, v. 5 and 6; the first administration of James Madison, v. 1 and 2. N. Y., C: Scribner's Sons, 1890. c. 4+428; 4+488 p. D. cl., $4.

"The great value of these volumes consists in the new light which they throw upon the exciting years of Madison's administration, when the attempt was making to retrieve the blunders of Jefferson's terms of office and to adjust the relations of the young republic with the great powers then at war. . . . The gradual alienation from France, the efforts through Erskine to secure the repeal of the Orders in Council, the failure of the administration to secure relief from British oppression on the high seas, and from insolence and arrogance in the negotiations to that end, the war debates of the XIth Congress, the declaration of war, with the invasion of Canada, and the victories of the United States vessels in the naval battles—these stirring events are pictured by Mr. Adams with simplicity and power."

The Book Buyer. A mass of important and significant material drawn from many sources—from the ms. archives of the State and War Departments at Washington, diplomatic correspondence, personal letters, etc., form the basis of the work.

Adams, J: The doctrine of equity: a commentary on the law as administered by the court of chancery. 8th ed., by Robert Ralston. Phil., T. & J. W. Johnson & Co., 1890. c. 839 p. O. shp., $6.50.

Alabama. A compilation of the laws of Ala. (and other states having statutes similar to this) on administrators and executors, guardians and trustees, [etc.]; to which is added the jurisdiction of courts of probate and chancery in matters pertaining to the estates of decedents, [etc.]; by W. D. Atkinson. Montgomery, The Brown Printing Co., st. prs., 1890. c. 682 p. O. shp., $5.

Alger, Horatio, jr. The odds against him; or, Carl Crawford's experience. Phil., The Penn Pub. Co., 1890. c. 2-349 p. il. D. cl., $1.25.

A story for boys; the hero at sixteen is driven from home by a disagreeable stepmother, and goes into the world to seek his fortune.

American state reports. A brief digest to v. 7-12 of "American state reports;" with an index to the notes, and a table of cases reported in v. 1-12. San Francisco, Cal., Bancroft-Whitney Co., 1890. 1+174 p. D. cl., n. p.

Anglomaniacs (The). N. Y., Cassell Publishing Co., [1890.] c. 3+296 p. S. cl., $1.

As a serial in the Century, this story excited unusual interest. As a satire upon the fashionable American's worship of all things English, it is keen and pointed. The characters are a Mrs. Floyd-Curtis, one of the new rich of New York society, her beautiful daughter Lily, a Mrs. Clay—a New York girl who, having married an Englishman and having lost her money and husband, becomes a sort of adventuress—an ill-bred Countess and her worthless son, and a poor but highly-educated English professor. Lily's mother wants to sell her to the English Lord, but Lily makes a strong fight for liberty and her honest love for the professor.

Baker, M. N., ed. The manual of American water-works, comp. from special returns, 1889-90; cont. the history, details of construction, source and mode of water supply, pumping machinery, dams and reservoirs, filters, distribution, etc., of every water-works in the United States and Canada; also, directory of water-works officials, engineers and contractors. N. Y., Engineering News Pub. Co., Tribune Building, 1890. 840 p. il. 8°, cl., $3.

Bancroft, Hubert Howe. History of the Pacific States of North America. V. 33, Essays and miscellany. San Francisco, Cal., The History Co., 1890. c. 5+764 p. O. cl., $4.50; leath., $5.50; hf. cf., hf. rus. or hf. mor., $8; rus. mor. or tree cf., $10.

Contents. The early American chroniclers; The new civilization; Root-diggers and gold-diggers; Our treatment of the native races; History writing; Criticism; Work; Battre le fer sur l'enclume; Social analysis; Nation-making; Two sides of a vexed question; The jury system; Mongolianism in America; Money and monopoly; Literature of Central America; Literature of Colonial Mexico; Literature of Mexico during the present century; Early California literature; Plato revised.

Barnes, Annie Maria. Children of the Kalahari: a story of Africa. Phil., Presb. Bd. of Pub., [1890.] c. 352 p. il. D. cl., $1.15.

A story of Africa: chiefly occupied with the narrative of the journeyings of the family of a martyred missionary through the Kalahari desert of Africa. A great deal of information is given concerning the country and people, and the missionary work in Africa.

Barrett, Frank. Between life and death. N. Y., United States Book Co., [1890.] 2+292 p. D. (Lovell's international ser., no. 125.) cl., $1; pap., 50 c.

The heroine's fate hangs "between life and death" throughout the whole story. If she lives to be twenty-one she inherits a fortune; but if she dies before that age it goes to her stepfather. The wicked stepfather and his equally wicked wife plan a succession of plots to murder the poor girl, all of which are frustrated.

Bartholomew, J. G. New hand-map of Central Africa, showing the route and discoveries of Stanley's Emin Relief Expedition. N. Y., T: Nelson & Sons, 1890. 16 x 12 in., 15 c.

Bennett, Mary E. Asaph's ten thousand. Bost., Congregational S. S. and Pub. Soc., [1890.] c. 2-325 p. il. D. cl., $1.50.

This story describes the condition of affairs in a manufacturing town, where one man is the owner and sole director of a large business which he has built up himself. He owns the village as well as the mills, and his family of educated sons and daughters form the aristocracy of the place, in striking contrast to the mill-hands. Outsiders finally manage to stir up the hands to strike. The struggle is disastrous to both sides. Neither wins a victory, but both sides learn a lesson for the future.

Best things from best authors. V. 6, comprising nos. 16, 17 and 18 of "Best selections." Phil., The Penn Pub. Co., 1890. c. 200 p. D. cl., $1.50.

Bible. New Testament in the original Greek; the text rev. by Brooke Foss Westcott and Fennell.

- Carey, Rosa Nouchette. Lover or friend? N. Y., United States Book Co., [1890.] 2+487 p. D. (Lovell's international ser., no. 128.) cl., $1; pap., 50 c.
The scene is laid in England. Audrey Ross suddenly promises to marry Cyril Blake, one of the masters in her father's school. At this juncture an unforeseen event places Cyril at a social disadvantage; upon Audrey's action during a crises much depends, finally the question of "Lover or friend?" is answered in a most interesting and unexpected way.
- Champlin, J: Denison, jr., and Apthorp, W: F., eds. Cyclopedia of music and musicians. In 3 v., V. 3. N. Y., C: Scribner's Sons, 1890. il. and por. Q. cl., net, $25.

A few of the interesting subjects in this life of Dr. Chidlaw, for many years a missionary in this country and Great Britain are: Child life in Wales; Fifty-four years missionary of the American Sunday-School Union; Visits to Wales; Chaplain in the U. S. Army; Delegate of the U. S. Sanitary and Christian Commission; Trustee of Miami University; Commissioner of the Ohio Reform School for boys, with labors in prisons, infirmaries and homes for pauper children; Member of Board of Visitors to West Point.
- Chittenden, Rev. E. P. The pleroma: a poem of the Christ, in two books of seven cantos each, written in semi-dramatic form. N. Y., G: P. Putnam's Sons, 1890. 347 p. 12°, cl., $2.50.
- Clafin, Mrs. Mary B. Brampton sketches: old-time New England life. N. Y., T: Y. Crowell & Co., [1890.] c. 4-158 p. il. D. cl., $1.25.
These sketches stand out as a truthful record of a peculiarly interesting provincial town, said to be Hopkinton, where Mrs. Clafin's grandparents lived. The quaint ways of the natives and their picturesque dialect are admirably reproduced.
- Clafin, Mrs. Mary B. Real happenings. N. Y., T: Y. Crowell & Co., [1890.] c. 2-46 p. D. hf. cl., 30 c.
Five simple, unaffected stories from actual life; they are pleasantly told, and filled with a warm feeling of love and humanity.
- Coignet, Jean Roch. The narrative of Captain Coignet (soldier of the Empire) 1776-1850; ed. from the original ms. by Lorédon Larchey; from the French, by Mrs. M. Carey; [il. by J. Le Blant.] N. Y., T: Y. Crowell & Co., [1890.] c. tr. 8+318 p. O. hf. cf., $5; hf. leath., $2 50.
The record of the daily doings of a private soldier, who fought in many great campaigns under Napoleon. The style is marked by a quaint frankness and honest boastfulness that is very amusing; the writer is also shrewd and clever, his graphic portraiture making the Napoleonic days live again. Captain Coignet begins with his earliest youth, tells of his unhappy home, how in desperation he runs away, his love for horses and his skill in managing them, etc., etc.
- Colorado. Statutory citations and constructions, incl. all statutes cited or construed by the supreme and federal courts of the state as reported in 1 to 13 Colo., (incl. the 23d Pacific reporter,) federal decisions to the 40th federal reporter, and all Colo. cases in the U. Coppée, François. Disillusion; or, the story of Amédée's youth; tr. by E. P. Robins; il. by Emile Bayard. N. Y., G: Routledge & Sons, [1890.] c. tr. 3+363 p. D. pap., $1.50.

A translation, profusely illustrated, of Coppée's Toute une jeunesse, already published under the title of "Days of my youth." See notice, "Weekly Record," P. W., June 21, '89, [1960.]

Oraig, Hugh. Grand army picture-book, from April 12, 1861, to April 26, 1865. N. Y., G: Routledge & Sons, [1890.] no paging, il. obl. O. bds., $1.25.

Twenty-four full page pictures—the half of them being printed in colors—and numerous portraits, illustrate this succinct sketch of the chief events of the Civil War. It is not written down to young readers, though the language is simple enough for their comprehension.

Oranch, Christopher Pearse. The bird and the bell; with other poems. [New issue.] Bost., Houghton, Mifflin & Co., 1890. c. '75. 9+317+8 p. D. cl., $1.25.

De Quincey, T. Collected writings. New ed., by D: Masson. V. 10 and 11. Literary theory and criticism. N. Y., Macmillan & Co., 1890. 8+455 p.; 6+474 p. 12°, cl., ea., $1.25.

Douglass, Hester. The land where Jesus Christ lived. N. Y., T: Nelson & Sons, 1890. 303 p. 12°, cl., $1.

Drayton, H. S., M.D. Human magnetism, its nature, physiology and psychology; its uses as a remedial agent in moral and intellectual improvement, etc. N. Y., Fowler & Wells Co., 1889. c. 2-168 p. D. cl., 75 c.

A summary of principles and facts bearing upon the subject of magnetism.

Chapters on: Construction of sentences; choice of words; Spelling, abbreviations, underlining; Neatness; Paper, ink, pen; Size and shape of paper; Address and date, etc.

Eldgren, A. Hjalmar. A compendious French grammar in two independent parts, (introductory and advanced.) Bost., D. C. Heath & Co., 1890. c. '89. 78+293 p. D. (Heath's modern language ser.) hf. leath., $1.20.

"This grammar is prepared with special reference to the needs of our American schools and colleges. Its limits—for it purposely disavows all claims to completeness—are determined by the average time devoted to French in such institutions; and its method by practical as well as critical aims."—Preface.

Edwards, W. H. The butterflies of North America: 3d. ser., pt. 10, with 3 col. pl. and descriptive text: cont. Argynnis alceste; Argynnis adiante; Argynnis atossa; Satyrodes canthus. Bost., Houghton, Mifflin & Co., 1890. Q. cl., net, $2.25.

Fagan, W. L., comp. Southern war songs: camp-fire, patriotic and sentimental. N. Y., M. T. Richardson & Co., 84-86 Reade St., 1890. 389 p. il. 8°, cl., $3.50; full tky. mor., $6.

Fernow, Berthold. The Ohio valley in colonial days. Albany, N. Y., Joel Munsell's Sons, 1890. 4-299 p. O. (Munsell's historical ser., no. 17.) bds., $5.

The author goes into the history of the discovery of the Ohio; a hitherto unknown ms. which he offers makes a claim of discovery by Connecticut parties in 1659; the chapter on the cartography of the Ohio speaks, probably, of all maps which give even the slightest indication of the river; the history of the Indians, who hunted in the valley, is as exhaustive as it could be in a work not treating specially of the aborigines. The chapters about the troubles and wars between the English and French can give nothing new, except in letters and papers hitherto not known. Among these the documentary history of the Ohio Company, organized by Washington's brothers, is specially to be mentioned. A concise account is given of what the colonies on the seaboard did in the conquest of the Ohio Valley from the French and Indians.

Field, Eugene. A little book of profitable tales. N. Y., C: Scribner's Sons, 1890. c. '89. 5+286 p. D. cl., $1.25.

Quite a number of these tales have a Christmas motive; young people will appreciate them as much as old. There are besides some of the author's best humorous tales, as "Bill, the lokil editor," "The little yaller baby," "Dock Stebbins" and "The cyclopeedy," etc. The volume is beautifully printed, and bound in cadet blue and gold, uniform with "A little book of western verse."

Field, Eugene. A little book of western verse. N. Y., C: Scribner's Sons, 1890. c. '89. 8+202 p. D. cl., $1.25.

A collection of verses both mirthful and pathetic, in a dainty cover of cadet blue. Many are dialect verses of the west in Bret Harte's style, others have a New England flavor, and there are translations from Béranger and Horace. The New York Tribune says: "We never catch Mr. Field in a lame measure or in an awkward turn. He evidently composes with freedom, and there is thought as well as delicate fancy in his lullabies and pretty minor poems."

In this dainty little brochure we meet again with that piquant and sensible little dressmaker, Miss Fitts. She talks in her earnest, practical and at the same time witty style about the savage that seems still to lurk in the nature of people claiming to be thoroughly civilized and leads husbands to be rude to their wives, brothers and sisters rude to each other in a thoughtless way that they themselves would not tolerate in strangers.

- Hutton, R. H. Cardinal Newman. Bost., Houghton, Mifflin & Co., 1890. 4+251 p. por. D. cl., $1.
"The whole of this little essay was written and in type, and most of it corrected for the press, before Cardinal Newman's death. I thought it better, considering the smallness of the space available for the treatment of so great a subject, to devote the main part of the book to the study of Dr. Newman's life before leaving the Anglican Church; in other words, to the course of thought which led him to the Church of Rome, and to compress the latter part of his career into a single long chapter."

- James, W. The principles of psychology. N. Y., H. Holt & Co., 1890. c. 2 v. 10+689; 6+704 p. O. (American science ser., advanced course.) cl., $6.
One of the fullest treatises on the subject yet published; it has in the main grown up in connection with the author's class-room instruction in psychology in Harvard University. Prof. James has kept close to the point of natural science throughout the book, rejecting both the associationist and the spiritualist theories, "and," he says, "in this strictly positivistic point of view consists the only feature of which I feel tempted to claim originality." The subjects discussed are: The scope of psychology; The functions of the brain; On some general conditions of brain activity; Habit; The automaton theory; The mind-stuff theory; Methods and snares of psychology; Relations of minds to other things; The stream of thought; The consciousness of self; Attention; Conception; Discrimination and comparison; Association; Perception of time; Memory; Sensation; Imagination; Perception of space; Perception of reality; Reasoning; Instinct; Will; The emotions; Hypnotism, etc.

Lee, Mrs. Frank. Knives and forks; or, dwellers in Meridien. Bost., Congregational S. S. and Pub. Soc., [1890.] c. 2-402 p. il. D. cl., $1.50.

The author contrasts two sets of characters, such as are usually to be found in a country town of the Middle States—the young people of the rich and cultured, and the young men and women who are from the poor and shiftless families. The task the writer sets herself is to bring these two antagonistic elements together, so that the influences for good may prevail. The interest centres mainly in Mart Conner, one of the roughest of the poorer set, but with some inherent noble qualities.

A tasteful reissue of this famous poem, which criticised with great freedom and discrimination many American authors of forty years ago. A fac-simile of the original rhymed title-page is given, and the portraits of the twenty-six authors, by Joseph Linden Smith, criticised, add an element of no small interest.

McCartha, C. L. The lost tribes of Israel; or, Europe and America in history and prophecy. Phil., printed by J. B. Lippincott Co., 1890. c. [For sale by the author at Greensboro, Ala.] 210 p. D. cl., $1.

A brief description is given of the characters of the twelve sons of Jacob. The author then looks over modern nations and decides from national characteristics from which tribe they must be descended. For example, the French are descendants of Reuben; Swedes and Danes of Zebulon; the Dutch of Issachar; Spaniards of Dan; Germans of Gad; English of Joseph; Russians of Asher, etc., etc. He thinks these tribes are now reuniting in the Republic of the United States.

Meredith, W. T. Not of her father's race. N. Y., Cassell Publishing Co., [1890.] c. 4+291 p. D. (Cassell's sunshine ser., no. 56.) cl., 75 c.; pap., 50 c.

Jennie Andersen was the child of a white father and a mulatto mother, and born out of wedlock. In Virginia, her home, though as white as her father, she was adjudged a negro, and grew up with negroes, and was educated with them. Her father comes into possession of a large sum of money, and sends Jennie north to finish her education. She grows so beautiful and attractive, that he acknowledges her as his daughter and introduces her to New York society. Her career here, the admiration she excites, and the effect her true story has upon those who know her, point a striking moral.

The story of a worldly young man who, falling ill in India, is cared for by a missionary's family, and becomes converted to a most unworldly Christian life. He afterwards returns to the great city of his home, and devotes himself to good works. He is joined by a younger sister, and the book describes the good work done by them on behalf of working-women and others.

Meyer, Conrad Ferdinand. The tempting of Pescara; from the German by Clara Bell, rev. and cor. in the U. S. N. Y., W. S. Gottsberger, 1890. c. tr. 2+184 p. S. pap., 25 c.

Italy is the scene, the sixteenth century the time. The opening incident is in the Castle of Milan, where the Chancellor Morone subjugates his sovereign Francesco Sforza, Duke of Milan, by arousing his fears for the safety of his Duchy. The price of Vittoria Colonna's loyalty to Charles V. of Naples was a mythical crown. Pescara her husband was to fall through her; upon this the interest depends. An idea is given of the workings of the political factions of the time, and many famous personages are introduced.

Little, Brown & Co., 1890. c. 4 + 194 p. il. O. cl., $1.75.

Five pretty stories about girls and for girls. "May Bartlett's stepmother," the opening story and the longest one, reverses the popular belief in stepmothers—May finding in hers her dearest friend; "Ju-Ju's Christmas party," "A New Year's call," "Jenny's lark" and "Sally Green's clam-bake party," are the other stories.

Plympton, A. G. Dear daughter Dorothy; il. by the author. Bost., Roberts Bros., 1890. c. 3-190 p. il. D. cl., $1.

Dorothy loses her mother when a baby, and grows up in intimate relationship with her young father. The father earns a small salary as a book-keeper, but occupies his spare hours in writing poems, novels, etc., which do not find a publisher. Father and daughter live at Mrs. Kipp's boarding-house, their quaint ways and quaint surroundings making many pretty pictures. "Dorothy" is a charming figure throughout, her tender nature and wise little head proving of real help to her father through some dark days.

The outline of the life and musical career of one of the greatest living pianists and composers, born in Russia, 1829. The story was taken down from his own lips, last year, by a stenographer. Many graphic anecdotes and amusing episodes are embraced in the narrative. A supplement gives some critical estimates of Rubenstein's genius, taken from Russian journals.

Classified first under large groups, as Natural sciences, Useful arts, Fine arts, Literature, Historical fiction, History, Travels, Biography, etc.; these are subdivided under more special headings. History, Historical fiction, and Travels being grouped under countries, Natural sciences under the special sciences, etc. Lists of periodical literature on kindred subjects follow each division, with references to periodicals in which published. The letters a, b, c in parentheses are attached to most of the titles to show, in a general way, to what class of young readers they are best adapted. The books in Miss Hewins' "Books for the young" are included by permission. Annotations follow the titles in almost all cases, explaining clearly the nature and aim of the work.

Thomas, Annie, [now Mrs. Pender Cudlip.] The Shuane square scandal, and other stories. N. Y., United States Book Co., [1890.] c. 2+337 p. D. (Lovell's international ser., no. 117.) cl., $1, pap., 50 c.

Thornton, J. Primer of book-keeping. N. Y., Macmillan & Co., 1890. 11+140 p. 16*, cl., 35 c.

Tolstol, Count Lyof N. Count Tolstol's gospel stories; from the Russian, by Nathan Haskell Dole. N. Y., T. Y. Crowell & Co., [1890.] c. 4+243 p. D. cl., $1.25.

Sixteen short sketches of Russian life. Simply written and inspired generally by some pregnant text of Scripture. The translator says in his brief preface: "Nowhere has Count Tolstol's genius as a writer been more wonderfully displayed than in his tracts for the people. Written in an artless style, they are vivid, dramatic, touching. Their very simplicity adds to their charm." Among them is that exquisite little legend, "Where love is, there God is also," which in booklet form has had such a wide circulation.

Tolstol, Count Lyof N. Labor: the divine command; made known, augmented and ed. by Count Tolstol; tr. by Mary Cruger. Chic., Laird & Lee, 1890. 2-160 p. por. D. (Pastime ser., no. 44.) pap., 25 c.

"Labor" is the work of Count Lyof Tolstol and of the peasant Timothy Bondareff. But it is not, properly speaking, a collaboration. The book is composed of two different studies, one by Tolstol entitled "The work and theory of Bondareff," which serves as introduction to the other, which is by Bondareff, and is entitled "Labor, by the peasant Bondareff." Whether Bondareff is a real or mythical figure is difficult to decide. Tolstol introduces him as a peasant who at the age of sixty-five composed an essay based on his reading of the Bible, in which he sought to prove that salvation after death could only be found through manual labor in this world. It is said his book was suppressed by the Russian Government.

Tovey, Duncan C., ed. Gray and his friends: letters and relics, in great part hitherto unpublished. N. Y., Macmillan & Co., 1890. 16+312 p. 12*, cl., $2.

Twilight stories in large type for little readers. N. Y., G. Routledge & Sons, [1890.] no paging, il. O. bds., 75 c.

Every other page a picture: printed in type three-eighths of an inch high.

Van Dyke, H. J., D.D. The church: her ministry and sacraments: lectures delivered on the L. P. Stone foundation at Princeton Theological Seminary in 1890. N. Y., A. D. F. Randolph & Co., [1890.] c. 8+265 p. O. cl., $1.50.

The subjects are: The holy Catholic Church; The kingdom of Christ; The unity of the visible church; The church membership of infants; Ordination of the ministry; The Lord's supper; The administration of the sacraments.

Ver-Planck, Mrs. J. Campbell. The wonder-light, and other tales: true philosophy for children. N. Y., The Path, 132 Nassau St., 1890. c. 4+81 p. D. cl., 50 c.

Tales for children, in which an attempt is made to set forth the doctrines and teachings of theosophy.

Vinoent, Marvin R., D.D. Word studies in the New Testament. V. 3, The epistles of Paul: Romans, Corinthians, Ephesians, Philippians, Colossians, Philemon. N. Y., C. Scribner's Sons, 1890. c. 40+564 p. O. cl., $4.

The author's plan of explaining for the benefit of English readers the meaning of all the significant Greek words, and of tracing their history, is continued. An introduction gives an account of the several epistles treated in the present volume. A list of authors and editions is given, in addition to those cited in vols. 1 and 2.

Warren, D. M. Warren's new physical geography; by W. H. Brewer. Phil., Cowperthwait & Co., [1890.] c. 144 p. il. and map, F. cl., $1.50.

Essentially a new book prepared by Prof. W. H. Brewer, of Yale Univ., in which the facts and phenomena of the physical world are presented in the light of recent scientific investigations. The same methods of treatment are employed as have for more than thirty years maintained the popularity of the original treatise.

Webster, Noah. Webster's international dictionary of the English language: being the authentic edition of Webster's unabridged dictionary, comprising the issues of 1864, 1879 and 1884; thoroughly rev. and enl. under the supervision of Noah Porter, D.D.; with a voluminous appendix. Springfield, Mass., G. & C. Merriam & Co., 1890. r. '64, '90. 98+2011+3 p. il. F. shp., $10; hf. tky. or hf. rus., $12.50; full rus., $15; 2 v., shp., $12. 3 v., cl., $10.

For ten years a large corps of scholars have been at work at the "Unabridged," re-editing it line by line, enriching it by new matter, eliminating old material and correcting errors, the technical subjects have been trusted to eminent specialists, who have brought them in line with the more recent discoveries. The number of illustrations has been increased to nearly 4000, and about two thirds of them are entirely new. To allow for the new material the page has been slightly enlarged and more pages added. The vocabularies, tables, etc., in the appendix of the former editions have been perfected and brought fully up to date. In its general aim and scope, and in its ground-plan of construction, the present edition does not greatly vary from its predecessors. A valuable new article has been added on "Indo-Germanic roots in English," by August Fick. "The guide to pronunciation" shows in its synopsis of words differently pronounced by different orthoëpists, the substitution of the more recent authorities for the old ones, proving that the present pronunciation is a digest of the researches of the philologists of the world.

Weidner, Revere Franklin. Studies in the book: second series; cont. studies on I. Thes., II. Thes., Gal., I. Cor., II. Cor. and Romans. N. Y. and Chic., Fleming H. Revell, 1890. 12°, cl., $1.

Wesselhoeft, Lily F. The winds, the woods and the wanderer: a fable for children. Bost., Roberts Bros., 1890. c. 2-298 p. il. D. cl., $1.25.

The author has aimed to depict an artistic temperament that is misunderstood by the practical natures by which it is surrounded. Edmund Merton's troubles all come from his love of drawing pictures. To make him practical his uncle sends him to work on a farm. Edmund runs away from the farmer, ships on a sailing vessel, is almost lost at sea, but finally comes to land. In the course of his wanderings he meets an Indian boy with the same artistic temperament as himself, and a strong sympathy grows up between them. The forest trees talk together, as did the birds and animals in the author's other books.

Whitney, Mrs. A. D. T. Ascutney street: a neighborhood story. Bost., Houghton, Mifflin & Co., 1890. c. 2+259 p. D. cl., $1.50.

The lesson Mrs. Whitney teaches in this bright story is "that reality, sincerity, unselfishness and noble aspiration make life not only worth living, but infinitely more sane and beautiful than low aims and pretence can make it." A pretentious little street in a New England town is the scene. The dwellers in the pretentious little houses in Ascutney Street are the characters. The bright dialogue, the author's keen wit and insight are the chief attractions in a delightful story.

Wide-awake stories for the young. N. Y., G: Routledge & Sons, [1890.] no paging, il. O. bds., 75 c.

Wiggin, Kate Douglas. A summer in a cañon. New cheaper ed. Bost., Houghton, Mifflin & Co., 1890. il. 16°, $1.25.

Williams, Mrs. M. C. Won on the homestretch: a novel. N. Y., Street & Smith, [1890.] c. 2-236 p. D. (Select ser., no. 60.) pap., 25 c.

Williams, Montagu. Leaves of a life: reminiscences. 16th thousand. N. Y., Macmillan & Co., 1890. 374 p. 12°, pap., 75 c.

Woodberry, G. E. Studies in letters and life. Bost., Houghton, Mifflin & Co., 1890. c. 4+296 p. D. cl., $1.25.

Essays reprinted from the Atlantic Monthly and The Nation. Their subjects are: Landor; Crabbe; On the promise of Keats; Illustrations of idealism; Remarks on Shelley; Some actors' criticisms on Othello, Iago and Shylock; Sir George Beaumont, Coleridge and Wordsworth; Three men of piety—Bunyan, Cowper, Channing; Darwin's life; Byron's Centenary; Browning's death.

Wood's (W. & Co.) medical and surgical monographs: consisting of original treatises and reproductions in English of books and monographs selected from the latest literature of foreign countries. V. 7, no. 3. N. Y., W: Wood & Co., 1890. c. 493-799+10 p. il. O. pap., subs., $1.

Contents: Insomnia and its therapeutics, by A. W. Macfarlane, M D.; Index to v. 7.

Woolfall, F. Hartley, ed. The international reciter: cont. over 140 poetical selections from the English poets, for the home, platform and school: with biog. sketches of the authors. N. Y., Woolfall, Clark & Zugalla, 1890. Pt. 1, 144 p. 4°, cl., 50 c.; pap., 25 c.

Wolff, Julius. The robber count: a story of the Hartz country; from the 23d German ed., by W. H: Winslow and Elizabeth R. Winslow. N. Y., T: Y. Crowell & Co., 1890. c. tr. 2+326 p. D. cl., $1.50.

The scene is in that beautiful and picturesque region of the Hartz Mountains dominated by the Brocken. The time is during the imprisonment of Pope John XXII. at Avignon, and the motive lies in the great struggle between the gallant and noble Albrecht von Regenstein, known by his enemies as "the Robber Count," and the ambitious Bishop of Halberstadt for supremacy in the Hartz country. It is a story full of poetry, charm and adventure.

Young, Rev. L. F. Studies in Bible and church history and doctrines: prepared for the use of Epworth leagues; with an introd., by J. F. Marlay, D.D. Cin., O., Printed for the author, Western Methodist Book Concern, 1890. c. 96 p. por. S. cl., 40 c.

In the form of a catechism this little book gives instruction in Bible study, and in the history of Methodism, defining the doctrines of the Methodist Church and avoiding speculative questions entirely. The book is the outgrowth of successful work among young people. It is recommended as a manual worthy to take its place in the Epworth League reading course.

Zickel's illustrirter deutsch-amerikanischer Familien Kalender, 1891. N. Y., S. Zickel, 129 Duane St., 1890. 64 p. 4°, pap., 25 c.

Zoe, by the author of "Miss Toosey's mission." Bost., Roberts Bros., 1890. 2-181 p. D. cl., 60 c.

The story opens in Dawnside church, at a baptism; the clergyman's request for the infant's name leads to confusion, and forecast's a mystery in the young heroine's life. The interest of the story is centred in the discovering of Zoe's identity, although the romantic incident which led to her odd naming has a special charm and romance, and the reconciliation of Mr. Robins and his daughter supplies a pathetic element that is present in all the previous books by this author.

Zola, Emile. Renée, (La curée); from the French by J: Stirling. [New cheaper ed.] Phil., T. B. Peterson & Bros., [1890.] c. '87. 23-298 p. S. pap., 25 c.

BUSINESS NOTES.

ARKANSAS CITY, KAN.—J. E. Hawkins has gone out of the book business.

ATCHINSON, KAN.—Johnson Bros., booksellers, have dissolved partnership.

CHICAGO, ILL.—Webster's Dictionary Publishing Company has been incorporated at Chicago, with a capital stock of $100,000, by R. S. Peale and others.

DARLINGTON, S. C.—R. L. Dargan & Co. have bought out the Darlington bookstore, and will put in a new and complete stock of goods in the stationery line.

EAST JORDAN, MICH.—A. Heston & Co., booksellers, have dissolved partnership.

GLENN'S FERRY, IDAHO.—It is reported that J. Fredricks intends to quit the book and stationery business.

MUSCATINE, IA.—Eyrich & Eagle, booksellers and stationers, have dissolved partnership.

SAULT STE. MARIE, MICH.—Grosse & Pink have opened a Catholic bookstore in the Wheeler block, on Portage Avenue, where they will carry a full stock of stationery, chromos, etc.

WELLINGTON, KAN.—Merrill & Campbell, proprietors of the City Bookstore, have purchased the Share Bookstore, and will consolidate it with their stock. By this consolidation one of the longest established stores passes out of existence, and with this addition to their stock Merrill & Campbell have one of the best retail stores in the State.

WHITEHALL, MICH.—The book and stationery store belonging to H. B. Lauterburg was damaged by fire September 22.

PERSONAL NOTES.

JOSEPH HADLEY, formerly with Charles Scribner's Sons, has recently entered the employ of the Lovells.

A. D. HURD, formerly of Cupples & Hurd, is now connected with the manufacturing department of the United States Book Co.

JOHN HOVENDON, late with the Orange Judd Co., has associated himself with the Lovells, and is in charge of their branch in Lafayette Place.

DAVID S. KNOX has severed his connection with the book trade, and now represents the Equitable Life Assurance Society of 287 Broadway, New York City.

THE T. VOLUME.—"Does your cyclopedy tell anything about the toothache?" "I think so, mum; it touches on all useful information. We haven't published the T volume yet." "Well, you can put me down for a T volume, an' if it goes ahead of our almanick on toothache cures, I'll take the whole set."—Harper's Weekly.

The Publishers' Weekly.

FOUNDED BY F. LEYFOLDT.

OCTOBER 12, 1890.

The editor does not hold himself responsible for the views expressed in contributed articles or communications.

All matter, whether for the reading matter columns or our advertising pages, should reach this office not later than Wednesday noon, to insure insertion in the same week's issue.

In case of business changes, notification or card should be immediately sent to this office for entry under "Business Notes." New catalogues issued will also be mentioned when forwarded.

Publishers are requested to furnish title-page proofs and advance information of books forthcoming, both for entry in the lists and for descriptive mention. An early copy of each book published should be forwarded, to insure correctness in the final entry.

"Every man is a debtor to his profession, from the which, as men do of course seek to receive countenance and profit, so ought they of duty to endeavor themselves by way of amends to be a help therunto."—LORD BACON.

THE RESPONSIBILITY OF A BOOK-SELLER.

We wonder to how many in the book trade it has ever occurred that their business is one of great responsibility, and that they may, indeed, be agents for evil as well as good! A druggist, the world over, is not allowed to sell poisonous drugs to children, and even when he sells them to grown people, he is compelled in many countries to take certain precautions, so that no harm may arise. The bookseller, on the other hand, is subjected to no restriction, to no surveillance, and need render no account. He may sell the most pestiferous trash, poisoning the minds and arousing the passions of youth, without let or hindrance, excepting, possibly, when some agent of a society for the suppression of vice feels obliged to earn his salary, or somebody else is in need of a boom to his reputation. He may every day sell with impunity police gazettes and other sheets familiarizing readers with every kind of vice and crime, hardening the feelings and corroding the conscience, until crime and wickedness become so familiar that indulgence in one and perpetration of the other almost become matters of course. While we do not expect, nor even wish, booksellers to band themselves together as an Association for the Sale of Godly Books, we hope that the time will come when members of the book trade, especially those connected with the periodical part of it, will positively refuse to sell, or keep in their stores, such printed matter as common sense tells them is dangerous. They may lose in the beginning by such a course, but only to benefit in the end, besides having the satisfaction of knowing that they are in some degree helping to elevate the standard of morality among their fellow creatures. If booksellers would but consider the greatness of their mission, they would see that they wield an enormous power. It may be a poor trade; it may yield but a scanty return for the time and labor expended; it may be that those who ought to encourage honest, respectable members, do not; but the consciousness that they are promoting the cause of sound morality will in itself be no small reward.

At the opening session of the International Literary Congress, which met this week in London, the permanent Secretary, in making his report on the prospects of international copyright in America, attributed the defeat of the Breckinridge-Chace bill to "the prevailing unquenchable antagonism to England," "the antagonism at home between the Eastern and Western States," and "the unwillingness to pay for what is not ours, but which it is in our power to seize without paying for." The Secretary evidently was carried away by righteous indignation, and in that condition lost sight of the exact facts. As to the "prevailing unquenchable antagonism to England" and that "at home between the Eastern and Western States," we doubt whether that feeling existed anywhere but in the active imagination of Mr. Lemina. On the other hand, it was the general opinion of the press at the time the measure was rejected in the House of Representatives that it failed not because Americans are unwilling to pay for what they get, but because their representatives in Congress, with the timidity characteristic of the average statesman, so misjudged them as to believe that they preferred to buy stolen books for a song rather than pay a fair price for books honestly come by. We firmly believe that this blot will not rest upon the reputation of the American people much longer, and that possibly at its next meeting the International Literary Congress may be able to congratulate its American co-workers upon the success of their labors.

THE BRITANNICA COPYRIGHT LITIGATION.

In the suit of Charles Scribner et al. vs. the Henry G. Allen Company, involving the copyright of certain material contained in the "Encyclopedia Britannica," Judge Lacombe, in the Circuit Court of the United States for the Southern District of New York, on the 6th inst., made an order denying the motion to compel the plaintiffs to amend their bill of complaint so as to make it more definite and certain. The Judge furthermore directs the defendants to plead, answer or demur to the complaint within five days. In the similar suit in which James T. Black et al. are the complainants, a like decision was handed down.

SALE OF ROBERT CARTER & BROTHERS' PLATES.

WE present herewith, in alphabetical order, a list of the plates disposed of at the executor's sale (at Bangs & Co.'s, September 23,) of the stock of plates and books formerly published by Robert Carter & Bros., together with the names and addresses of the parties that purchased them. In almost every case the firm that bought the plates bld in the books (bound and in sheets) already printed from them that remained in stock at the time of the sale, so that booksellers in need of supplies of any of the books sold may safely address the new owners. A list of the books not sold is also given. These will be retained by the estate of Robert Carter & Bros., to be disposed of later.

INTERNATIONAL LITERARY CONGRESS.

THE International Literary Congress met in London, October 7. Jules Lemina, the permanent Secretary, presented a rather doleful report on copyright in America, regretting the defeat of the international copyright bill last May. He proposed that the Congress send its thanks to all in America who had defended the good cause.

Count Keratry, speaking from experience, considered Mr. Lemina's report too gloomy, and thought that a successful issue might be expected far sooner than the report indicated. It had been easy hitherto, he said, under the rules of the House of Representatives, for a few active opponents to prevent a copyright bill from arriving at the stage of discussion, but the recent accession to power of Mr. Reed, a great friend of the copyright association, would render such tactics more difficult. Secretary Blaine, President Harrison, ex-President Cleveland and other prominent Americans have favored the bill, which would have been passed if all the absentees had voted. A fresh bill, he said, would be discussed in December, and this bill, he declared, would pass.

The Secretary's proposal was adopted.

During the second day's session M. Chaumat presented a resolution declaring that literary articles in newspapers and magazines should be regarded as the property of the writer, while news and other paragraphs should be open for reproduction. Count Keratry introduced a resolution thanking the American Copyright League for its efforts to promote international copyright. Both were adopted by a unanimous vote.

CONFERENCE OF THE NEWSDEALERS.

ON the 7th inst. about eighty delegates from eight States assembled in the hall of the Ancient Order of United Workmen at 510 Sixth Ave., N. Y. James G. McMurray was in the chair. The discussion largely turned on the subject of devising means whereby the power of the American News Company could be broken. The debate ended in the adoption of a resolution providing for the appointment of a committee of three, whose duty it should be to organize a stock company to compete with the American News Company, the stock to be offered to newsdealers for six months. If by that time sufficient money had not been subscribed, outside capital should be invited to invest. The committee consists of President McMurray, P. J. Henzel, of Albany, and editor Daly, of the Newsman, who offered the resolution.

A resolution offered by E. J. Nieuwlander, of New York, instructing the Executive Committee to ask the Postmaster-General to establish a system in connection with the mails whereby newsdealers throughout the country could be supplied with their newspapers, books, and periodicals at the lowest possible rates, was also adopted. Editor Daly was appointed as the representative of the Association to appear before the Committee on Post-Offices and Post-Roads on matters affecting the interests of the newsdealers.

The following officers were then elected: President, James G. McMurray; Vice-Presidents, C. B. Swift, Philadelphia, and Miss E. Denroche, Friendship, N. Y.; Secretaries, John L. Butman, Lincoln, R. I., B. F. Gordon, New York, and J. M. Shawcross, Providence, R. I.; Treasurer, John R. Suter, Brooklyn; Executive Committee, P. J. Henzel, Albany, D. E. Sullivan, Providence, R. I., J. A. Roys, Detroit, Mich., P. J. McGrath, Brooklyn, and E. C. Rahne, Philadelphia.

WESTERN PUBLISHERS ON THE NEW TARIFF.

A SPECIAL despatch to the New York Evening Post, dated Chicago, October 7, says: "The book-publishing interest of this city, which represents an invested capital of many millions of dollars, is appalled at the prospect of the trade in the light of the new Tariff Bill. Outside of paper and type, everything entering into the manufacture of books has been materially advanced. The duty on Dutch metal, not one pound of which is made in this country, and which cannot consequently be called a protected industry, has been doubled, and consequently its price has advanced from 75 cents to $1.50 per pack. A single bookbinding firm, which some time ago accepted a contract based upon the old figures, and which calls for the consumption of 100 packs of this metal per day for the next three months, finds itself involved in a loss upon its contract figures of $75 a day for this period upon this item alone. The President of one of the largest subscription-book publishing-houses in the city states that upon a careful figuring of the advanced tariff rates, as applied to his total business for the year ending September 30, the bill will increase his expenses by a minimum of $25,000 during the coming year. On the other hand, owing to the competition in the publishing trade, it will be impossible, he says, to add even 1 per cent. to the price of the books issued by the house. The firm must either stand the entire loss or seek to recoup itself in some proportion by reducing salaries and commissions."

AUTHORS SEEKING NEW MARKETS.

From the Commercial Advertiser.

A FEELING of restlessness has taken hold of our famous fiction writers, and not a few of them will be found browsing this winter in entirely new literary pastures. Frank Stockton, for example, tears asunder from the Century, and his next serial story will appear in the Atlantic Monthly. The Atlantic, if it gains Stockton, loses Charles Egbert Craddock, since that rather erratic little woman has sold her next novel to Harper's. Then, Harper's will lose Howells' next long novel, which has been bought by a syndicate of newspapers. Scribner's, which generally has the first "call" on Robert Louis Stevenson's work, does not get the novelist's "South Sea Letters," the exclusive right to these having been bought by the New York Sun for $10,000. Sarah Orne Jewett makes her debut this winter to a new constituency of readers in the Ladies' Home Journal, which periodical has also bought Mrs. A. D. T. Whitney's next novel. And thus the order for "all change" has seemed to go along the literary line.

The book publishers, especially those houses which do not issue a magazine, are not very much pleased at the growing tendency of fiction writers to give first publication to their novels in serial form. It is exceedingly rare nowadays to see a novel from a well-known pen appear first in book form. The reason is that the author is realizing more and more the double revenue and larger reputation to be had from double publication. Good novel-writers, who can add a famous name to a good piece of work, are undoubtedly scarce, and with the keen competition among magazines, the prices have increased. Whether serial publication helps or injures the sale of a book is an open question. Publishers differ on this point, and in its discussion the author naturally takes no part. If his work be popular he can dictate to the publisher, and the latter must bow or lose the novel. The time has passed for referring to the "poor author;" it is the publisher who will deserve that appellation more in the near future. The shoe is, indeed, already pinching on the other foot.

CLERICAL CONSISTENCY.—First Deacon: The minister preached a fiery sermon against novel-reading last Sunday. I tell you it must have had an effect upon the young ladies of the congregation who read fiction. Second Deacon: Is that so? From where did he take his text? First Deacon: Oh, from one of the New Testament parables, I believe.—Puck.

THE WORLD'S FAIR.

THE WORLD'S FAIR COMMITTEE have completed their system of classification and from it the architect will at once commence to draw plans for the buildings for which the system provides. It provides for twelve departments, which are to be cut into divisions. These departments are:

A—Agriculture, farm machinery and appliances, forestry and forest products.

B—Viticulture, horticulture and floriculture.

C—Live stock, domestic and wild animals.

D—Fish, fisheries, fish products and apparatus for fishing.

E—Mining, mining and metallurgy.

F—Machinery.

G—Transportation and intercommunication.

H—Electricity and electrical appliances (electrical exhibits will also be found in other departments of the Exposition).

I—Manufactures.

K—Fine arts: pictorial, plastic and decorative.

L—Music, education, literature, engineering, public works, sociology.

M—The progress of human labor and invention.

FOREIGN BOOKS ON THE FREE LIST.

It may be expected that books printed in foreign languages will hereafter be sold much cheaper than heretofore, as the duty has been taken from all books printed in other than the English language. The clauses of the tariff act which will interest booksellers and readers of foreign literature are the following under the free list clauses of the bill:

512. Books, engravings, photographs, bound or unbound, etchings, maps and charts, which shall have been printed and bound, or manufactured more than twenty years at the date of importation.

513. Books and pamphlets printed exclusively in languages other than English, also books and music, in raised print, used exclusively by the blind.

514. Books, engravings, photographs, etchings, bound or unbound, maps and charts imported by authority, or for the use of the United States, or for the use of the Library of Congress.

515. Books, maps, lithographic prints and charts, especially imported, not more than two copies in any one invoice, in good faith, for the use of any society incorporated or established for educational, philosophical, literary or religious purposes, or for the encouragement of the fine arts (246), or by any college, academy, school or seminary of learning in the United States, in its own behalf or in behalf of any of its professors or teachers, subject to such regulations as the Secretary of the Treasury shall prescribe.

516. Books or libraries, or parts of libraries, and other household effects of persons or families from foreign countries, if actually used abroad by them not less than one year, and not intended for any other person or persons, nor for sale.

OBITUARY NOTES.

THE REV. DR. GEORGE BARRELL CHEEVER died at Englewood, N. J., Oct. 1. He was born at Hallowell, Me., April 17, 1807. He was a classmate at Bowdoin College with Longfellow, Hawthorne and Jonathan Cilley. He was prominent in temperance reform and in the anti-slavery movement. From 1839 to 1870, when he retired from the ministry, he filled the pulpits of the Allen Street Presbyterian Church and the Church of the Puritans in New York City. Part of this time he was also the principal editor of the New York Evangelist. His writings were largely controversial and on religious subjects.

ALPHONSE KARR, a celebrated and prolific French author who was probably better known forty years ago than now, died recently at San Rafael, aged 82 years. In 1839 he was chief editor of the Figaro, for which he wrote an Aristophanesque journal, "Les Guêpes," every number of which made a literary sensation. Seven years before the editor of Figaro had rejected his first manuscript. Since 1866 he devoted himself exclusively to the cultivation of flowers. The Karr dahlia was named after him.

JOHN H. HEWITT, the poet and musician, and known as the father of the American ballad, died at his home in Baltimore, on the 7th inst. He was born July 11, 1801, in New York City. At the beginning of his career he was engaged in business, and was afterward educated for the army. He then studied law, and was successively a musician, editor and essayist. Mr. Hewitt's father was Professor Hewitt, a leading musician of his time, who came from England in 1794. He married Eliza King, only daughter of Sir John King.

JOURNALISTIC NOTES.

THE article by Helen Gray Cone in the October Century on "Women in Literature" is one of a series of original articles by representative American women which are to be issued immediately in a book on "Women's Work in America." The work has been inspired and edited by Mrs. Annie Nathan Meyer, a trustee of Barnard College, and will be published by Henry Holt & Co.

A NEW monthly has been started by E. L. Kellogg & Co., of New York and Chicago, called Our Times. The plan of this paper is to give a clear idea of what is going on in the world from month to month. Though designed specially for teachers, it is of interest to all who wish to keep track of the current events of the world that contribute to its real progress. It gives all the important news of the month without the murders and scandals. A clear, comprehensive review of the contents is also given, with numerous suggestions as to teaching them.

Far and Near, a monthly journal devoted to the interests of working girls' societies, is to be started next month. The business management will be in the hands of the Critic Company, Lafayette Place, N. Y., and the editorial department under the control of the Auxiliary Society of the Association of Working Girls' Societies of New York. It is proposed to publish in this paper news of the various Working Girls' Societies in this country and England, and articles by the best talent that can be obtained on subjects of interest to all wage-earning women. It will also contain stories and poems, a summary of the important events of the month (in all parts of the world), and other departments of value and interest, including a series of short papers by club members, on topics chosen each month by the editors. Among those who have already promised to contribute articles are Grace H. Dodge, Clara Sidney Potter, Sarah Orne Jewett, Augustus Hoppin, Louise Chandler Moulton, Prof. George Harris, and Lucy Larcom. Far and Near will be edited by Maria Bowen Chapin, of New York, assisted by O. M. E. Rowe, of Boston, and Emily Morgan, of Hartford. The subscription price will be $1 per year, fifty cents to club members.

NOTES ON AUTHORS.

ALPHONSE DAUDET is reported to be seriously ill.

"SHIRLEY DARE" is the pseudonym of Mrs. Susan C. Powers, a well-known newspaper writer.

MME. MICHELET, the widow and collaborateur of the historian, is preparing a volume of his travels for the press.

GEN. BOULANGER, in reply to the "Coulisses du Boulangisme," will publish a book entitled "Les Vraies Coulisses."

MISS SADIE ELLIOT, daughter of the late Bishop of Georgia, according to the Boston Traveller, is the author of the novel, "Jerry," now appearing in Scribner's.

MAJOR VON WISSMANN's large book on his second African expedition is to be published at Frankfort-on-the-Oder in November. F. Klein-Chavelier, the Dusseldorf artist, has drawn the illustrations for it.

GLEESON WHITE, the young Englishman who compiled a volume of "Ballades, Rondeaux," etc., now published by D. Appleton & Co., has come to America to assist Mr. Montague Marks in editing The Art Amateur.

AFTER a lawsuit over the matter, E. H. House, who claims the authorship of the play, "The Prince and Pauper," made an agreement with S. L. Clemens and Abby Sage Richardson, whereby he was to receive one half the royalties paid for the play.

STEPNIAK, the famous Russian author, is coming to America in December. He will deliver a few lectures in this country. His subjects will be "Nihilism: its past history and prospects," "Siberian Exile" and "Count Tolstoi, as novelist and social reformer."

A BUST of Sydney Lanier, the poet, was unveiled October 4 at Macon, Ga. It is of bronze, mounted on a marble pedestal, and was presented to the Macon Library Association by a New York admirer of the poet, and is similar in design to the one presented to the Johns Hopkins University.

A LETTER by Charles Dickens describing the death from influenza of Grip—ominous name—the famous raven of "Barnaby Rudge," dated June 15, 1841, has just been published in The Manchester City News, to which it was communicated by Mr. Arthur Hailstone, of Manchester. The raven's last words were "Halloa, old girl!"

FATHER WILLIAM P. NEVILLE, of the Birmingham Oratory, who was appointed by Cardinal Newman to be his literary executor, requests those who possess letters from the Cardinal to send them to him, in order that they may be made use of in publishing selections from his correspondence. He promises that all such letters sent to him shall be carefully returned to their owners.

DR. H. SCHERER, the founder and former editor of the commercial journal Actionär, is said to be engaged on the completion of his "Allgemeine Geschichte des Welthandels," the first two volumes of which appeared as far back as the years 1852 and 1853, and were at once translated into English and French. The third volume will begin at the time of the declaration of independence of America.

GEORGE BANCROFT, the historian, celebrated his ninetieth birthday October 3. But for a gradual inevitable loss of muscular energy, and a very gradual fading of his powers of memory, Mr. Bancroft might seem a score of years younger than he is. According to a correspondent of the Washington Post "he still is an untiring reader, and keeps remarkably well up with the advanced thought of the times."

PAUL LEICESTER FORD, 97 Clark Street, Brooklyn, N. Y., being engaged in the preparation of an edition of the writings of Thomas Jefferson, and desiring to make it as complete as possible, requests that any one possessing any of Jefferson's letters or manuscripts will communicate with him. Or if such persons will loan these to Mr. Ford for a few days, he will guarantee their safe return; or, if they will have them copied at his expense, and will enclose a bill, he will gladly pay for the copying, and give due credit for such assistance in the work.

MRS. OLIPHANT is now well advanced with her "Memoirs of the Life of Laurence Oliphant," which Messrs. Blackwood & Sons expect to publish at an early date. The work will be looked forward to with keen curiosity, says the London Athenæum, "for Mrs. Oliphant has been fortunate enough to secure a mass of Laurence Oliphant's private correspondence, commencing with letters written in his boyhood, which may afford a key to open up that singular double character which contains at once the clever and brilliant man of society and the studious and dreamy mystic. One side of Laurence Oliphant's character was so mysterious even to his friends that any light upon it coming from his internal revelations will be welcome, while the adventurous life of which he has afforded so many glimpses in his writings contains highly romantic elements. We understand that it is more especially to the religious and mystic side of his career that Mrs. Oliphant has devoted her attention."

MR. RUSKIN, says the St. James' Gazette, "is to issue two volumes of poetry, with accompanying plates, early next year. Whether the contents be new or old, gleanings of the past years or the harvest of advanced age, has not been divulged. Few of Ruskin's admirers know, and fewer collectors possess, the very rare volume of poems privately printed by him in 1850, for which the bookworm may hunt the British Museum Catalogue in vain. It is post octavo, runs to 283 pages, and is one of the scarcest books of which we know. The copy lying before us at the moment is stamped across the back Poems, J. R., and on the side the symbolical lyre appears—possibly a binder's freak perpetrated without the author's sanction. All the poems contained in the volume were written between the ages of fourteen and twenty-six, each being carefully assigned its date. The Oxford prize poem, "Salsette and Elephanta," written in 1839, takes up twelve of the pages, and an earlier poem "The Gipsies," runs to eighteen. It is in couplets, and was badly beaten in the Newdigate Competition of 1837, when Dean Stanley carried off the coveted honor.

LITERARY AND TRADE NOTES.

THE GROlier CLUB is to give an exhibition of artistic posters in December. Mr. Samuel P. Avery will make the selections.

STREET & SMITH will publish at once, in their Select Series, "The Illegal Marriage," a tale of Southern life, by Hon. Evelyn Ashby.

THOMAS WHITTAKER has just ready a second series of the "Handbook of Biblical Difficulties," treating the literary and scientific problems in Scripture.

THE publishers of Puck will shortly issue Brunner's delightful series of short stories that have appeared in recent issues of Puck, under the title of "Short Sixes."

THE Senate voted to purchase, at a cost not exceeding $30,000, Thomas S. Townsend's extensive collection of data on the Civil War, known as his "Library of National Records," which was described in these columns some time ago.

HARPER & BROTHERS are to publish in this country Sir Walter Scott's "Journal," reproduced from the original at Abbotsford. It will be edited by David Douglas. The amount of matter is nearly double what Lockhart used in his biography of his father-in-law. There are two volumes.

MISS KATHARINE PEARSON WOODS, of Baltimore, whose "Metzerott, Shoemaker" and "The Mark of the Beast" have attracted so much interest, has written a new story entitled "A Web of Gold," which will be published shortly by Messrs. T. Y. Crowell & Co. It deals with the relations of labor and capital, and contains many brilliant and dramatic scenes and well-drawn characters.

HARPER & BROTHERS have received notification from Reuben B. Davenport, editor of the New Haven Morning News, that Capt. Charles King's book, "Campaigning with Crook," contains libellous matter, and that he proposes to bring suit against the author and publisher. The Harpers have forwarded the document to Capt. King and will for the present stop filling orders for the book.

CONSTRUING SECTION 50 OF THE TARIFF LAW.—Assistant Secretary Spaulding, of the Treasury Department, on the 9th inst. sent to the Collector of Customs at New York a telegram saying that "goods free under the present law, and warehoused under the provisions of the previous law, may now be withdrawn free." This is in harmony with an opinion rendered by Solicitor Hepburn of the Treasury, construing section 50 of the new Tariff act.

W. M. GOLDTHWAITE, No. 107 Nassau Street, New York, announces a new "Atlas of Westchester County," to be complete in one volume. Township plans and the outlines of districts are to be shown on a scale of from two to four inches to the mile, the closely built portions to be done on a larger scale. The maps are to show all block, lot and ward numbers and lot dimensions when obtainable. Locations of public buildings, manufacturing and the larger private structures are to be indicated, materials of construction to be designated by colors, owners' names are to be given, also the lines of water service, sewers, farm boundaries, etc.

MACMILLAN & Co. will publish at once a cheap edition of Dilke's "Problems of Great Britain," in one volume.

SWAN SONNENSCHN & Co., London, will publish shortly, in their Social Science Series, a description of the New York State Reformatory at Elmira, by Mr. Alexander Winter. The book will describe the life at the reformatory, and the methods employed in this interesting sociological experiment, which endeavors to translate into practice the most advanced penological theories of the day. Mr. Havelock Ellis is writing a preface to the book.

WILLIAM ANDREWS & Co., 1 Dock Street, Hull, England, will issue in December "The Wordsworth Dictionary of Persons and Places," by J. R. Turin, who has also compiled "The Bibliography of Wordsworth." The new volume will give, besides the index and dictionary to persons and places, a collection of quotations from the poet's works, which will have an exhaustive index and a chronologically arranged list of the best of Wordsworth's poems. Besides the regular edition a large-paper edition of 250 copies will be printed and bound in similar style to "Knight's Library Edition of Wordsworth."

"THE SAGA LIBRARY," edited by William J. Norris with the assistance of Elrikr Magnusson, and to be published by Bernard Quaritch, will comprise "The Poetic Edda," "The Prose Edda," "The Volsunga Saga," "Heimskringla, or, Chronicles of the Kings of Norway," "The Orkney Saga," "The Sagas of Eric the Red and Thorfinn Karsefne (being the Tale of the Discovery of America in the Tenth Century)," "Gunnlaug's Saga," "Frithiof's Saga," and "Saga of Viglund the Fair," "Story of Grettir the Strong," "Egil's Saga," "Njal's Saga," "Eyrbyggja Saga," "Saga of the Laxdalers," "Hen Thorir's Saga," "Saga of Howard the Halt," "Saga of the Banded Men," and several others. The regular issue will be 5s. per volume, the large-paper edition will be £1 11s. 6d.

THE result of the inquiry made by the Society of Authors as to the extent to which pirated editions are introduced into the colonial book market, to the detriment of English holders of copyright, appears to be that in Australia and New Zealand present legislation is sufficient, and that in India the evil is but partial. But in Africa and other parts of the British dominions the 20 per cent. collected by the Custom-House on the published price of books registered at Stationers' Hall, even if carefully levied, appears, according to the current number of the Author, not to be a sufficient deterrent. The fact that the lists supplied to the Custom-House are often a year old or more, and that registration of books is frequently neglected too long, may partly account for the success of contraband enterprise. In any legislative attempts that may be made to correct the evil, the Society expresses itself confident of the co-operation of the Colonial Office.—Athenæum.

CORRECTION.—A representative of the firm of Sabiston & Murray, 916 Sixth Ave., New York City, has called upon us to deny the statement made in the circular of E. W. Dayton, manager of the estate of W. R. Jenkins, quoted in our last week's issue. The firm asserts that it does not claim, and never has claimed, to be the successor to W. R. Jenkins' business, and that it has made no purchases of any one on that representation.

TERMS OF ADVERTISING.

Under the heading "Books Wanted," subscribers only are entitled to a free insertion of five lines for books out of print, exclusive of address (in any issue except special numbers), to an extent not exceeding 100 lines a year. If more than five lines are sent, the excess is at 10 cents per line, and amount should be enclosed. Bids for current books and such as may be easily had from the publishers, and repeated matter, as well as all advertisements from non-subscribers, must be paid for at the rate of 10 cents per line.

Under the heading "Books for Sale," the charge to subscribers and non-subscribers is 10 cents per line for each insertion. No deduction for repeated matter.

Under the heading "Situations Wanted," subscribers are entitled to one free insertion of five lines. For repeated matter and advertisements of non-subscribers the charge is 10 cents per line.

All other small advertisements will be charged at the uniform rate of 10 cents per line. Eight words may be reckoned to the line.

Parties with whom we have no accounts must pay in advance, otherwise no notice will be taken of their communications.

Parties desiring to receive answers to their advertisements through this office must either call for them or enclose postage stamps with their orders for the insertion of such advertisements. In all cases we must have the full address of advertisers as a guarantee of good faith.

Houses that are willing to deal only on a cash-on-delivery basis, will find it to their advantage to put after their firm name the word [Cash.]

CHRISTMAS!

THE most representative of the Christmas issues, having no special interests to represent, giving best value to both dealers and advertisers, and out first, is the Christmas issue of the PUBLISHERS' WEEKLY. The cover will be tasteful and taking.

As usual, special articles on leading books, the finest specimen illustrations from others, full descriptive summary of new books and stationery novelties, reference price-lists covering the ILLUSTRATED WORKS, BOOKS FOR THE YOUNG, and other CHOICE BOOKS published during 1890, etc.

Furnished at the earliest possible date, orders recorded in order of receipt. As paper is made for it, we need prompt word. Prices are put below cost of manufacture, to insure the widest circulation to advertising.

To avoid delay it is absolutely necessary that copy for imprint, together with full directions for forwarding, should accompany the order. All packages sent by express unpaid, unless other shipping directions are given.

THEPUBLISHERS' TRADE LIST ANNUAL

For 1890 (Eighteenth Year).

Large 8vo, 3430 pages. With Duplex Index. Cloth, net, $2.00.

The Trade List Annual for 1890 contains:

1. The latest CATALOGUES OF AMERICAN PUBLISHERS, contributed by themselves and arranged alphabetically by the firm-names and smaller lists at the end of the volume.
2. A complete list by author, title, and subject of all books recorded in the PUBLISHERS' WEEKLY from January to June, 1890, supplementing the ANNUAL CATALOGUE, 1889.
3. The "EDUCATIONAL CATALOGUE" for 1890, which is used by the entire trade and educational interests as the most representative reference-list of School-books.

The above Lists, all bound in one volume, present in their combination so convenient and time-saving a working-tool as to make it indispensable to every one who has any interest in the purchase or sale of books.

The patent "DUPLEX INDEX" having given such general satisfaction, we are now applying it to all copies of the "Annual." Volumes supplied with the "DUPLEX INDEX" have the alphabet printed on the concave surface as well as on the margin of the page, which enables instantaneous reference, whether the book is open or shut.

Unless special shipping directions are received, copies will be despatched by express unpaid. Parties so desiring can have their copies sent by mail, or by paid book-rate express for 80 cents per copy extra.

NEW YORK

ROBERTS BROS.' NEW BOOKS

OUR NEW ENGLAND.

Her Nature Described by Hamilton Wright Mable and some of Her Familiar Scenes Illustrated.
The illustrations are photogravures (Gravure-Gilbo) from nature, with remarks drawn by Frank T. Merrill. Oblong quarto, limp cover, with photogravure design on Japanese paper, gilt edges, $4.00; cloth, illuminated design, $5.00.

The picture subjects are charming bits of nature, characteristic of New England, chosen from various localities by an expert photographer, and reproduced, with special attention to details, by the photogravure process.

Mr. Mable's summary of the picturesqueness and grandeur of New England scenery is a clever bit of essay writing. His description of the climatic changes, of boy life in the old homestead and on the farm, the varied aspects of nature during the four seasons, its beauties so favorably compared with other countries, is unfolded with panoramic clearness, and is extremely fascinating.

To the New Englander afar, the book will be a happy reminder of his early home life, while to the resident it will be a source of pleasure and pride.

PLAIN TALES FROM THE HILLS. By RUDYARD KIPLING. 12mo, cloth, $1.50.

"Every one knows that it is not easy to write good short stories. Mr. Kipling has changed all that. Here are forty of them, averaging less than eight pages a piece; there is not a dull one in the lot. Some are tragedy, some broad comedy, some tolerably sharp satire. The time has passed to ignore or undervalue Mr. Kipling. He has won his spurs and taken his prominent place in the arena. This, as the legitimate edition, should be preferred to the pirated ones by such as care for honesty in letters."—Churchman.

A NEW BOOK BY THEODORE S. VAN DYKE.

Millionaires of a Day

AN INSIDE HISTORY

OF THE

GREAT SOUTHERN CALIFORNIA BOOM.

Readers of Mr. Van Dyke's other books (his "Southern California," "The Still Hunter," and "Rifle, Rod and Gun in California") will know that in this little volume they have a treat in store. The author's perfect knowledge of the country, his wit, keen observation and shrewd sense, with a peculiarly clear and direct style, make all his books readable, while the present one is valuable both as history and as a study of human nature.

Extra Cloth, $1.00; Paper, 50 Cents.

In November:

A NEW NOVEL BY TOURGEE.

ALBION W. TOURGEE has written so much, with such variety of theme and character, and always so forcefully and with such hold upon the interest, the intelligence, and the sympathy of his large clientage of readers, that his new book will have a wide welcome.

MURVALE EASTMAN: CHRISTIAN SOCIALIST,

Is the title, and indicates the new line he has taken up. Judge Tourgee is always timely. His "Fool's Errand" fell as a spark on prepared tinder. His "Murvale Eastman" will rattle the dry bones in many a "Christian church" that worships by theology instead of by the Gospel, and will show both rich and poor, capitalists and laborers, lockers out and strikers, conservatives and demagogues, that there is a simple way out of the tangles of selfishness. His pictures of life and character in this book are full of his old fire and dramatic instinct.

Extra Cloth, $1.50.

Also, GOOD FALL AND WINTER STOCK.

T. S. VAN DYKE. Southern California, $1.50; The Still Hunter, $2.00; Rifle, Rod and Gun in California, $1.50.

A. W. TOURGEE. Hot Plowshares; A Royal Gentleman; Figs and Thistles; A Fool's Errand; Bricks Without Straw, $1.50 each; and John Eax, $1.25. Also Black Ice: A Tale of Northern Winter, $1.25. The set, boxed, $10.00.

H. O. MCCOOK. Tenants of an Old Farm. Profusely illustrated. $1.50.

NOTES IN SEASON.

McLOUGHLIN BROTHERS have ready for the fall season about forty-two additions to their lines of paper, linen, half-bound and cloth-bound books, and about as many new games, blocks and novelties.

THE WORTHINGTON Co. will publish immediately "The Old Meeting-House," including "Vacation Papers," by Rev. A. M. Colton—a picture of New England life, manners, peculiarities and idiosyncrasies; also, "AsbeIn," by Ossip Schubin, translated by Elise L. Lathrop.

FUNK & WAGNALLS expect to issue this month Edwin Arnold's new poem, "The Light of the World." It will have an introduction by Richard H. Stoddard, and will be illustrated with reproductions (by special arrangement) of Hoffman's celebrated pictures of the "Life of Christ," and by a portrait of the author. The poem will be also copiously annotated.

FLEMING H. REVELL will publish immediately "Hymns New and Old, No. 2," by D. B. Townner. The many words of commendation given "Hymns New and Old" warrant the belief that the new book, containing as it does many pieces of merit never before published, together with the gems of sacred song which never grow old, will have even a wider field of usefulness and a larger sale than the first volume.

D. LOTHROP Co. have just ready "Finding Blodgett," the story of a boy and his dog, by George W. Hamilton; "A Real Robinson Crusoe," edited by J. A. Wilkinson; "How New England Was Made," by Frances A. Humphrey; a cloth, illustrated edition of the famous "Black Beauty;" "Out-of-Doors with Tennyson," edited by Elbridge S. Brooks, and the bound volumes "Babyland" and "Little Men and Women" for 1890. They also have ready new editions of the Red Line "Pilgrim's Progress," "Our Town" and "Five Little Peppers," by Margaret Sidney, and Dr. Stowe's compilation of religious thoughts, "Daily Manna."

FORDS, HOWARD & HULBERT have just ready "Millionaires of a Day, an inside history of the great Southern California boom," by Theodore S. Van Dyke. Readers of Mr. Van Dyke's other books (his "Southern California," "The Still Hunter," and "Rifle, Rod and Gun in California") will know that in this little volume they have a treat in store. The author's perfect knowledge of the country, his wit, keen observation and shrewd sense, with a peculiarly clear and direct style, make all his books readable, while the present one is valuable both as history and as a study of human nature. They will issue next month Judge Tourgee's new novel, "Murvale Eastman: Christian Socialist," which it is claimed will "rattle the dry bones in many a Christian church" that worships by theology instead of by the gospel of the Nazarene.

THE UNITED STATES BOOK Co. publish this week "The House of Halliwell," by Mrs. Henry Wood, which, it is stated, was written many years ago, but never published. They have also just ready "Ruffino," and other stories, by Ouida, the title story of which is said to be an idyllic fancy of the class to which belonged "Two Little Wooden Shoes," so much admired for its delicacy and simplicity; "Dramas of Life," by George R. Sims; and "The Upper Ten," by W. H. Ballou. They announce for early publication a collection of poems by Rudyard Kipling. The volume will be the first edition of the poetical writings of this popular writer, and will contain his "Departmental Ditties," "Barrack Room Ballads," and other fugitive verses which Mr. Kipling has collected personally for this work. There is a vigor and swing about Kipling's verse which will doubtless make it as popular as his prose. The work will be issued in cloth covers with gilt top and uncut edges.

WEEKLY RECORD OF NEW PUBLICATIONS.*

The abbreviations are usually self-explanatory. c. after the date indicates that the book is copyrighted; if the copyright date differs from the imprint date, the year of copyright is added. Books of foreign origin of which the edition (annotated, illustrated, etc.) is entered as copyright, are marked c. ed.; translations, c. tr.; n. p. in place of price, indicates that the publisher makes no price, either net or retail, and quotes prices to the trade only upon application.

The Viscountess Blanche de Cabrol, a married woman, is the central figure of the story. French scenes and characters and many incidents surround a plot which involves the love of Gilbert Manjean and Blanche de Cabrol. Upon Gilbert's action and a crisis that decides the fate of the lovers the novel depends. Although the theme might be questioned, it is so delicately handled that no exception can be taken to the moral tone of the book.

Most of the action takes place in a vicarage in the English North country, where Mildred Lambert has been called to perform the part of foster-mother to the vicar's children. These latter add much to the story through the medium of distinctive characteristics and individuality. But the heroine is Mildred, by virtue of the trying part she sustains, and the hero, Dr. John Heriot, whose choice of a wife is the crowning and naming incident of the novel.

The heroine has been taught from childhood that love is the maddest folly in a world where death is, and the development and effect of this teaching are admirably described. The characters are various and distinctly defined. The story abounds in dramatic incidents, and the style is clear and picturesque. By the author of "John Ward, Preacher."

- Fernald, James C. The economics of prohibition. N. Y., Funk & Wagnalls, 1890. c. 10+515 p. D. cl., $1.50.
- The study of years in one readable, handy volume, treating the question of Prohibition from the economic side, as no other book has done, so that it is practically alone in its field. Statistics that are not dry, but bright, clear and interesting. It is full of stories from real life and striking illustrations, each of which is an argument. Learned and technical terms are avoided, and the whole argument stated in simple, clear and popular language.

- Frederic, Harold. In the valley; il. by Howard Pyle. N. Y., C. Scribner's Sons, 1890. c. 10+427 p. D. cl., $1.25.
- Mr. Frederic takes for a background the beautiful Mohawk Valley of Central New York, and revives the romantic traditions of the French and Indian and Revolutionary wars. The tale is not an historical novel, but a love romance in an historical setting. The interest in Douw and Daisy as characters who appeal to one's sympathies is the chief element of its force. The strong man and gracious woman live in stirring times, and reflect the conditions which developed a vigorous national feeling from people of diverse characteristics. Mr. Pyle's illustrations are faithful reproductions of the colonial period.

- Marie Gaucher was a little French girl who was sent most unwillingly to be educated at a convent. Her gradual loss of health and spirits, and the methods by which her natural childish tendencies are repressed are strongly described. Finally events that she cannot control lead her to be a nun—the "Sister Philomène" she is called in her new life. Her new vocation takes her to the hospital wards, and in the care of the sick she becomes almost happy. She is thrown a great deal with the hospital surgeon, and a mutual interest springs up. The love she struggles with for the young doctor is powerfully delineated.

- Greene, Sallie Pratt McLean. Leon Pontifex. Bost., De Wolfe, Fiske & Co., [1890.] c. 2-232 p. D. cl., $1.25.
- The Rev. Leon Pontifex is evidently, from his first entrance upon the field, the centre of a profound mystery. He is a refined, educated Englishman, who has suffered much in mind and purse. He comes to take charge of a little church in an obscure American village; he is gaunt, shabby and profoundly melancholy. His history is gradually evolved by the aid of a number of romantic incidents; of course there are a couple of women in the case, and several love affairs.

race outlined in its inception, development, diffusion and present condition. N. Y., C: Scribner's Sons, 1890. c. 19+420 p. D. cl., $2.

In this book an effort has been made to compress a sketch of constitutional history for a period of nearly two thousand years—from the time of the Teutons of Caesar and Tacitus to the British Empire and the United States of 1890. It is not the peccata of any single people that is outlined, but that of the English-speaking race. Especially adapted to the general reader and youthful student. The author has followed the lead of the scholars most accepted on the subject.

Howells, W. D. A boy's town described for Harper's Young People. N. Y., Harper, 1890. c. 5+247 p. il. D. cl., $1.25.

Mr. Howells' first venture in the field of juvenile literature is a masterpiece among the books of its class—truthful in its representations of boy life, rich with humor and full of entertaining reminiscences. Although primarily and above all a boy's book about boys, it will be welcomed and enjoyed by all classes of readers.

Describes only such games as have proved their popularity, and only such sports as seem especially adapted to the taste of young Americans. In making the selection the wants of every age have been considered, and the youngest child as well as the oldest has been regarded. Different dispositions and temperaments have also been provided for, and the weaker ones will find that they have not been passed by in favor of those who are stronger.

"The story of Scotland" presents two classes of facts and incidents of varied and absorbing interest. First, the conflict of the chief tribes with each other; the foundation of the monarchy, the gradual extension of the kingdom from its centre outward, and the development of a distinct and intense nationality. Second, the struggles arising from the invasions and attacks of external enemies, which were commenced by the Romans, followed by the Danes and Norwegians, and finally the long and unequal struggle with England. The subsequent internal struggles were political and religious. The religious contests connected with the Reformation, the conflict of the reformed clergy with the crown, and the covenanting struggle, are full of interest.

Mr. Curtis says in his introduction: "No more timely, striking and interesting illustration of the intuitions, impressions, apparitions, which are familiarly described as supernatural, can be found than the collection of little tales in this volume. It is the most modern and contemporary contribution to the literature of ghosts, selected from authors in various parts of Europe—Norway, France, Spain, Austria, Italy—all of them masters in their way, and of that sympathetic and delicate lightness of touch which is indispensable to the happiest treatment of such themes."

The present compilation begins with Tishri 1, the Jewish New Year, equivalent to Sept. 15, 1890, and ends with Roah-Chodesh, 1890, equivalent to Sept. 1 of that year. It shows the days of the week and corresponding dates of the English months on which every Roah-Chodesh, feast, fast and festival will occur during that time. Also, directions to ascertain the English date of any Jahrzeit, and a summary of nearly seven hundred events, from the time of the Deluge up to the present, descriptive of the persecutions to which the Jewish people have been subjected, their victories and defeats, the high positions which they have attained in arts and science, etc.

New book (A) of fables, anecdotes, and stories for the purposes of composition. Bos., School Supply Co., 1890. c. 184 p. S. (Boston school ser.) cl., net, 50 c.

The plan is to give the pupil the outline or skeleton of the story or fable, and then to call upon him to tell it in his own words. After each story, the outline is here set down. There are one hundred and seventy subjects in all, given at length, and providing excellent reading for the young. At the end of the book is a large selection of titles for the subjects of short papers; also instructions and examples for letter-writing, and a list of simple rules for punctuation.

The trees described include all the native trees of Canada and the northern United States east of the Mississippi River. Mention is also made of the more important of the introduced and naturalized species. The work is so arranged that any given specimen can be readily found by help of the guide. Every tree is illustrated by a leaf the natural size, drawn from the leaf itself. Designed to aid every day people in learning the various trees by their leaf.

From its organization, the author has worked in the Second Baptist Church Sunday-school in St. Louis. Illness compelled her to resign from active work, and to help the scholars she wrote this story. The little wall is a bright girl picked up after an earthquake and taught by her foster parents to live and work for others.

"The increased favor with which these 'Bible studies' have been received both at home and abroad has encouraged the author to continue them for another year. The great labor involved in their preparation, in addition to his constant evangelistic work, is in a measure compensated for by the knowledge that many thousands of teachers and fellow workers in the ministry of the gospel have been helped by them. The same method of treatment has been adhered to as in past years."—Preface.

Roberts, Morley. In low relief: a Bohemian transcript. N. Y., Appleton, 1890. 3-297 p. D. (Appleton's town and country lib., no 61.) pap., 50 c.

The scene is laid in London. An artist and an author are contestants for the love of Mary Morris, a model. The incidents that forecast the plot are easy and graceful, as befits Bohemia; but the story has its pathetic, almost tragic, side in a déménagement that decides whether Armour or Torrington is the successful wooer of Saint Priscilla.

From the time Dugdale sets sail from Gravesend, on the Cornwall Ida, his adventures begin. An encounter with a French lugger is supplemented by an incident that leaves

Dugdale and Miss Temple in dire distress on the open sea. The efficient help that Miss Temple renders Dugdale at this time covers the most interesting and adventurous part of one of Clark Russell's inimitable sea tales, and wins for the heroine the title of "My shipmate Louise."

A history of the great land "boom" of Southern California, which occurred about four years ago. Men who were millionaires one day were almost beggars the next. Mr. Van Dyke tells the story with much graphic humor. His knowledge of Southern California, every square mile of which he has hunted over, and every portion and product of which he is familiar with, gives him a great advantage in treating his material; while his style is so crisp, his portrayals of human nature so witty, his descriptions of the land so admirable, that—even if one has no interest in real estate "booms"—he will enjoy every single page of the book. Author of "Southern California," "Rifle, Rod and Gun in California," and "The Still Hunter."

Like his former books, this one grew out of Prof. Welsh's experience as a teacher. He prepared it because he believed that such a compendium would be useful to the student of English literature, and would facilitate the labors of the instructor. It is a condensed parallel view of history and literature in England and the United States from the time of the Roman invasion down to the present; and it may be used by the student in connection either with lectures by the teacher or with a text-book, such as the author's "Development of English literature and language."

The Publishers' Weekly.

FOUNDED BY F. LEYPOLDT.

OCTOBER 18, 1890.

The editor does not hold himself responsible for the views expressed in contributed articles or communications.

All matter, whether for the reading-matter columns or our advertising pages, should reach this office not later than Wednesday noon, to insure insertion in the same week's issue.

In case of business changes, notification or card should be immediately sent to this office for entry under "Business Notes." New catalogues issued will also be mentioned when forwarded.

Publishers are requested to furnish title-page proofs and advance information of books forthcoming, both for entry in the lists and for descriptive mention. An early copy of each book published should be forwarded, to insure correctness in the final entry.

"Every man is a debtor to his profession, from the which, as men do of course seek to receive countenance and profit, so ought they of duty to endeavor themselves by way of amends to be a help therunto."—LORD BACON.

DIGNITY IN LITERATURE.

A RECENT editorial in one of the "popular" monthly journals furnishes a most promising text for the subject of this paper. The editor, who is responsible for the article, professes a wide experience in journalism, has a large circle of acquaintances among men and women of repute in letters, and claims that his magazine is a contribution to literature. In the September issue appears the following frank confession: "Occasionally some stray reader—who is not one of the regular journal family—writes, 'Why are you not more reserved and dignified on your editorial page as other editors, and use the plural instead of the personal pronoun?' Why, bless you, my friend, Reserve and Dignity are precisely the two qualities for which we have no room on our page. Reserve? Dignity? Why, are you reserved and dignified in your family? Well, the journal is only a larger family. The fact is, the great trouble with all our present literature is that it is altogether too reserved and dignified, and the writer removes himself too far from all his readers."

The forerunner and conclusion of this paragraph on the editorial page is an advertisement of the growing popularity and increased capabilities of the journal. That the editor, in seeking to make his magazine a family affair, establishes himself as the head of the household, and has won a justifiable amount of success in assuming such a responsibility. But some one outside of the family circle—an unbidden guest, perhaps—has taken to task his parental conduct, and taxes him with lack of dignity and reserve. It is well to note how supremely he arises to the occasion, and how confidently he assures his flock that "dignity and reserve" are not home qualifications, and that most of the literature of the present day is overburdened with these characteristics. We beg to differ, not only with this latter statement but with his conclusions. Manners make morals, and the lack of dignity, not only in the home but in a professional or commercial career, is the growing tendency of the day, to which may be traced much of the looseness of speech and many of the colloquialisms which, if not vulgar, are commonplace and uncouth. There are numerous illustrations of this, and it is almost directly the result of that absence of reserve which makes familiarity breed the contempt it deserves. Courteousness of manner, gentleness of speech, refinement of taste, are all dependent upon dignity and that amount of reserve which makes virtue and manliness superior to familiarity and flippancy.

In regard to literature it cannot be denied that there is a growing tendency to lower the tone and bring into popularity a school that has but little regard for the dignity and nobleness of its profession. Many papers find their way into print which, by a judicious amount of advertising, have cultivated a taste that is neither pure in tone nor honest in purpose. We do not intend to convey by this statement that they are necessarily immoral, but that in construction as well as qualification, they are not only loose and slovenly, but flippant and undignified, thereby working injury to the true mission of all genuine literature. Make your editorial page an advertising sheet, and, while you may increase your circulation, you will lower the tone of your journal. One of the most important factors of education is the editorial page. Its influence is as boundless as its power for either good or evil, and the editor who will undertake to inculcate the theory that dignity and reserve are qualifications that should be avoided in preparing a magazine for the home, is not a true disciple of literature. Who is responsible for this condition of affairs? The editor primarily, for he seeks to enlarge his circulation without regard to consequences. Commercial success is more to him than conviction and the lawful purpose of his vocation. Secondly, the author; for the quantity brings increased pecuniary results at the expense of quality. Much of the loose (and one might almost say slovenly) character of the work that passes as literature of the day is traceable to the fact that in looking for commercial success authors are willing to sacrifice their profession. This is not true of many authors, who can neither be bought nor tempted into lowering the tone of their calling by enterprising literary syndicates. That was a trite remark of a prominent bookseller who said, "In these days literature has sunk to the level of advertising, and the art of advertising has arisen to the dignity of literature." And this leads us to say that the publishers and booksellers have an important part to play in reforming the present condition of affairs. They are educators, and with the publishers rests the task of cultivating, by the publication of wholesome and well-written books, a taste for genuine and healthy literature, and with the bookseller the work of making a market for this class of literature at the expense of that which is vicious and insipid. There is no occasion for discouragement or failure. A position so unstable, a taste so unnatural, is like a disease which requires heroic treatment. The physic will not be pleasant to take, but will in time, if properly applied, effect a cure.

The Saturday Review claims that "the Americans are not a bookbuying people." That may be, but then, are the Englishmen—unless they include the Mudies and the other proprietors of circulating libraries?

THE United States of Brazil has responded to France's proposal of an international copyright treaty. Will the United States of America, which ought to have led in this movement, come next?

EXHIBITION OF MODERN MECHANICAL PHOTOGRAPHIC PROCESSES.

NOTHING in the wonderful history of photographic progress, which has been so strikingly rapid during the past few years, has been of greater importance than the development of what may be called, for want of a better term, the Photo-Mechanical Processes, which are so largely superseding wood engraving, steel engraving, and other pictorial methods. This subject is of great interest to the public, but particularly to all persons in any way interested in the production or use of pictorial illustrations, such as artists, authors, publishers of books, magazines and newspapers, printers and manufacturers whose products require illustration. For the past few years these processes have multiplied in number, have improved greatly in their results, and are every day assuming greater importance in both artistic and economical directions; yet it is a remarkable fact that in no exhibition have they been brought together for comparison and study.

Beginning November 3, 1890, the New York Camera Club, of which David Williams is President, will give an exhibition in its rooms, 314 Fifth Avenue, of the work of the various establishments producing all classes of photogravure, photo-engraving, photo-lithographic and other mechanical photographic illustrations.

Admission will be by cards of invitation, which will be sent as generally as possible to photographers, artists, authors, printers, manufacturers using illustrations, and in general to all persons likely to be interested in the subject.

A pamphlet will be distributed at the exhibition containing an essay giving a sketch, historical and descriptive, of the different methods. A space, probably a page, will be set apart for each exhibitor, in which, on his own responsibility, he will be allowed to describe or recommend his process in his own way. No charge will be made for such insertion, and the pamphlets will be distributed free. Exhibits suitably framed and of proper character, subject to the approval of the committee in charge of the exhibition, will be hung upon the walls. Other exhibits, whether in books, albums, or on cards, will be displayed upon tables, for the examination of visitors. All frames must bear a neat label, which will be furnished by the club, giving the name of the exhibitor, the process by which made, and the title or explanation of the pictures. All other exhibits must be properly marked for identification.

There will be no charge whatever to exhibitors.

POE'S AL AARAAF.

MR. INGRAM in his "Life of Poe" says: "Poe is believed to have inspired one of his relatives, probably Mr. George Poe, with a belief in his genius. This relative seems to have taken some interest in his nephew's welfare, and at this time wrote to the late John Neal to solicit his confidential opinion as to the youth's poetic abilities. The reply was not altogether unfavorable, and the consequence of it was that Poe wrote to Neal and proposed to publish a volume of poems dedicated to him." John Neal, at the time the above correspondence was going on, was editor of The Yankee, a monthly literary magazine published in Boston. A reference to its pages seems to place the incidents above noted in a slightly different light, and this is the subject of an interesting portion of Mr. Woodberry "Life of Poe." In the September (1829) number of The Yankee, among the "Answers to Correspondents," appears a notice to "E. A. P. of Baltimore," in which a proffered poem is criticised. The editor says it is "though nonsense, rather exquisite nonsense," etc. The whole of his remarks were reprinted in a recent number of the PUBLISHERS' WEEKLY, and need not further be quoted. Three months later, the young poet, encouraged by the slight hint of praise conveyed in the editor's sarcastic note, writes again, and his letter is accompanied by a recommendation from a friend of the editor's. This was possibly Mr. George Poe. Whoever it was, the effect of his intervention was to secure a respectful hearing of the budding author. To have a friend at court was always good—then, as even now in these "latter days" of "sweetness and light." The article consists of the letter by Poe himself to the editor's friend, with brief comments by the editor. Poe says:

I am young—not yet twenty—am a poet—if deep worship of all beauty can make me one—and wish to be so in the more common meaning of the word. I would give the world to embody one-half the ideas afloat in my imagination (by the way, do you remember—or did you ever read the exclamation of Shelley about Shakespeare? "What a number of ideas must have been afloat before such an author could arise!"). I appeal to you as a man that loves the same beauty which I adore—the beauty of the natural blue sky and the sunshiny earth—there can be no tie more strong than that of brother for brother—it is not so much that they love one another, as that they both love the same parent—their affections are always running in the same direction—the same channel—and cannot help mingling.

I am and have been from my childhood, an idler. It cannot therefore be said that "I left a calling for this idle trade;

A duty broke—a father disobeyed," for I have no father—not mother.

I am about to publish a volume of "Poems," the greater part written before I was fifteen. Speaking about "heaven," the editor of The Yankee says, "He might write a beautiful, if not a magnificent poem" — (the first words of encouragement I ever remember to have heard). I am very certain that as yet I have not written either — but that I can, I will take oath — if they will give me time. The poems to be published are "Al Aaraaf," "Tamerlane" — one about four, and the other about three hundred lines, with smaller pieces. "Al Aaraaf" has some good poetry and much extravagance, which I have not had time to throw away. "Al Aaraaf" is a tale of another world — the star discovered by Tycho Brahe, which appeared and disappeared so suddenly — or, rather, it is no tale at all. I will insert an extract about the palace of its presiding deity, in which you will see that I have supposed many of the lost sculptures of our world to have flown (in spirit) to the star "Al Aaraaf" — a delicate place more suited to their divinity.

Here follow long extracts both from "Al Aaraaf" and "Tamerlane." The faint praise of The Yankee did not damp Poe's ardor, and indeed he dedicated the poem "Tamerlane" in the "Al Aaraaf" volume to his critic. In the same number of The Yankee appears Whittier's poem, "The Minstrel Girl."

COMMUNICATIONS.

A BOOK-LOVER GROWLS AT THE TRADE.

Boston, October 14, 1890.

To the Editor of the Publishers' Weekly:

I USE odd moments of leisure—too few, alas!—in putting my five thousand books in order. Like some other poor folk, whom Heaven bless, I buy dearer books than I can well afford, and like to pay the binder a good price for fair work. From too many books I find it necessary to cut trade "ads," spoilt in some cases by "favorable notices" from the young ladies and gentlemen who write for the press. This done, I have to erase the marks made by booksellers and bookbinders, most of whom seem to have a grudge against clean title-pages and fly-leaves. The bookseller who pastes his name in the books he charges a profit on, I avoid with limited success. Why will not our staunch friend, the PUBLISHERS' WEEKLY, tell publishers, booksellers and binders to dignify their trades by greater neatness and a proper regard for the merchandise they try to commend to buyers, most of whom have more taste than money? Booksellers and binders are sure to win a better place on earth and in heaven, if they will give up the bad practice of marring clean books with their private marks.

C. W. ERNST.

"WHY, Haanab, I'm astonished at your reading such a book," says Mr. Simpkins as he discovers his wife reading the latest literary effort, "In a Bad Man's Shadow." "The depravity of the times is showing itself in the demand for such books by respectable people—respectable people!—and here I find you countenancing one of the worst by reading it. What did you do? order it openly, I suppose, at Loring's or Herrick's, that they may know that we read such books in this family! Oh, you bought it at a stall in Washington St.! Well, I'm thankful you had that much decency. Let me see the book, to find out how much corrupt trash you can enjoy"—and the evening lamps are lighted and the children have their tea and are sent to bed; the dinner is announced and waits while the victorious Mr. Simpkins finishes "In a Bad Man's Shadow." —Boston Saturday Gazette.

OBITUARY NOTES.

JAMES EDWIN THOROLD ROGERS, Professor of Political Economy at Oxford University, died at his Oxford residence on the 12th inst. He was born in Hampshire in 1824, and was educated at King's College School and at Magdalen Hall, Oxford. In 1857 he was a public examiner at Oxford. In 1859 he became Tooke Professor of Economic Science in King's College, London, and from 1862 to 1868 he was Professor of Political Economy at Oxford. He was for some years in holy orders, but retired under the provision of Mr. Bouverie's Clergy Relief bill. In 1874 he was an unsuccessful candidate for Scarborough, but in 1880 he was elected as a Liberal for Southwark. He was the author of "A Manual of Political Economy," "Education in Oxford, its methods, its aids and its rewards," "The Law of Settlement, a Cause of Crime," "Aristotle's Ethics," "History of Agriculture and Prices in England from 1259 to 1792," "Six Centuries of Work and Wages," and edited the speeches of Richard Cobden and the various speeches of John Bright on questions of public policy. He was a frequent contributor to Notes and Queries.

PROFESSOR AUSTIN PHELPS, of Andover, (father of Elizabeth Stuart Phelps, died at his Bar Harbor (Me.) cottage on the 13th inst., after a long illness. He was born at West Brookfield, Mass., January 7, 1820. In 1842 he became pastor of a Congregational church in Boston, serving in that capacity for six years, when he was appointed to the professorship of sacred rhetoric in Andover Theological Seminary, the duties of which he performed until 1879, a period of more than thirty years, during ten years of which he was President of the seminary. Since 1879 he had been professor emeritus. His published works include "The Still Hour" (1858), "The New Birth" (1867), "The Theory of Preaching" (1881), "English Style in Public Discourse" (1883), "My Study, and Other Essays" (1886). He was also the author of various published sermons and addresses and edited two hymn-books.

CHARLES H. DOW, formerly with Gould & Lincoln, and for the past fifteen years book-keeper at T. Y. Crowell & Co.'s Boston house, died October 7. Mr. Dow will be remembered as a pleasant acquaintance and warm-hearted friend, as well as faithful servant.

NOTES ON AUTHORS.

BENJAMIN HILL, the son of "Ben" Hill, is writing a biography of his father.

ANOTHER Southern biography soon to be published is that of Robert Toombs, prepared by the editor of The Augusta Chronicle.

"OWEN INNSLEY," the author of a clever book of poems, published some time ago, has in the press another book, "Penelope's Web; an Episode of Sorrento."

THE editor to whom Cardinal Newman entrusted for publication his letters written while in the Church of England is Miss Anne Mosley, the sister of his brother-in-law.

MADDISON MORTON, the venerable author of "Box and Cox" (dear to the heart of every amateur actor) and many other amusing farces, is engaged, with the assistance of Mr. Charles F. Rideal, in preparing his "Reminiscences" for publication.

Of Mr. Kipling's ill health the Athenaeum says: "We regret to hear that Mr. Rudyard Kipling has broken down from overwork. He has been ordered to take a sea voyage, and sailed for Naples. His illness will probably delay the publication of 'The Book of the Forty-five Mornings.'"

It is understood that Richard Malcolm Johnston has recently completed a novel which he regards as his strongest work. The title chosen is said to be "Widow Guthrie," and the novel is described as picturing various social phases in the Georgia of sixty years ago, with all the author's truthfulness and fine humor, and with an exceptional command of character and of dramatic effects.

JOHN FISKE, the writer, is not John Fiske at all, says the Critic, but Edmund Fiske Green. He was born in Hartford, Conn., forty-eight years ago, the only child of Edmund and Mary Fiske Green. While yet a mere boy his father died, and three years later Mrs. Green married the Hon. Edwin W. Stoughton, United States Minister to Russia. Up to this time the lad had been known as Edmund Fiske Green, but after this, for some reason of his own, he dropped his father's family name, retaining that of his mother, Fiske, and adopted, in place of the baptismal "Edmund," the name of his maternal great-grandfather, "John," and thus he became John Fiske, a name which he has retained and honored ever since.

JOURNALISTIC NOTES.

CAMPANINI, the famous tenor, has written a striking article on "How to Train the Voice," for The Ladies' Home Journal, which will appear in the November number of that periodical. Miss Sarah Orne Jewett's next story will shortly begin in the Journal.

THE opening chapters of a new novel, entitled "The Witch of Prague," by Mr. F. Marion Crawford, with illustrations by Mr. W. J. Hennessy, appear in the October number of the English Illustrated Magazine. A lengthy and characteristic poem by Mr. A. C. Swinburne, entitled "An Autumn Vision," also appears in the number.

Free Russia is the title of a new monthly magazine, the organ of the English "Society of Friends of Russian Freedom" and of the "Russian American National League of New York," published at 321 Broadway, New York. The object of the journal is to mould public opinion in favor of the movement to bring about the abolition of autocracy in Russia.

THE editors of The Century expect to print in the January number the first of the series of articles containing extracts from the Talleyrand Memoirs—the most eagerly anticipated autobiography of the time. The Memoirs are to be published in five large volumes, and The Century will print one article from each volume in advance of the issue of the book in any country. The selections will be made by the Hon. Whitelaw Reid, Minister of the United States to France, who will also write an introduction to the series.

"I LEARNED that an album of unpublished original drawings by Thackeray had been brought to light, and that these are to be made one of the leading features for Harper's Magazine during 1891. The drawings are most characteristic of Thackeray, have his quaint sense of humor stamped upon them, and they are regarded by those who have seen them as a distinct 'literary find.' These drawings will undoubtedly do as much to 'boom' the English circulation of Harper's as did the Thackeray letters for Scribner's. They, more than any other single feature, helped to give Scribner's the circulation it now enjoys in its English edition."—E. W. Boh.

NOTES ON CATALOGUES.

Biblia, a monthly magazine devoted to Biblical archaeology, published by Dr. Charles H. S. Davis, Meriden, Conn., prints in its October issue a list of books in the English language relating to Egypt, compiled from material in the editor's library. In the November issue he will print such additions and corrections as may be reported, and a list of Greek and German books relating to Egypt.

THE AMERICAN UNITARIAN ASSOCIATION, Boston, has just issued the Annual (1890) List of Books for Sunday school libraries recommended by the Ladies' Commission on Sunday-school Books. This is supplementary to the catalogue covering the years 1885-89. As an evidence how carefully the committee works, may be cited the fact that it has examined two hundred and forty-seven books and approved only sixty-five. (15 p. 16".)

U. HOEPLI, Milan, has issued in his series of antiquarian catalogues, "Catalogo d'una raccolta di opere stampate dai Giolitti de' Ferrari in Venezia." The Giolittis were printers who flourished in Venice from 1536 to 1589, and attained a national reputation for the fine quality of paper they used and the clear and beautiful cut of their types. The catalogue embraces chiefly the work of Gabriele Giolitti, to whom the house is largely indebted for the fame that attached to the Tipografia di Trino in the 16th century. The catalogue is exquisitely printed. Mr. Hoepli announces in the preface to this catalogue that Salvatini Borge has in preparation a life of the Giolittis. (No. 66. 329 titles, 24".)

Catalogues of New and Second-hand Books. George P. Humphrey, 25 Exchange St., Rochester, N. Y., general literature. (No. 26, 617 titles, 16".)—Jarrold & Sons, 3 Paternoster Buildings, London, Eng., East Anglican Book Circular, general literature. (2d ser., No. 5, 935 titles, 16".)—Lippertsche Buchhandlung, Halle a/s., Prussia, English literature and philology, with an especially fine collection of Shakespeariana, from the library of Prof. Dr. Elze, of Halle. (No. 21, 1290 titles, 8".)—Edward Mills, 305 N. 9th St., St. Louis, Mo., Americana, etc. (239 titles, 8".)—Joel Munsell's Sons, Albany, N. Y., genealogy, biography and history. (8 p. 8".)—David Nutt, 270 Strand, London, Eng., scarce and valuable editions of Greek and Roman classics; also of works relating to the study of classical antiquity, many of them from the libraries of the late Sir Edward Sullivan, Lord Chancellor of Ireland, John Percy and G. Masson of Harrow. (No. 20, 854 titles, 8".)

LITERARY AND TRADE NOTES.

A. E. WELCH, formerly with Welch, Fracker & Co., will hereafter travel for the United States Book Co.

D. C. HEATH & Co. have in active preparation for early publication "The American Citizen," by Rev. Charles F. Dole.

GEORGE R. HALM, 22 East 17th St., N. Y., supplies orders for "Vesper Bells, and other poems," by W. T. Mersebau.

TOBIAS BROTHERS, 3 Chambers Street, N. Y., have published a "German Newspaper Directory," containing interesting statistical information concerning newspapers printed in the German language in the United States and Canadas.

Two importations of Mr. Stead's "Passion Play as it is Played To Day at Ober-Ammergau" have been made by Charles E. Merrill & Co., and both have been sold. About the 1st of November an enlarged edition, printed on better paper, will be published.

FRANCIS P. HARPER, New York, has just reprinted from the Hudson Gazette of 1865 "The History of the 150th Regiment," by Edward Duffy, the edition being limited to 150 numbered copies. The work was compiled from the author's diary kept during the war.

"THE Black Box Murder," which is on the Lovells' list for publication at an early date, is announced anonymously. It is pretty well known, however, that the work is from the pen of Maarten Maartens, whose recent work, "The Sin of Joost Avelingh," attracted much attention, and over which there was considerable discussion.

STREET & SMITH will publish at once, in their Select Series, "A Strange Pilgrimage," a new novel by Mrs. J. H. Waiworth, in their Sea and Shore Series "Buffalo Bill's Last Victory," a realistic story of the plains, descriptive of the exploits of several well-known characters; and in the Primrose Edition "His Word of Honor," an admirable translation of E. Werner's popular German novel, "Flammenzeichen."

THE WOOD BOOK CO., Hudson, Mich., have in press a new book by J. J. Wood, the Hudson bookseller-author, entitled "The Wilderness and the Rose, a story of Michigan." It is described as "a picture of the scenes and incidents of pioneer life in the Peninsular State." Through the whole runs a vein of romance and adventure, spiced with humor and philosophy. It has abundant local color, and while it will be of general interest it will especially appeal to readers in New York, New England and Michigan.

MONCURE D. CONWAY, by a happy inspiration, was some time since led to trace George Washington's early "Rules of Civility" to a French source, and to detect their resemblance to a treatise sent by the Jesuit monks of the College of La Flèche to those of the College at Pont-a-Mousson in 1595; and to another version published in London in 1630 by Francis Hawkins, a precocious child of eight years old. A comparison of the three versions has enabled him to restore passages in the "Rules of Washington" which are deposited in the Archives at Washington, and, having been gnawed by rats, were previously illegible. He describes in his interesting and scholarly preface the probable genesis of the Rules. The United States Book Company has arranged to issue the book early in November.

THE Committee on Publications of the Grolier Club announces the early publication of Milton's Areopagitica, with a critical introduction written specially for the Club by the Hon. James Russell Lowell. This work will be a fitting supplement to the first publication of the Club, "A Decree of Starre Chamber." The text has been reprinted from the original edition, great care having been taken to preserve Milton's orthography; a fact, as Mr. Lowell has pointed out in one of his letters to the committee, of great importance to the students of Milton's poetry. The work will be printed by the De Vinne Press, in cap octavo form, from large Elzevir type with rule borders, in old English style. The title-page will be a typographical imitation of the style of the original. An etched portrait of Milton, after the original engraving by Faithorne, accompanies the volume. The price will be $6.

HARPER & BROTHERS have just ready "A Boy's Town," by William Dean Howells. Aside from the fact that this is Mr. Howells' first venture in the field of juvenile literature, the story possesses especial interest on account of the many passages of autobiography which it is said to contain. The following extract, with regard to Mr. Howells' younger days, has been quoted from "Historical Collections of Ohio," to show the close resemblance of facts with some of those in the story: "When the boy was three years of age (1840) the family removed to Butler County, where his father published a newspaper, the Hamilton Intelligencer, and William, while a mere child, learned to set type. From thence they removed to Dayton, where the elder Howells purchased the Dayton Transcript, and changed it into a daily. His sons aided him in the type-setting, William (aged eleven) often working until near midnight, and then rising at four o'clock to distribute the paper. The enterprise illustrated industry against ill fate. After two years' struggle, Mr. Howells one day (in 1850) announced to his sons that the enterprise was a failure, whereupon they all went down to the Big Miami and took a good swim, to freshen up for another tug with fate."

THE Treasury Department last week was in receipt of a letter from a printing and publishing society at Red Wing, Minn., requesting the delivery of four parts of Stanley's "In Darkest Africa," published in the Norwegian language, sent by mail to them by the owner of the copyright for Norway and Denmark, and now held by the customs bureau at the New York Post-Office for violation of the copyright law. The Department has informed the Society that the fact that the book is published in a language other than English does not affect the rights of the owners of the United States copyright, and that the parts can be delivered only with the consent of the owners of such copyright. To a Californian who requested permission to remail to Italy several copies of the Italian version of Stanley's book, detained in the New York Custom House for violation of the copyright law, the Department replied that the importation of the books in violation of the copyright law renders them liable to forfeiture to the owners of the United States copyright, or to the United States, and therefore denied the request. The fact that the books are in Italian, the Department holds, does not affect the rights of the owners of the copyright.

HOUGHTON, MIFFLIN & Co. will publish, on the 18th, a superb and peculiarly valuable holiday edition of Longfellow's "The song of Hiawatha." The volume is illustrated with 22 full-page photogravures and about 400 text illustrations which are not merely decorative but represent with the utmost fidelity a large number of actual objects in use among the Indian tribes, or associated with their life, drawn from actual specimen by Frederic Remington. The volume also contains a steel portrait of Longfellow, and is uniquely bound in full buckskin, from designs by Mrs. Henry Whitman. There will also be ready on the same day the first volume of "The Silva of North America," which Mr. Charles Sprague Sargent, Director of the Arnold Arboretum, near Boston, is preparing. In exact and comprehensive knowledge of his subject Mr. Sargent is said to be pre-eminent; his studies have been exhaustive and he has been lavish in preparing for and executing the work. No expense has been spared upon it; it shows the very best work of the admirable Riverside Press, and its beautiful illustrations have the perfection implied in the names of C. E. Faxon (the leading botanical draughtsman of America) and Philibert and Eugene Picart, the noted Paris engravers. Mr. Faxon has been constantly engaged upon them for the last eight years. This great work succeeds the old and imperfect sylvas of Nuttall and Michaux, and as the result of persistent explorations of our country, will for some time, at least, need no successor. Four hundred and twenty-two arborescent species, exclusive of varieties, are described in it, many of these being trees discovered since the last census. Twelve large quarto volumes, each containing fifty plates, will complete the undertaking. It is expected that two volumes will be published each year until the work is completed. It is a noble work, and one of which America may well be proud. Besides the foregoing they will publish the seventh and eighth volumes of the Riverside Edition of Lowell's works; "The Art of Play-Writing," by Alfred Hennequin; "Verses Along the Way," by Mary Elizabeth Blake; a new volume of Poems by Edna Dean Proctor, and a new and enlarged edition of Edna Dean Proctor's "Russian Journey."

BENTLEY & SON, London, will issue shortly two volumes of "Last Records," by Fanny Kemble.

M. DE LESSEPS has recently published a little volume, entitled "Origines du Canal de Suez." The book is said to be having an enormous sale in France.

ONE of the events of the publishing season in London will be a drama by Henrik Ibsen, who has given to Mr. Edmund Gosse his entire English and American rights. William Heinemann has made arrangements with Mr. Gosse to issue an English version in London on the day that the original appears in Copenhagen.

J. A. STARGARDT, a well-known antiquarian publisher of Berlin, announces an important work on book-plates—"Die Deutschen Bücherzeichen"—by F. Warnecke, which claims to be the first on the subject in Germany. It will consist of 255 pages of letterpress, of the size known as lexicon-octavo, illustrated with twenty-six photolithograph plates and numerous wood-cuts and fac-similes.

CHRISTMAS!

THE most representative of the Christmas issues, having no special interests to represent, giving best value to both dealers and advertisers, and out first, is the Christmas issue of the PUBLISHERS' WEEKLY. The cover will be new, tasteful and taking.

As usual, special articles on leading books, the finest specimen illustrations from others, full descriptive summary of new books and stationery novelties, reference price-lists covering the ILLUSTRATED WORKS, BOOKS FOR THE YOUNG, and other CHOICE BOOKS published during 1890, etc.

Furnished at the earliest possible date, orders recorded in order of receipt. As paper is made for it, we need prompt word. Prices are put below cost of manufacture, to insure the widest circulation to advertising.

To avoid delay it is absolutely necessary that copy for imprint, together with full directions for forwarding, should accompany the order. All packages sent by express unpaid, unless other shipping directions are given.

NEW BOOKS.

Famous English Authors of the 19th Century.

By Mrs. SARAH K. BOLTON, author of "Poor Boys Who Became Famous," etc. With portraits of Scott, Burns, Carlyle, Dickens, Tennyson, Robert Browning, etc. 12mo, $1.50.

During a recent visit abroad Mrs. Bolton had the opportunity of visiting many of the scenes made memorable by the residence or writings of the best known English authors, and the incidents which she was thus enabled to invest with a personal interest she has woven into the sketches of Tennyson, Ruskin, Browning, and the other authors of whom she writes. These two companion volumes are among the best of the famous "Famous" series.

Gold Nails to Hang Memories On.

A rhyming review, under their Christian names, of old acquaintances in history, literature, and friendship. By ELIZABETH A. ALLEN. 8vo, gilt edges, $2.50.

This is the most original autograph book ever published. It aims to give a history and record of the more or less familiar Christian names, and at the same time to commemorate the most familiar and famous men and women who have borne them. The book, therefore, has not only an interest of its own, but is distinctively educational. Spaces are left on each page for autographs.

Jane Eyre.

By CHARLOTTE BRONTE. With 48 illustrations, engraved by Andrew. Carefully printed from beautiful type on superior calendered paper. 2 volumes, 12mo, cloth, gilt top, boxed, $5.00; half calf, $9.00. Edition de luxe, limited to 250 numbered copies, large paper, Japan proofs mounted, $10.00.

Jane Eyre is one of the books which seem destined to live. Its original and vivid style, its lifelike and powerful plot, its tremendous moral purport (once misunderstood, but now recognized), make it one of the most absorbing novels ever written. The present illustrated edition is as perfect as will ever be produced. Press-work, paper, illustrations and binding combine into a whole that is a delight to the eye and a cynosure for a library.

Tom Brown's School-Days.

By THOMAS HUGHES. With 53 illustrations engraved by Andrew, carefully printed from beautiful type on calendered paper. 12mo, cloth, $2.00; full gilt, $2.50; Edition de luxe, limited to 250 numbered copies, large paper, Japan proofs mounted, $5.00.

Praise or comment on this classic would be a word of supererogation. Every parent sooner or later puts it into his children's hands. We can only say that the present edition is by all odds the best that has ever been offered to the American public. Printed from large type, well illustrated, and handsomely bound, it makes a book worthy of any library.

Vengeance is Mine.

A novel. By DANIEL DANE. 1 vol., 12mo, cloth, $1.50. The plot is original, the situations are new, the characters are drawn with a keen appreciation of human nature, and the style is vigorous and entertaining. The hero of the story, Arnold North, is a scientific man of high standing in London, who, notwithstanding his devotion to science, finds time to fall in love, and that too with another man's wife.

Not of Her Father's Race.

A novel. By WILLIAM T. MEREDITH. Paper, 50 cents; cloth, 75 cents. This is a striking story of race as well as a keen satire on New York life and politics. The scenes of the novel begin in the South and are quickly changed to New York City, where the wealthy Southerner and his beautiful daughter become leaders in the world of fashion.

The Chouans. By H. DE BALZAC.

With 100 engravings on wood by Lévillé from drawings by Julien Le Blaut. Newly translated into English by George Saintsbury. 1 vol., large octavo, extra cloth, $7.50.

Curious Creatures in Zoology.

By JOHN ASHTON. With 130 illustrations. 1 vol., octavo, $3.50.

THE ANGLOMANIACS.

A story of New York Society to-day. 1 vol., 12mo, on extra fine laid paper, dainty binding, $1.00.

This is the story that has attracted such wide attention while running through the Century Magazine. There has been no such picture of New York social life painted within the memory of the present generation. The satire is as keen as a rapier point, while the story itself has its marked pathetic side. Never has the subject of Anglomania been so cleverly treated as in these pages, and it is not to be wondered at that society is deeply agitated as to the authorship of a story which touches it in its most vulnerable part.

"This delicious satire from the pungent pen of an anonymous writer must be read to be appreciated. From the introduction on board the Etruria to the final, when the heroine waves adieu to her English Lord, it is life, real, true American life, and we blush at the truth of the picture. There is no line not replete with scathing sarcasm, no character which we have not seen and known. . . . Read this book and see human nature; ponder upon what is there written, and while it may not make you wise, it certainly will make you think upon what is a great and growing social evil."—Norristown Daily Herald.

"The heroine is the daughter of an honest money-making old father and an ignorant but ambitious mother, whose money has enabled the mother and daughter to make their way into the circle of the 'Four Hundred.'"—N. Y. Herald.

NOTES IN SEASON.

S. C. GRIGGS & Co. will publish shortly "Civilization: an historical review of its elements," by Charles Morris, Philadelphia, who seeks to set forth, in clear and simple language, the evolutionary steps by which the human race has passed upward from primitive savagery to modern enlightenment, and in this way to discover the true philosophy of human progress; also a popular work on the literature of India, entitled "Hindu Literature, or, the ancient books of India," by Mrs. Elizabeth A. Reed.

WARD & DRUMMOND have just issued "Teetotaler Dick," a story of life in the United States and foreign lands, by Thomas W. Knox, in which this guide of the "Boy Travellers" and "Young Nimrods" gives special warning to his boy readers to avoid all intoxicants, and shows their dangers in moral, physical, social and business life; and they also have ready new editions of "Come Ye Apart," daily readings in the life of Christ, by Rev. Dr. J. R. Miller; and "Helena's Household," James De Mille's story of Rome in the first century.

FUNK & WAGNALLS will publish in November a narrative poem in blank verse, by William Cleaver Wilkinson, entitled "The Epic of Saul." The poem treats of the career of Saul the Pharisee up to the time of his conversion, that incident forming the catastrophe and conclusion of the poem, which is divided into fourteen books, every book having a title of its own. The volume is to be illustrated with original designs made in Paris especially for this work by an American resident artist. Passages of the "Epic of Saul" have appeared in The Century, The Independent and other periodicals.

HARPER & BROS. will shortly issue in book form Alphonse Daudet's latest work, "Port Tarascon," which in Mr. James' perfect translation, with illustrations by Rossi, Myrbach, Montégut and Montenard, has been one of the great attractions of Harper's Magazine during the year; and "The Tsar and His People; or, social life in Russia," by Theodore Child, Verestchagin and other distinguished writers, copiously illustrated from photographs and from drawings by the best American artists, a notable contribution to our literature about Russia, and an attractive and beautiful book for the holidays.

THE UNITED STATES BOOK Co. will publish at once "It Happened This Way," by Rose Eytinge and S. Ada Fisher. Mrs. Fisher's knowledge of London life has fitted her well for the English scenes and instances, while Rose Eytinge's dramatic career has been such as to warrant her attempting and successfully carrying out the dramatic interest in the story, and the pen picturing is vivid. They also make the important announcement of an authorized translation by Dr. Dillon of Count Lyof Tolstol's latest novel, "Work While Ye Have the Light." The story, which is laid in the early years of the Christian era, is mainly occupied in drawing a detailed contrast between Pagan and Christian life and thought, developed through dialogue filled with Tolstol's extraordinary power. The book derives increased value from a certain reflection of those personal views stated by the author in "My Religion," which here reappear to some extent in the form of fiction. Among many good things the list of forthcoming publications issued by the United States Book Company contains a new novel by Walter Besant, the popular author of "All Sorts and Conditions of Men." Mr. Besant is one of the few living novelists who never takes up his pen without having something worth saying, and the painful subject of dipsomania which he treats in his latest story, "The Demoniac," is certain to be used with good intention and to good purpose.

WEEKLY RECORD OF NEW PUBLICATIONS.*

The abbreviations are usually self-explanatory. c. after the date indicates that the book is copyrighted; if the copyright date differs from the imprint date, the year of copyright is added. Books of foreign origin of which the edition (annotated, illustrated, etc.) is entered as copyright, are marked c. ed.: translations, c. tr.; n. p. in place of price, indicates that the publisher makes no price, either net or retail, and quotes prices to the trade only upon application.

A colon after initial designates the most usual given name, as: A: Augustus; B: Benjamin; C: Charles; D: David; E: Edward; F: Frederic; G: George; H: Henry; I: Isaac; J: John; L: Louis; N: Nicholas; P: Peter; R: Richard; S: Samuel; T: Thomas; W: William.

Sizes are designated as follows: P. (folio: over 30 centimeters high); Q. (4to: under 30 cm.); O. (8vo: 25 cm.); D. (12mo: 20 cm.); S. (16mo: 17½ cm.); T. (same: 15 cm.); Th. (same: 13½ cm.); Fo. (4mo: 10 cm.). Sq., obl. mar., designate square, oblong, narrow books of these heights.

Adams, W. T., ["Oliver Optic," pseud.] On the blockade. Bost., Lee & Shepard, 1891 [1890.] c. 5-355 p. il. D. (The blue and the gray ser., no. 3.) cl., $1.50.

"On the blockade" is marked by all the popular features of the preceding volumes of the series, and deals with many of the same characters. The young readers will be interested in following the career of Christine Passford and his friends, whose varied experiences will be found as exciting as heretofore.

Adams, W. T., ["Oliver Optic," pseud.] Three millions; or, the way of the world. [New ed.] Bost., Lee & Shepard, 1891 [1890.] c. '66. 2-464 p. D. (Good company ser., no. 3.) pap., 50 c.

First published in 1866, under the title of "The way of the world."

Alcaforado, Marianna. The love-letters of a Portuguese nun: being the letters written by Marianna Alcaforado to Noël Bouton de Chamilly, Count of St. Leger, (later Marquis of Chamilly,) in the year 1668, tr. by R. H. N. Y., Cassell Pub. Co., [1890.] c. 3+148 p. S. cl., 50 c.

Miss Josephine Lazarus furnishes a charming introduction to this pretty little volume of love-letters. It gives all the facts that are known regarding the nun who forgot her vows and loved a French officer.

Allen, Grant. Wednesday the tenth: a tale of the South Pacific. Bost., D. Lothrop Co., [1890.] c. 5-131 p. il. D. cl., 75 c.

Everything of interest leads up to or resolves itself in the time specified on the title-page. While the Albatross was cruising in South Pacific waters, her captain rescued two lads from a horrible and certain death. One of the boys recovered sufficiently to say, "Steer for Makilolo Island of Tanaki. Wednesday the tenth . . . natives will murder them." This clue is followed, and the result is an exciting story of land and sea.

Babcock, W. H. The two lost centuries of Britain. Phil., J. B. Lippincott Co., 1890. c. 239 p. D. cl., $1.25.

A trustworthy account of the period intervening between the evacuation by the Romans and the commencement of authentic history of modern England. The author has earnestly and critically sought out the truth embodied in the various legends and traditions current concerning that time, and has woven them with the facts derived from various authoritative sources into an interesting narrative.

Baker, F. A., (Father.) Holy wisdom; or, directions for the prayer of contemplation. N. Y., Catholic Pub. Soc. Co., 1890. 667 p. 12", cl., $1.60.

Like the volume of "Poems" published by Mrs. Blake eight years ago, these "Verses" are distinguished by thoughtfulness, sympathy and a genuine lyrical quality.

Bolton, Mrs. Sarah K. Famous English authors of the nineteenth century. N. Y., T. Y. Crowell & Co., [1890.] c. 4-451 p. por., D. cl., $1.50.

During a recent visit abroad, Mrs. Bolton had the opportunity of visiting many of the scenes made memorable by the residence or writings of the best-known English authors, and the incidents which she was thus enabled to invest with a personal interest she has woven into sketches of the authors of whom she writes. These authors are Sir Walter Scott, Robert Burns, Lord Byron, Shelley, Thomas Carlyle, Tennyson, Dickens, Ruskin and Robert Browning.

An authentic history of this wonderful country and its ancient civilization, with a full description of its immense mineral wealth, its remarkable urban antiquities and magnificent mountain scenery, with a full and complete history of the Apache tribe of Indians; the whole interspersed with strange events and startling adventures. First pub. in '76, under the title "The Marvellous Country."
- Crawford, F. Marion. A cigarette maker's romance. N. Y., Macmillan & Co., 1890. c. 2 + 265 p. D. cl., $1.25.
A cigarette manufactory in Munich, with its odd collection of working people, is the scene. A Russian, self-styled a Count, who has made cigarettes for nearly twenty years, and who is always looking forward to returning to Russia and to his true position, is the hero. Whether his story is real, or the creation of a disordered brain, is a matter of every-day conjecture with his fellow-workmen. He awakens a strong interest in Vjera, a Polish girl, who also makes cigarettes, and becomes the hero of her romance.
- Davis, Harriet Riddle. Gilbert Elgar's son. N. Y., G. P. Putnam's Sons, 1890. c. 4 + 450 p. S. cl., $1.25.
A novel of Maryland many years back. Gilbert Elgar is a Quaker farmer. When he dies, leaving his family a legacy of debts and other troubles, his little daughter Robin assumes the work and responsibilities of a man. She has her love-story, and there is a very attractive young lover.
- Dawson, W. J. The makers of modern English: a popular handbook to the greater poets of the century. N. Y., T. Whittaker, 1890. 5 + 375 p. D. cl., $1.75.
The aim is to provide within small compass a handy guide to the chief poetry of the century, such as the student of literature may find serviceable for the direction of thought and the acquisition of knowledge. Many names which deserve mention have of necessity been passed over, and no purely prose writers are included, because for them a separate volume is needed.
- *Dobson, Austin. Four Frenchwomen. sketches of Mademoiselle de Corday, Madame Roland, Madame de Genlis and the Princesse de Lamballe. N. Y., Dodd, Mead & Co., 1890. 220 p. por., 12°, (Giunta ser.) cl., $1.25.
- Earle, Anne Richardson. Her great ambition. Bost., Roberts Bros., 1890. c. 3-307 p. D. cl., $1.
Sophy Verrick's great ambition was to become an artist. Her one absorbing thought makes her selfish and careless of others. She longs for an independent life, and moves into a studio of her own, to pursue her studies uninterrupted. The author's moral seems to be pointed against this kind of a life, as she shows how Sophy injures her health at times by over-application, and again fails to accomplish her object through a lack of sustained industry. After many disagreeable things occur to give her a distaste for her life, she finds consolation in marriage.
- Edwards, M. Betham. For one and the world. N. Y., G. Munro, [United States Book Co., 1890.] 8-340 p. D. (Seaside lib., pocket ed., no. 1543.) pap., 20 c.

Profusely illustrated by new half-tone engravings after original designs made especially for the work. Many are full-page, and the remainder are of various sizes and odd shapes, and are set in the text in the French style.
- *Grady, H. W. The new south; with a character sketch of H: W. Grady by Oliver Dyer. N. Y., Robert Bonner's Sons, 1890. 273 p. 12°, cl., $1.

Hearts and voices: songs of the Better Land; il. in col. by H: Ryland, Allen Wellby, Charlotte Spiers, [and others.] Phil., J. B. Lippincott Co., [1890.] 2-32 p. sq. O. bds., $1.

Eight well-known hymns; il. with 8 full-p. colored pictures and 30 black and white.

Hector, Mrs. Annie F., ["Mrs. Alexander," pseud.] Blind fate: a novel. N. Y., G: Munro, [United States Book Co., 1890.] 4-335 p. D. (Seaside lib., pocket ed., no. 1571.) pap., 20 c.

Hendrick, Welland. A brief history of the Empire State, for schools and families. Syracuse, N. Y., C. W. Bardeen, 1890. c. 5-203 p. il. and por., D. (School bulletin pub.) cl., 75 c.

It has been the author's aim to prepare a brief history of New York, suitable for general reading, adapted to be a text-book for a short term's work in the grammar or academic grades, and especially fitted for a reader, either regular or supplementary, in any grade of work after the fifth or sixth year.

Hennequin, Alfred. The art of play-writing: being a practical treatise on the elements of dramatic construction, intended for the play wright, the student and the dramatic critic. Bost., Houghton, Mifflin & Co., 1890. c. 20+187 p. D. cl., $1.25.

Mr. Hennequin is an enthusiastic student of dramatic art. His book is intended for the practical assistance of those who aspire to write plays for the stage, but it is so minute that dramatic critics and students of the drama will find it extremely valuable. In the first part is given an encyclopædic description of the theatre staff, its officers and principal attachés, of the stage, scenery, plans, and directions; in the second part are treated the different kinds of plays, the parts of a play, different rôles, what constitutes a play, theoretical construction, theatrical conventionalities, and how to write a play. An illustrative specimen is given, with some diagrams. The book abounds in references to all varieties of dramas, from ancient Greek tragedy to modern American farce.

Hermetic philosophy, including lessons, general discourses and explications of "fragments" from the schools of Egypt, Chaldea, Greece, Italy, Scandinavia, etc.; designed for students of the hermetic, Pythagorean and Platonic sciences and western occultism. V. 1. Phil., J. B. Lippincott Co., 1890. c. 184 p. D. cl., $1.

V. 1 contains lesson first on "The things that are," and a discourse from Platinus on "The nature of the good and the one."

Hochschild, (Baron.) Désirée, Queen of Sweden and Norway: a memoir; from the French, by M. Carey. N. Y., Dodd, Mead & Co., 1890. 96 p. 16°, cl., $1.25.

Hughes, T: Tom Brown's school-days. N. Y., T: Y. Crowell & Co., [1890.] c. ed. 16+369 p. il. O. cl., $2; $2.50. Edition de luxe, (limited to 250 copies,) $5.

Printed on fine paper and illustrated with 53 designs—some full-page, others in the text.

Hutton, Rev. Hugh. A pocket-book of private devotions for every morning and evening in the week; with prayers for some particular occasions; an introd. by Rev. Rufus Ellis. Bost., Lee & Shepard, 1891 [1890.] 134 p. Tt. cl., 30 c.

Ingelow, Jean. Quite another story. N. Y., G: Munro, [United States Book Co., 1890.] 5-251 p. D. (Seaside lib., pocket ed., no. 1563.) pap., 20 c.

Jerome, Irene E. From an old love-letter. Bost., Lee & Shepard, 1890. c. no paging, sq. O. pap., tied with silk, $1.

Under this euphonious title a selection from Thomas à Kempis and some Biblical quotations are grouped. They are printed in German text on rough linen paper, tastefully illuminated and tied and sealed in approved letter-fashion of olden times.

Judson, E. Z. C., ["Ned Buntline," pseud.] Buffalo Bill's last victory; or, Dove Eye, the lodge queen. N. Y., Street & Smith, 1890. c. 4-191 p. D. 1 il. (Sea and shore ser., no. 24.) pap., 25 c.

"Ruffino" is a story of Rome; the others are "Trottolino," "An orchard" and "The bullfinch."

Lockwood, Ingersoll. Wonderful deeds and doings of little giant Boab and his talking raven Tabib; il. by Clifton Johnson. Bost., Lee & Shepard, 1891 [1890.] c. 3-302 p. O. cl., $2.

The hero of this story is the grandson of Boabdil the Moor, and the book is an account of his marvellous adventures. His great strength begins to manifest itself soon after his birth, and thereafter he is perpetually performing wonderful feats. The narrative is told most entertainingly and naturally, and the interest is sustained throughout. The talking raven and scolding parrot supply an element of comedy, and there is not wanting a touch of pathos.

Lowell, Ja. Russell. The vision of Sir Launfal, with designs by E. H. Garrett. Bost., Houghton, Mifflin & Co., 1891 [1890.] c. '48-'90. 4-48 p. por. D. cl., $1.50. Same, 8°, vellum, net, $5, [limited to 100 copies.]

Both are entirely new editions, printed from new plates. The small ed. has 8 photogravure illustrations by Mr. Garrett, and a portrait of Mr. Lowell from the crayon by Page in 1842. In the larger ed. the illustrations as well as the text are printed on Japanese paper.

Mabie, Hamilton Wright. Our New England: her nature described by Hamilton Wright Mabie; and some of her familiar scenes illustrated. Bost., Roberts Bros., 1890. c. 4+24 p. obl. O. cl., $5; pap., $4.

The illustrations are photogravures from nature, with remarques drawn by Frank T. Merrill. The picture subjects are charming bits of nature, characteristic of New England, chosen from various localities by an expert photographer. Mr. Mabie contributes a charming essay on New England life, and its grand and picturesque scenery.

McAllister, Ward. Society as I have found it. N. Y., Cassell Pub. Co., [1890.] c. 10+469 p. D. cl., $2.

While in a large measure autobiographical—telling of Mr. McAllister's early life, his ancestors, his marriage, etc., his social success, his travels, and so on—there is much that will be found of special value to those wishing to know the way the best society entertains. Advice as to marketing, catering, with many rare recipes, the latest methods of decorating the table, etc., with an appendix giving fac-similes of cards, invitations, etc., taken from the writer's card-basket, are special points of usefulness. Many anecdotes and some gossip, gathered in Mr. McAllister's career as a society leader, enliven the pages.

Macy, Jesse. Our government; how it grew, what it does, and how it does it. New rev. ed. Bost., Ginn & Co., 1890. c. 12+296 p. D. cl., 85 c.

The work has been entirely rewritten since first published. The author has benefited by the criticisms of the press and several extensive works recently published on the subject.

Merriman, Effie W. Pards: a story of two homeless boys. Bost., Lee & Shepard, 1891 [1890.] c. 3-202 p. il. S. cl., $1.

After a desultory attendance at the night schools of a great city, two street arabs agree to cast their lot together, and start for Minneapolis, where they hope to quickly realize the rumored possibilities of that place. The story tells of the means they used to reach their Eldorado, and many amusing and pathetic incidents of their life in this western centre. Although there seems to be no definite purpose to attain a moral result, the beauty of unselfishness is perfectly illustrated in the individual action of the two waifs.

Mersereau, W. T. Vesper bells and other poems; il. by G. R. Halm. N. Y., privately printed, [George R. Halm, 22 E. 17th St.,] [1890.] F°, no paging, hf. cl., $5.

Author and artist have gracefully combined their work. The poems are interwoven with Mr. Halm's designs, which poetically realize their meaning. There are twenty-four pages, only one side being printed upon.

Minnesota. Supreme ct. Reports of cases, V. 42, Nov., 1890-Feb., 1890; G. B. Young, rep. St. Paul, West Pub. Co., 1890. c. 17+581 p. O. shp., $2.75.

The plan is the same as in former volumes. Each member of this club of ministers, most of whom reside in Boston, has taken one or more of the forty-eight lessons and written a brief but pointed sermon on its main theme.

Morris, Harrison S., ed. A mosaic, by the Artists' Fund Soc. of Philadelphia. Phil., J. B. Lippincott Co., 1891. c. 5-135 p. Q. cl., $7.50; ¾ levant mor., $12.50.

Contains 22 photogravure reproductions of pictures painted by members of the Artists' Fund Society, with appropriate text in poetry and prose. The pictures shown have never before been published, and may be taken as representative examples of the best work of each artist contributing. The book is a most artistic one in all its details. The pictures are exceptionally beautiful, and the text has been selected with a fine literary taste.

Oliphant, Mrs. M. O. W. Kirsteen: the story of a Scotch family, seventy years ago. N. Y., Harper, [1890.] 324 p. D. (Harper's Franklin sq. lib., new ser., no 683.) pap., 40 c.

The scene is laid in the Highlands in 1814. Kirsteen Douglas is successfully and secretly wooed and won by Ronald Drummond, a commissioned officer in the Indian service. This incident leads her to oppose her father, who desires her to accept an elderly wooer, Glendochart. Drumcarro gave her the alternative of leaving his roof or obeying his command. Upon Kirsteen's action the story depends. A pathetic incident ends the novel, and tells how Kirsteen's hopes were realized.

- Stone, Mrs. C. H. One of Berrian's novels. N. Y., Welch, Fracker Co., 1890. c. 8-210 p. D. cl., $1.25; pap., 50 c.
Mrs. Stone adopts the conditions in "Looking backward" as the existing ones of her story, so it is but fair that she gives her book the name of the novelist of that fair future pictured by Bellamy. The time of the story is 1997. The author advances the argument that we are to be assured in our methods of handling some of life's most difficult problems; that social questions suffer as much from an over-consideration as they did from indifference in the past ages; that a governmental system, no matter what its perfection, will always have revolters; that the instant thought concentrates itself on one object everything else is excluded. These theories are aptly tested in the caste of characters; special consideration is given to psychic force and the matrimonial question, through the medium of Fleur-de-lys Standish, the heroine.

BUSINESS NOTES.

ALBANY, N. Y.—John Skinner, for twelve years with Joseph McDonough, has started in the book business on his own account, and would like to receive catalogues from publishers and book-sellers.
BOSTON, MASS.—Messrs. Bradley & Woodruff, successors to Ira Bradley & Co., have removed to 234 and 236 Congress St., where they have larger quarters and increased facilities for their growing business.
CHICAGO, ILL.—C. H. Whiting has resigned his position as superintendent of the Chicago Depository of the Presbyterian Board of Publi- cation, and is succeeded by Randolph R. Beam, for several years with A. D. F. Randolph & Co.
FORT WAYNE, Md.—Renner Cratsley & Co., one of the largest wholesale and retail firms of booksellers and wall-paper dealers in Indiana, it is reported, assigned on the 15th inst. The credi- tors are Eastern wall-paper, book publishing and toy manufacturing firms. Liabilities, $30,000, and assets several thousand less. Toledo business men backed the firm, and are deeply involved.
GOSHEN, IND. — Peters & Herr, booksellers and stationers, have bought the entire miscella- neous and school-book stock carried by Dr. W. W. Johnson, druggist, the latter dropping this department from his line.
SAN FRANCISCO, CAL.—The S. Carson Com- pany, booksellers, has just been formed to suc- ceed the business of Samuel Carson & Co., publishers, booksellers and stationers, at 208 Post Street.

LAST Tuesday forenoon a pleasant-faced lady and a broad-browed bearded professor were glancing over the numerous volumes arrayed in a Broadway bookstore. "My answer," she said, "to the question, 'Have women brains?' is 'Look around.' Why, there must be here at least a hundred books by female authors, and many of them are superior to the books written by men on the same subjects. They are not all novels, either; but many of them deal with the highest, deepest and broadest themes of thought, from astronomy to psychology. It is foolish in these times to sneer at women's brains, especially when visiting a bookshop." The professor freely admitted that the remarks of his niece were justified by the display of books bearing women's names on their title-pages.—N. Y. Sun.

The Publishers' Weekly.

FOUNDED BY F. LEYPOLDT.

OCTOBER 25, 1890.

The editor does not hold himself responsible for the views expressed in contributed articles or communications.

All matter, whether for the reading-matter columns or our advertising pages, should reach this office not later than Wednesday noon, to insure insertion in the same week's issue.

In case of business changes, notification or card should be immediately sent to this office for entry under "Business Notes." New catalogues issued will also be mentioned when forwarded.

Publishers are requested to furnish title-page proofs and advance information of books forthcoming, both for entry in the lists and for descriptive mention. An early copy of each book published should be forwarded, to insure correctness in the final entry.

"Every man is a debtor to his profession, from the which, as men do of course seek to receive countenance and profit, so ought they of duty to endeavor themselves by way of amends to be a help thereunto."—LORD BACON.

OUGHT BOOKSELLERS TO BE EDUCATED?

AMONG the many good suggestions in Mr. Stott's sensible speech at the dinner of the London Booksellers' Society (a report of which is given elsewhere in this issue), his idea of starting a branch of the Society for assistants strikes us as being among the most important. The query, "What are we doing for them?" needs an answer also on this side of the Atlantic. And yet, "the assistants of to-day are the booksellers of to-morrow." How are they being prepared for the duties of the coming day? We are afraid that in far too many cases they are left to their own devices. If a young man "takes" to the profession, he works his way up under difficulties; if he does not, very likely that is the end of the matter. He blunders through a period of years. Probably he is lucky and saves a little money, and next we find him in business for himself. The sign before his store bears the legend "Dealer in New and Second-hand Books." In reality he is simply a junkseller. He buys the largest portion of his stock by the pound, and by rule-of-thumb sells it for what he can get.

But what shall we do for those anxious to learn thoroughly the profession of a bookseller? In Germany a bookseller's apprentice is expected to have a thorough common-school education to begin with. This enables him to enter the bookseller's school, where he must work his way through a three years' course. The first includes instruction in the German, French, English and Latin languages, German literature, the science of commerce, mathematics, geography, history, natural sciences, drawing and writing; the second, besides continuing some of the previous studies, enters upon the Italian and Greek, the study of the types and written characters of ancient and Oriental languages, and the pursuit of other European literatures; the third takes up classical literature, bibliography as a science, booksellers' technical information, business management, statistics, recent history, the history of the trade, æsthetics, elocution and debate, also the art of printing. Such a course is perhaps over-comprehensive; it includes considerable general education without which a man might become an excellent bookseller. But it is interesting as a schedule of the special branches of study bearing upon the knowledge required in dealing with books.

The establishment of a school for booksellers with a modified course might be made practicable in this country. It might be made as useful to the book trade in general as the Library School has become to the libraries. And how much more influential than the librarian's may the bookseller's position become in the community if he be properly qualified for his work. He has to do with books—not drawn for a week to be read, but bought to be always the companions of the buyer. A thoroughly educated book trade, competent to influence readers and thence writers, would be one of the greatest blessings that could be vouchsafed to America, its education, its culture and its literature. Is this visionary? We try to keep in view the sternly practical side of the question.

MR. STOTT's remark that he did "not think the man who reads over-night the books he has to sell the next day is likely to become a good salesman" was probably meant to be, in the language of the late Mr. Artemus Ward, "sarkasticle." Just how much a bookseller ought to read of stock he means to sell it would be difficult to specify. Much of it he would probably have no need of reading; but that he ought to be acquainted with the contents of that portion of his stock on which the profit is the greatest, we think can easily be proven. Not many years ago a friend of ours wandered into a bookstore and browsed among the shelves. Among the many treasures he came across was a superb English edition of a translation of a modern French classic. Curious to know how the work "took" in this country, he inquired of the clerk, who replied that, contrary to his expectations, the book seemed to "hang fire." "Have you ever read the book?" our friend inquired. "No," was the reply, "but I know what it is about." Our friend then opened the book and turning over the leaves pointed out a page and said, "There, when one of your customers who is likely to buy this class of literature drops in the next time, hand him the book opened at this place, offer him a chair, ask him to read this, and then leave him alone." A couple of months after, he called at that store again, and in answer to his query, "How is '—' selling now?" he was informed that "that trick cleaned out the whole lot, and another invoice is expected daily." After a few months more the remaining copies of that book in this country were held at an advance in price in that shop. Verbum sat.

THERE is a general expression of regret among teachers that Senator Hoar's motion in favor of professors and teachers, which was agreed to, and which was printed in the October 11 PUBLISHERS' WEEKLY as part of paragraph 515 of the tariff bill, has, through some misunderstanding, been omitted from the bill as enacted. The paragraph referred to reads as follows:

515. Books, maps, lithographic prints and charts, especially imported, not more than two copies in any one invoice, in good faith, for the use of any society incorporated or established for educational, philosophical, literary or religious purposes, or for the encouragement of the fine arts (247), or by any college, academy, school or seminary of learning in the United States, in its own behalf or in behalf of any of its professors or teachers, subject to such regulations as the Secretary of the Treasury shall prescribe.

The portion in italics has been left out. Whether it was done by mistake or intentionally it has thus far been impossible to determine. There is another side to this question, however; that any exception to the general law is apt to militate against the rights of the American citizen, by throwing business which ought to be done in this country into the hands of dealers in Europe.

THE AMERICAN COPYRIGHT LEAGUE.

THE annual meeting of the American Copyright League will be held at the Mott Memorial Hall, No. 64 Madison Avenue, New York City, on Tuesday, the 11th of November, 1890, at 4:30 P.M.

A report of the League's work for the past year will be made, the officers of the League will be elected, and measures for a vigorous prosecution of the campaign at the December session of Congress will be considered. A full attendance is especially requested.

Meanwhile, the Executive Committee earnestly invite the personal co-operation of every member of the League in the work of the campaign. Effective aid can be rendered by securing new members of the League (annual dues $2), by enlisting the interest of editors, and especially by urging the Copyright bill upon the attention of Representatives and Senators during the recess of Congress. The Secretary will be glad to furnish documents, and will be obliged for information of the results of work with legislators.

R. U. JOHNSON, Secretary.

THE WEBSTER DICTIONARY SUITS.

To the Editor of the Publishers' Weekly:

DEAR SIR: In your edition of last week you published the text of a telegraph despatch from St. Louis in regard to the dictionary suits, which is likely to cause a misapprehension to say the least, and I therefore beg leave to state the facts of the cases.

There were three cases which arose over the methods of defendants in selling their cheap reprint of the 1847 edition of Webster's Unabridged Dictionary. In point of fact there never has been any controversy over the copyright. The copyright of that edition expired late in 1889, and when that happened any one could print and sell that book if they could get any one to buy it by fair means. That was what the defendants in those cases claimed to do, and that was where the difficulty came in.

The burden of the Merriams' complaint was fraudulent misrepresentations connected with those sales. They said:

"The defendants have the right to print and sell that 1847 book, but they have no right to make the public think that they are selling the real Webster's Unabridged Dictionary. The book they are selling has long since become obsolete. It is no longer known to the public as Webster's Dictionary. It has been supplanted by a revision which we made and published in 1864, to which we have added in the years 1879, 1882 and 1884, by way of supplements, a large amount of very important matter, making it a far more valuable book. This is the book which is known to the public as Webster's Unabridged Dictionary, which is referred to as an authority by all English-speaking people, and it is this book which the public expect to get when they seek to buy Webster's Unabridged Dictionary. But the defendants are selling the reprint of the 1847 book and pretend that it is the real Webster's Dictionary. They advertise it as the original, genuine Webster's Unabridged Dictionary, but do not say what it really is. They put on the title-page the date of the printing, 1890, without a word of reference to the date of the publication of the book itself. They use all the indicia which we use in our book and by which it is known to the public, and they thereby seek to deceive the public into buying their cheap reprint of the old out-of-date book, instead of buying our book. So both the public and we are damaged—the public by spending their money for what they do not want, and we by a loss of sales and a discredit of our work."

The portion of the text of Judge Miller's decision which is especially pertinent is as follows, and distinctly sustains the Merriams in their complaint on the fraud:

"There is some hesitation among my brethren and myself, as above indicated, whether taking the bill as a whole, and considering all of its averments, a general demurrer ought to be sustained. The defendants use the words 'Webster's Dictionary' or 'Webster's Unabridged Dictionary,' placed in the same relation to their publication that the complainants place it. The date of defendants' publication on the title-page is given as of the year 1890, when in point of fact the book that they are publishing is a reprint or a photo-lithographic copy of the edition of Webster's Dictionary of 1847. The defendants also use the device of an open book on advertisements and circulars relating to their publication, as before alluded to. Now taking all of these allegations together, there may be some evidence of a fraudulent intent on defendants' part to get the benefit of the reputation of the edition of Webster's Dictionary, which the complainants are publishing, and it may possibly be that in consequence of the facts averred the public are deceived and that the complainants are damaged to some extent. We think, therefore, that this is one of those cases where, as the facts are stated in the complaint, the interests of justice would be best subserved by requiring the defendants to answer, so that there may be a full and fair investigation of the law and facts upon a final hearing."

So the demurrer was overruled and the case decided in favor of the complainants.

CHARLES N. JUDSON,
Counsel for G. & C. Merriam & Co.

THE LONDON BOOKSELLERS' SOCIETY.

THE London Booksellers' Society, which has just sprung into existence, opened its doors with a dinner given in the Holborn Restaurant on the 2d inst. There were present over a hundred persons, among them nearly every leading bookseller in London. David Stott, the President of the Association, opening the dinner by giving the toast of the Queen, remarked that "the old sign of the booksellers was the Bible and the Crown. They still believed in that, and tried to sell as many Bibles as they could; therefore they might consider themselves as loyal men."

The Greyfriars Quartette having sung "God save the Queen," the Secretary, Mr. T. W. Burleigh, read letters of apology from Mr. Walter Besant (he thought booksellers ought to have the sympathy of all authors), Mr. Frederick Miles, Mr. Robert Routledge and Mr. Edward Jones.

Mr. G. S. Belding proposed "The London Booksellers' Society," to which Mr. Stott responded as follows:*

"I think we may congratulate ourselves on the fact that we already number 143 members. That is not much, yet it includes almost every bookseller in London—from 'Appy Hampstead to pleasant Rosherville. When we started we were provided with a list of about 400 booksellers covering the London radius, but when that list was examined we found there were many of them who were only newsvendors and stationers, pure and simple. This list is a strong proof of the necessity of the Society, and I hope we may be the means of restoring these newsagents and stationers back to their former position as booksellers. We have a few—I may say a very few—publishers on our list. At first the council were inclined to take umbrage at the indifference of the publishers, but most of us have arrived at the conclusion that the publishers are right in not coming forward in a body to join us.

"Upwards of one hundred of our members are booksellers, and therefore the Society may be regarded purely as a booksellers' society, and the members now feel that they must work out their own salvation by themselves. Personally, I am glad we have not more publishers among us than we have. I say that in the best spirit, and mean that we want to show we are a force within ourselves. Now, as a first step in our procedure, we determined to draw a uniform scale of prices to the public, so that the unseemly spectacle of varying prices will no longer be visible. That scale has been generally recognized as a right one, although some of us may think it is wrong. Then, I believe, it was thought by some that the starting of the Society was to provide a way for going back to full price, or at least a moderate discount; but such a movement was impossible, the discount system had become too deeply rooted, and we had to accept the inevitable, and base all our calculations on a twenty-five per cent. discount. Here we must stop, and the Society pledges its existence to stop here. Now, the question arises as to whether there is a living profit after giving such a discount to the public? Well, the appearance of you, gentlemen, here, looking well fed and the picture of health, dissipates any insinuation that it will be necessary to hoist a printed text on your manly bosoms with the motto, 'We are starving.' Of course, the booksellers are inclined to abuse the publishers; but they are very good fellows, after all. Many of them are most liberal in their terms; if we will only encourage them by a little speculation and buy decent numbers, they are ready to meet us, and enable us to earn a modest living. But some publishers are not liberal, and I fear these must go to the wall. It is a word of warning. We cannot risk taking their books on the small margin they allow us, and the consequence is that their books are not visible on our shelves. I am sorry for those publishers, but their day has gone.

"I should like now to say that, while congratulating ourselves on the hearty way in which the trade has joined us, we have also had the support of the co-operative stores. I believe that we have one or two of their representatives here to-night. I mention this to show the good-will towards us. The Treasurer and Secretary have assured me that the stores are willing to go the whole length with us and accept our scale of prices. Booksellers in days past have always said that the stores were making all the profit, and the customer was in the habit of talking about how cheaply he could buy at the stores. Now they could tell the customer that he could not get a book cheaper at the stores; in fact they could absolutely deny the charge. I had hoped that our friend, Mr. Fred. Macmillan, would have been here to-night, but unfortunately he is in America. He is the bravest man among the publishers, and I gave him all credit and praise when he came forward with his panacea of 2d. off the shilling as a proper discount to be allowed to booksellers by the publisher, so that all books might be sold at full price. It was a noble effort in a right direction, but an utterly mistaken one, for obvious reasons which I need not point out. I am sure we all gave him credit for being the only man who essayed a remedy, though it was a mistaken one. But Mr. Macmillan has made another effort, viz., the publishing of books at net price; and allowing the bookseller a discount, I think that is a step in the right direction. There are some books a bookseller cannot sell, and no persuasion or blandishment can influence the customer to buy them. I refer to technical or specially scientific books, such as we only purchase when they are ordered. In these cases the discount Messrs. Macmillan allow is high enough. But on the other hand I protest against any publisher attempting to do the same thing with cheap books. There is one publisher who has started a series of books at 1s. 3d. net; I need not mention who he is, except to say that that publisher has done many strange things. Now what is 1s. 3d.? If a publisher would bring out a series at 1s. 4d. and sell to the trade at a shilling, that would be a good thing, because a shilling is a respectable sum to handle as compared with ninepence.

"After accomplishing so much there is still much more for us to do. We must have some uniform scale at which public and free libraries are to be supplied. It seems a monstrous thing that when a free library is started the order for the books should not be divided among the local booksellers who contribute to the rates of the locality, but that the orders should go to some distant town, because some bookseller was following the suicidal policy of selling at the lowest margin of profit. This must cease, and our Council will endeavor to bring about a satisfactory solution.

"... Then I have an idea to form a Number Two branch of the Society for assistants. The assistants of to-day are the booksellers of to-morrow, but what are we doing for them? Are we increasing their love of books? I do not think the man who reads over-night the books he has to sell the next day is likely to become a good salesman. He is apt to be inclined to give the customer a synopsis. But I do say, always read the preface. Preface-reading is very advantageous to a bookseller, and I would recommend it to the assistant. I would also have an examination for assistants concerning their knowledge of the various editions, etc."

Mr. Stott was followed by Messrs. Stanley Phillips, J. V. Whitaker, Calder Turner, Edward and J. Dodd, who responded briefly to the other toasts, all of which were suitably acknowledged by the chairman, and then the evening's proceedings closed.

"CHEAP BOOKS FOR THE PEOPLE."

THE following from the N. Y. Evangelist will be found interesting as the expression of an old bookmaker, and a presentation of the subject from a new point of view:

Recently a new and strenuous effort has been made by authors and publishers to secure the passage of an International Copyright law, and there is little doubt that there has been a growing public interest in the subject. It was confidently expected that such a bill would be passed by the present Congress, but again, by a few votes, it failed in the Lower House. This was accomplished by the advocates of "a cheap literature for the people."

There is little or no evidence that Christian people, as a class, have taken any special interest in the subject, and yet I venture the assertion that in some respects no more important question—important in its relation to morals and religion—has come before the public for many years. A few of your older readers will recall the movement in England, years ago, to establish publication societies to provide suitable reading for the people. For this purpose the London Religious Tract Society, the Society for the Promotion of Christian Knowledge, and other similar institutions, were founded. In this country the American Tract Society, Sunday-School Union, and various denominational publishing Boards, were subsequently organized. Good men and women freely contributed large sums of money for the purchase of books for gratuitous distribution. While in England this is still going on, here, in a large degree, such work has ceased; and, on the other hand, thousands of presses are incessantly at work upon a "literature for the people," a larger portion of which, if it be not positively evil, is of a character that cannot but seriously weaken the moral and social fibre of the reader.

I incline to the opinion that few patriots and Christians are aware of the amount of this kind of "literature" actually consumed by the "people." It is the one intellectual staple of their daily life, easily obtainable in a certain class of story papers, and in the cheap reprints of all the bad or unwholesome products of the second-rate English, Continental and American writers. Religiously, morally, socially, it is mainly either weak, sensational or positively bad. Sold at a price which places it within the reach of even the poorer classes, boys and girls, young men and young women, feed upon it for the excitement it produces. And with what result? A weakening of the moral character; dissatisfaction with the dull routine of their own common life; false views of religion; loose notions of morality, which may finally run into an abandonment of all religious truth, or the open or secret violation of the divine commandments.

But the evil is not wholly confined to the messenger-boy and the mechanic, and the shop or factory girl. This pernicious stuff also finds its way into Christian families everywhere. I remember when Bulwer published his earlier novels, that they were shut out of many a household because of their supposed "immoral tone." If they were bad, they were as "Hyperion to a Satyr," compared with that which may now be found in the hands of multitudes of Christian people. The age of materialism is also the age of fiction, so-called. The strain on life is heavy, and relief is often sought in the novel. This might well be, if the novel had a good purpose (as indeed many a one has), and nerved to higher and better aims in the conduct of life; but alas! it is too often more likely to drag the reader down than lift him to a higher, restful plane.

A friend of mine, the pastor of a mission church in a great city, told me that he had to keep an eye on this "cheap literature," so lavishly provided for "the people," that he might warn his congregation of the dangers and perils which lay around and in so much of it. We were quite agreed in the opinion that in this peculiar "literature" the noxious seeds of a practical infidelity were too often to be found, and that this product of an ever active press was silently but steadily working out results of which the Church seemed ignorant, even while these were often telling against its own spiritual life.

I do not claim that an International Copyright law would cure this evil; but I do hold that inasmuch as such a law would tend to develop a better literature of our own, and limit, by an advance in the price, and also prevent the multiplying of competing editions of every weak or bad foreign novel, the evil might be lessened. None the less, however, do I believe that this cry, in an age of extravagance, of "cheap books for the people," is one of the supreme humbugs of the day. Under it vast numbers of the well-to-do class have lost all appreciation or reverence for a book, and have grown out of a former need—the useful household library—even while providing, and oftentimes luxuriously, for every want but the intellectual. On the other hand the country has been flooded with the veriest trash, that leads up to nothing more than an insatiable demand for something still more trashy, feeble or vile.

I would that I might do something to bring home to every thoughtful reader his or her personal relation to this whole question. To such I would say, keep an eye upon the books that are now brought into your own household; see to it that you provide the right kind of reading for yourself and your children; and ask if it might not be well for you to throw your influence, as far as possible, in favor of an International Copyright law and "better books for the people."

THE SMALLEST BOOK IN THE WORLD.

THE London Pall Mall Gazette thinks that the smallest book in the world is a volume now in the Salford Royal Borough Library and Museum. It says: "The work in question, which differs from the rest in the essential point that while, like them, de jure a book, it is also de facto a manuscript—consists of 100 leaves of the finest rice paper, octagonal in shape, and measuring from side to side half an inch, stitched together and covered in silk. Nothing can exceed the lightness, delicacy and softness of the material or the neatness of the penmanship. This dainty little morsel of calligraphy, which at the first glance precisely resembles, in its glass prison, a very tiny butterfly of some uncommon kind, is very probably unique in the Western world. How it escaped imminent destruction is not the least wonderful feature of its history, for it was looted at Ghanzi, in India, by a private soldier during the mutiny, but it has been safe in the possession of the Salford Library for many years. The work has not been translated, but is officially defined, on the authority of an Indian scholar, to be an example of the "Kathas, or Sacred Recitations of (the) Mahrattas Brahmans," and it is written, without blot or alteration, in the Mahrattas character, in glossy black ink, with a brilliant margin of vermilion to every page, which is also numbered. Possibly the acme of biblical minuteness is reached in this beautiful little work of art, which, for the present at any rate, may claim to be the 'smallest book,' as well as 'the least collective manuscript in the world.'"

"THE CLEMENCEAU CASE" IN COURT.

WILLIAM FLERON, through his attorney, A. H. Hummel, obtained an order on the 20th inst. from Judge Wallace, in the United States Circuit Court of New York, to compel Walter Pollard, of the Pollard Publishing Company, and Frederick Lyster, to show cause why an injunction should not be granted to prevent their publishing "The Clemenceau Case." Mr. Fleron alleges that he translated and adapted "L'Affaire Clemenceau," by Alexander Dumas, under the title of "The Clemenceau Case," and copyrighted both book and title. Mr. Pollard, however, it is charged, has published a translation of the book made by Mr. Lyster, and also called "The Clemenceau Case."

A TESTIMONIAL TO WALT WHITMAN.

A TESTIMONIAL to Walt Whitman was given at Horticultural Hall, Philadelphia, on the evening of the 21st inst. Over a thousand people were present. The feature of the evening was an oration by Col. Robert G. Ingersoll, entitled "Let Us Put Wreaths on the Brows of the Living."

The poet sat in his wheel-chair on the stage immediately back of Col. Ingersoll, and at the conclusion of the oration he rolled himself forward and in a feeble voice tendered his thanks to the audience and to Col. Ingersoll, finishing his remarks by exclaiming, "Hail and farewell! Hail and farewell!" The scene was very impressive.

AN Irish book canvasser has been soliciting orders in northern New Hampshire for the following interesting books: "The World's Cyclone" (The World's Cyclopaedia), "The Visible Bible" (The Revised Bible), and "Stanley's Explosions in Africa" (Stanley's Explorations in Africa).

OBITUARY.

GEORGE M. BAKER.

Few names honored in the book trade are known to so large and widespread an outside public as the name of George M. Baker, who died on Sunday, October 19, at Barnstable, Mass., where he went in the spring to regain strength and health. Few of the thousands upon thousands of young and old who have been entertained at private, club and church theatricals by plays written or prepared solely for amateur talent by George M. Baker will ever know that this difficult branch of literature was only a favorite occupation for the leisure hours of a busy, active publisher and bookseller. Few of the trade, comparatively, have realized that the valuable assistant and right-hand literary man of the firm of Lee & Shepard for twenty-eight years was identical with the George M. Baker whose dramas have proved so profitable an addition to the bookseller's stock.

Mr. Baker was born in Portland, Me., July 2, 1832. During his early life his father removed to Boston, where he became a well known printer, and where his son naturally drifted into the publishing trade, entering the house of B. B. Muzzey & Co. From there he went to Tappan, Whittemore & Mason, and a few years later to Sanborn, Carter & Bazan. In 1857 he started in the book business on his own account, as a member of the firm of Mayhew & Baker, which survived at 208 Washington Street, until 1860, when Mr. Baker retired from this partnership to set up in business in Cornhill as stationer. In 1862 Mr. Baker attached himself to the house of Lee & Shepard, and until a year ago continued his successful work, which was always fully appreciated by this loyal old firm. During those years almost every manuscript submitted to the house was read and judged by Mr. Baker, and almost every manuscript put into print at his recommendation has proved the value of his literary insight and practical knowledge of the public for which he catered. A year ago last spring Mr. Baker was attacked by the illness which, although almost conquered at times by care and the rest from work secured by his retirement from the house of Lee & Shepard, has never been wholly cured. During the first months of this illness the press spoke often of Mr. Baker, and brought home to the public the many pleasant hours he had furnished by his plays for amateurs. The PUBLISHERS' WEEKLY for March 1, 1890, reprinted an article from the Boston Herald, giving the details of his success as a writer and the remarkable proportions his work had reached. Until six years ago Lee & Shepard published Mr. Baker's plays, but then disposed of that right to the firm of which the author's brother, W. H. Baker, is the head. Lee & Shepard, however, still publish his bound volumes, his juvenile books, and his dialect readings.

In 1850 Mr. Baker was a member of the Aurora Dramatic Club, where his pronounced dramatic talent soon made him invaluable. He realized the impossibility of turning plays written for the professional stage to good account among amateurs, and finding almost nothing provided for a growing demand, he tried to supply the want himself. His success was immediate, and he has had few competitors in his peculiar field for thirty years. During that time he has accomplished the feat of writing seventy-nine plays, all of which have been written solely with a view to amateur acting, and many of them with a special view to special needs. Among the latter are nine plays requiring only female characters, and several written only for male characters. Thousands of people to whom the word theatre means almost everything bad, and who would not cross the threshold of a theatre's doors, have been cheered and entertained by George M. Baker's plays. Some actors now on the professional stage gained their first knowledge of their art at the rehearsals of his own plays conducted by Mr. Baker. The most notable examples are W. J. Le Moyne and Fanny Davenport.

Mr. Baker in 1858 was married to Miss E. M. Bowles, of Boston, who, with two daughters and a son survives him.

ROBERT M. STREBEIGH, who was for years connected with the business department of the New York Tribune died suddenly on the 16th inst. He was born in Williamsport, Penn., March 7, 1826, and came to New York in 1843. As a boy he entered the business office of the Tribune, which was then in charge of his uncle, Thomas McElrath, the business manager. Mr. Strebeigh filled in succession every position in the department. In 1865 he resigned, and sold most of the stock which he had acquired in the paper. He was then associated for five years with George H. Leavitt in the book trade sales, but retired in 1870.

SAMUEL H. SIEG, once a prominent bookseller and stationer in Philadelphia, died recently in Chicago. In 1876 he went to Chicago and became associated with Culver, Page & Hoyne (now the John Morris Company), with whom he continued until the time of his death.

SIR RICHARD FRANCIS BURTON, the well-known African explorer and Oriental scholar, died in Trieste on Monday, October 20. Captain Burton was born in Galway in 1831. He joined the Indian army and served eighteen years, and afterward distinguished himself in the Crimean War. In 1856 he made his exploration of the central lake region of Africa. In 1860 he visited this country. His works in a literary way are very numerous, the most important of them being his translation of "The Arabian Nights" in ten volumes, which were nearly twenty-five years in publishing. Other publications are "A Pilgrimage to El Medina and Mecca," "City of the Saints," "Explorations of the Highlands of Brazil," "Unexplored Palestine," "Camœns: his life and his Lusads," "The Book of the Sword," etc.

I HAVE looked in vain for a notice of the death of Jacob Wells, who was born in England in 1828 and came to this country while young, and who entered the employ of Pratt, Woodford & Co. about 1848 as an artist in map drawing. Mr. Wells designed the maps for Olney's Atlas, as well as those of the Quarto Geography, and was for many years connected with this house and its successor. He was also employed at different times by Harper & Brothers, D. Appleton & Co., and Ivison, Phinney & Co., in like capacity, and up to a short time before his death was engaged by the Century Company upon the maps illustrating the war records published in its magazine. As a map artist he stood high in his profession, and his acquaintance among the leading publishers was extensive. He died very suddenly of heart failure at Westerly, R. I., on September 15.—Olney, in The American Stationer, October 16.

NOTES ON AUTHORS.

THE New York Sun will begin November 9th, the first serial story Mr. Kipling has written thus far. It is entitled "The Light That Failed."

The Critic has authority to state that Mrs. Burton Harrison is the author of "The Anglo-maniacs." Mrs. Harrison will be remembered as the author of "Bar Harbor Days," "Old-Fashioned Fairy Book," "Bric-à-Brac Stories," etc.

JEROME K. JEROME, the English author and playwright, is said to be only 30 years of age, and was for two years on the stage. He then became a schoolmaster and later a reporter. Finally he became a writer of humorous books and popular plays.

CHARLES HOWARD SHINN, author of "Mining Camps," and for many years editor of The Overland Monthly, has been appointed director of experimental agricultural and horticultural stations in California. He is an expert in horticulture, and in this office he can do much to aid farmers and fruit-growers.

GENERAL BOOTH, Commander-in-chief of the Salvation Army, has just issued in London a volume entitled "In Darkest England, and the Way Out." The work is devoted to a scheme for the relief of poverty, ignorance and vice in what General Booth calls the "submerged tenth of the population." He proposes to found cities and colonies for the hungry and homeless of London, who will be given work, etc., and helped to independence.

PROFESSOR EDWARD ARBER, of Birmingham, has, by the publication of the fifth or index volume, at last completed a notable work, being "A List of 837 London Publishers, 1553-1640 A.D.," which includes the name of every one who entered a book at Stationers' Hall during that period, together with the names of eighty other persons who avowedly published in those years one or more works in the metropolis without registering the same at the Hall.

It is generally known that the lieutenants of Mr. H. M. Stanley were prohibited by their agreements from publishing any account of their travels until six months after the issue of their leader's book. The term has now almost expired, and it is therefore expected that several books by these companions will appear—some of a highly interesting nature, detailing various aspects of the expedition. Next to the account of Mr. Jephson, under the title of "Emin Pacha, and the Rebellion at the Equator," already announced, the most interest will attach to the Diary and Letters of the late Major Barttelot, which are being prepared for publication by R. Bentley & Son, London, and in which will be described one of the darkest episodes in connection with the expedition.

WHY, OF COURSE.—"That book is bound to sell!"

"Is it? What is it, anyway—something very fine?"

"Not that I know of."

"Then why—?"

"What do you suppose it was bound for—to keep?"—Boston Traveller.

JOURNALISTIC NOTES.

MARION HARLAND has become editor-in-chief of the Housekeeper's Weekly, published by Henry Ferris, Sixth and Arch Streets, Philadelphia.

The Critic of October 25 presents the names of the "Twenty Immortelles" elected by popular ballot as the writers who best represent the cultivated American womanhood of to-day. Mrs. Stowe's name heads the list.

PERSONS who are interested in the various governmental reforms in Japan which have been so rapidly instituted during the last twenty years will be attracted by "The Fate of a Japanese Reformer," by Percival Lowell, in the November Atlantic. It is a sketch of the life and death of Mori Arinori, who was at one time the Japanese Chargé-d'Affaires at Washington, and later Japanese Minister to England. His untimely end at the hands of a half-crazed sympathizer with the old order of things is an example of the usual fate of the over-zealous reformer in all lands.

NOTES ON CATALOGUES.

"READING FOR THE YOUNG" went out of print directly it made its appearance. A second edition is under way, and will be ready at once.

THE UNITED STATES BOOK COMPANY have just ready a complete catalogue of their publications. It is bound uniform with the "Publishers' Trade List Annual," and will be sent free to all subscribers to the latter, as a supplement. (110 p. 8°, cl.)

IN our notice in last week's issue of M. Hoepli's Catalogue of the issues of Giolito, owing to a typographical error, we were made to speak of the Giolitis instead of the Giolitos, or, more properly, the Gioliti. Also, it is Salvatore Bongi who has in preparation a life of the Gioliti, not the fabulous personage that sprung from the printer's case.

Catalogues of New and Second-hand Books.—E. Dufossé, 27 Rue Guénégand, Paris, Americana. (7th ser., No. 4, 1493 titles.)—John Galway, 17 Garrick St., London, scarce and valuable books. (No. 4, 342 titles, 6d.)—Luzac & Co., 46 Great Russell St., London, Monthly list of Oriental literature. (September, No. 7, 16 p. 16°.)—U. Maggs, 159 Church St., London, miscellaneous. (No. 91, 1446 titles.)

LITERARY AND TRADE NOTES.

D. APPLETON & Co. will publish Colonel Richard Malcolm Johnson's new novel, "Widow Guthrie," referred to in our last week's issue.

WM. BEVERLY HARISON, 6 Clinton Place, N. Y., is ready to supply the trade with a school edition of Anna Sewall's "Black Beauty—the autobiography of a horse."

THE first volume of Mrs. Davis' memoirs of Jefferson Davis is about ready for publication by the Belford Company. It is said that over 45,000 subscribers have been secured in advance of publication.

H. L. GREEN, Buffalo, N. Y., has recently published a volume of "Reminiscences" by Lucy N. Colman, prominent in the anti-slavery movement and a confidante of John Brown of Ossawatimie.

THE PATRIOTIC PUBLISHING CO., Chicago, have published a volume entitled "Rev. Calvin Fairbank During Anti-Slavery Times," describing the adventures and trials of an enthusiastic worker in the anti-slavery cause.

JAMES T. WHITE & CO., N. Y., have in preparation a "National Cyclopædia of American Biography," edited by James R. Gilmore ("Edmund Kirke"). The work, which will be in six volumes, will confine itself to the United States.

THOMAS WHITTAKER has nearly ready "Veni Creator: thoughts on the person and work of the Holy Spirit," by H. C. G. Moule; and also a new edition of Bishop Meade's work on the "Bible and the Classics," with a prefatory note explaining its reissue.

MR. F. GUTEKUNST, Philadelphia, has published a large panel portrait of George William Curtis—a fine example of the photographic art; together with a smaller portrait (a phototype), a little more full-face, possessing the advantages of handy size and permanence.

JORDAN BROS., Philadelphia, will publish next month "Confessions of a Nun," by Sister Agatha, said to deal with live questions of the hour in fearless manner, a book for which they have already large advance orders. It will be published bound in paper as well as in cloth.

IN the suit of the Indiana School-Book Company against the school trustees of the city of Frankfort, for damages for refusing to put in use the books which the company furnished under its contract with the State, the case has been dismissed at the cost of defendants, who agreed to use the books as required by law.

THE CATHOLIC PUBLICATION SOCIETY CO., N. Y., will soon have ready "Anecdotes of Cardinal Newman, told by those who knew him," which will contain a mass of fresh and curious biographical facts, together with portraits of the Cardinal and engravings of the places with which he is associated. The book will be issued as a companion volume to "Sayings of Cardinal Newman," recently published by the same firm.

JOHN WILEY & SONS have in preparation "Memorabilia of Rev. Dr. Cheever and His Wife, Elizabeth Wetmore Cheever," written in prose and verse. The late pastor of the church of the Puritans, Union Square, New York City, was a zealous advocate of temperance and a fearless opponent of slavery during his ministry from 1846 to 1867, years in which physical as well as moral courage was heavily drawn upon in defending such principles.

C. W. BARDEEN announces that he has purchased from the International Publishing Co. all rights, title and interest in "Knott's Ready Reference Law Manual," including copyright, books and sheets on hand, and on sale accounts, and that he will hereafter publish the work as one of the School Bulletin Publications; also that he has in press "Prussian Schools through American Eyes," by James Russell Parsons, Jr., late United States Consul to Aachen, Germany.

IN an article discussing the comparative popularity of American authors, the publishers of E. P. Roe's books, Messrs. Dodd, Mead & Co., are reported as saying that, in their experience, next to the extraordinary sale of those tales comes that of the stories of Mrs. Amelia E. Barr. Mrs. Barr's Century story, "Friend Olivia," will be printed in book form soon, and is expected to exceed her former stories in popularity. Good judges who have read her "She Loved a Sailor" believe that it has the strongest story interest of any of her serials. It will be published in The Christian Union, beginning October 30, and will run through about five months. It treats events in New York City during the great bank struggle of Jackson's Administration.

A PUBLISHER recently said to a reporter of the New York Sun that the Chautauquan Circle in this country is largely responsible for the present marvellous interest in Latin and Latin literature. At no time within fifty years have so many text-books, commentaries and translations been turned from the press. The tendency of the colleges to make Latin and Greek optional studies, instead of allaying this interest, seems to have excited ambition among budding scholars all over the country to master the dead languages. Since the first American translation of Virgil a year or two ago, the publishers' woods are full of Ms. Virgils, Horaces, Ovids and Lucretiuses. At least two other schools, besides Ann Arbor University and Washington Seminary, are planning the production of classic comedies.

CHARLES WELLS MOULTON, Buffalo, N. Y., has just ready "Shakespeare: the man and his mind," by W. Clarke Robinson, Professor of English Language in Kenyon College; "Odd Spell Verses," by Hon. H. W. Holley; and "Seaside Songs and Woodland Whispers," poems by Oscar E. Young. He has in press "Harp of Hesper," songs and poems by Mary E. Butters; "Guesses at the Beautiful, and other poems," by John Richard Realf, which will be sold by subscriptions; three volumes of poems by Isaac R. Baxley, entitled "Songs of the Spirit," "The Temple of Alanthur" and "The Prophet, and other poems;" and "The Witch of En-dor, and other poems," by Francis S. Saltus. He is also making preparation to bring out "Songs by the Wayside," by O. R. Bellamy; "Sea Moss," by Dr. Lucy Creemer Peckham; "Wytch Elm," by M. Swafford, with portrait of the author; "Vacation Verses," by Alice M. Dowd; and "Magnolia Leaves," by Mrs. B. C. Rude. Attention is also called to the second edition of the second volume of "The Magazine of Poetry," containing 113 biographical sketches and 73 portraits.

A CURIOUS illustration of generous appreciation on the part of a firm of London publishers towards a volume of American verse is found in the following paragraph from the New York Sun: "The Messrs. Howe & Co., of London, found on a bookstall an American book of anonymous verses, which they reprinted under the title of 'Pirated Poems.' The English reprint has run into the twelfth thousand, and the publishers express a desire to become acquainted with the author, and to share with him the profits arising from the sale of the book. The poems are witty, philosophical, graceful and altogether delightful. We congratulate the Messrs. Howe & Co. upon their good taste, and are pleased to be able to inform them that the author whom their unurged magnanimity has prompted them to seek is Mr. Edward S. Martin, of Rochester, in this State." Mr. Martin, we may add, is a Harvard man, who wrote his first verses for the Advocate, of which he was an editor, fifteen years or so ago. His poems, with additions, are to be reissued immediately by the Scribners, under the title of "A Little Brother of the Rich, and other verses."

G. P. PUTNAM'S SONS have in preparation "A Woman's Trip to Alaska," by Mrs. Charles H. T. Collis, an account of a voyage through the inland seas of the Sitkan Archipelago in 1890; "Where We Went and What We Saw," by Charles McCormick Reeve, describing a flying trip through Egypt, Syria and the Aegean Islands; "Pilgrims in Palestine," with preface by Thomas Hodgkin to a narrative of a family journey through well-known lands; and "The Vikings in Western Christendom 789-888," by Charles F. Keary. To their series of Knickerbocker Nuggets they will add three volumes devoted to "Stories from the Arabian Nights," edited by Stanley Lane Poole. They will also issue "Principles of Social Economics," by George Gunton; "The Patient's Record," by Agnes P. Brennan; the second American edition of "A Manual of Clinical Diagnosis," by Dr. Otto Seifert and Dr. F. Müller, translated by W. B. Canfield; a new edition of "Cabin and Plantation Songs;" and a fourth edition of "A Bundle of Papers," by Albert Mathews, with addition of an index. For young people there will be "Under Orders," by Kirk Munroe, telling the trials and triumphs of a young reporter; "English Fairy Tales," collected by Joseph Jacobs, illustrated by John D. Batten; and "Dame Dimple's Christmas Celebration," by Mattie B. Banks.

PROF. MASSON'S new edition of the Collected Writings of De Quincey, published in this country by Macmillan & Co., is now approaching its end. Vol. 12, just ready, contains the first instalment of what the editor styles "tales, romances, and prose phantasies." Though the most famous of all that come under this heading—"The Spanish Military Nun," "Murder Considered as One of the Fine Arts," "The English Mail-Coach," and "Suspiria de Profundis"—are reserved for the following volume, the present one has a special character, as including the whole series of De Quincey's adaptations from the German, several of which are here brought together for the first time. About the bibliographical history of most of them Prof. Masson has something interesting to tell. Notably he has been able to discover the German original of "The Fatal Marksman," De Quincey's version of "Der Freischütz," and also to announce that it first appeared in an anonymous three-volume collection of "Popular Tales and Romances of the Northern Nations," published in the same year (1823) when De Quincey was contributing other German tales to the London Magazine. For the recovery of Tieck's "Love-Charms" Prof. Masson acknowledges his indebtedness to Mr. James Hogg. Meanwhile, it is worthy of note, says the Athenaeum, that not even this edition of De Quincey can be final, for Dr. Alexander H. Japp has quite recently been entrusted with the publication (with Mr. Heinemann) of a number of posthumous writings, including additional "Suspiria." The latter, as already announced, will be published in this country by the United States Publishing Co.

THE extraordinary statement is made that the complete works of Heine, translated by Charles F. Leland, are to be published in London.

M. OLLENDORF, of Paris, has in press "Le Prince Impérial—Napoléon IV.," by Count d'Hérissou, in which will be told the life-story of the ill-fated Prince Imperial.

TILLOTSON & SON, Bolton, Eng., will publish during the fall and winter a new story by Bret Harte, entitled "A Client of Col. Starbottle's," and Justin McCarthy's new story, "A Lying Vision." They have also arranged for a story by the Marquis of Lorne, to be published early in the new year.

C. TITTMAN, of Dresden, publishes a revised edition of his excellent collection of the plots of the best operas, which has had a well-merited success. "The Standard Opera-Glass," 4th edition, is clearly printed and handsomely bound, and to it is prefixed a portrait of the well-known Saxon songstress, Theresa Malten.

F. A. BROCKHAUS, Leipzig, publishes a new edition of "In Inner Africa," the exploration of the Kassai during the years 1883, 1884 and 1885, by Hermann Wissmann, Ludwig Wolf, Curt von François and Hans Müller, with more than 100 illustrations and 3 maps, with a preface by Major von Wissmann. This new edition also contains several fresh illustrations.

A SERIES of antiquarian and historical works is announced, to be commenced in London, during the coming season, under the title of The Camden Library. Among the subjects of the earlier volumes will be "The Antiquities of the Exchequer," "History of the Old London Theatres," "English Domestic Architecture" and a reprint of Camden's "Britannia" in a handy form. The series will be under the general editorship of Mr. T. F. Ordish.

JOHN MURRAY, London, will publish Princess Beatrice's translation from the German of Dr. E. Kraus' the "Adventures in the Life of Count George Albert of Erbach," who lived in the seventeenth century. The adventures include the Count's sojourn with the Knights of Malta, his capture by the Barbary Corsairs and his imprisonment at Algiers. The present Count of Erbach married the only sister of Prince Henry of Battenberg, and from him the papers are derived. He has just published "Jenny Lind, the Artist, 1820-1851," a memoir of her early art life and dramatic career, prepared from original papers in the possession of Mr. Goldschmidt by Canon Scott Holland and W. S. Rockstro. The work contains portraits and other illustrations.

MR. J. W. LINTON has ready, for subscribers only, his elaborate work on "The Masters of Wood-Engraving; a history of the art, by exhibition of the choicest works from the earliest times." His examples for reproduction have been sought in the Library and Print-Room of the British Museum, and are of great rarity and sifted excellence. There is nearly one inserted cut for every page of the 229 pages of text, besides "forty-eight unbacked page-subjects." The ordinary edition is limited to 500 copies, of which one-half are for this country. An edition of larger dimensions admits Harvey's "Dentatus" and Dürer's "Apocalypse" and "Greater Passion" and "Triumphal Car of Maximilian;" and this is limited to one hundred copies—one-half for America. The price for the small edition is $50; for the large edition, $100. Subscriptions are receivable by G. P. Putnam's Sons, No. 27 West 23d Street, New York.

TERMS OF ADVERTISING.

Under the heading "Books Wanted," subscribers only are entitled to a free insertion of five lines for books out of print, exclusive of address (in any issue except special numbers), to an extent not exceeding 100 lines a year. If more than five lines are sent, the excess is at 10 cents per line, and amount should be enclosed. Bids for current books and such as may be easily had from the publishers, and repeated matter, as well as all advertisements from non-subscribers, must be paid for at the rate of 10 cents per line.

Under the heading "Books for Sale," the charge to subscribers and non-subscribers is 10 cents per line for each insertion. No deduction for repeated matter.

Under the heading "Situations Wanted," subscribers are entitled to one free insertion of five lines. For repeated matter and advertisements of non-subscribers the charge is 10 cents per line.

All other small advertisements will be charged at the uniform rate of 10 cents per line. Eight words may be reckoned to the line.

Pacific Coast Scenic Tour.

From Southern California to Alaska. The Yosemite. The Canadian Pacific Railway. Yellowstone Park and the Grand Cañon. By HENRY T. FINK, author of "Romantic Love and Personal Beauty," and "Chopin, and Other Musical Studies." With 20 full-page illustrations. 8vo, $2.50.

Mr Fink's new book is a patriotic demonstration of the superiority of American scenery. The description, by so experienced a traveller and so vivacious a writer, of the character and accessibility of the natural grandeur of the Pacific Slope is as entertaining as it is valuable. The picture is more comprehensive than any heretofore attempted.

A New Book of Unique Value to all Students and Lovers of Literature.

A DIGEST OF English and American Literature.

By Prof. ALFRED H. WELSH, A.M.

Large 12mo, 384 Pages, $1.50.

This work, completed just before the death of the author, not only exhibits that original and inclusive mode of treatment which has made his "Development of English Literature and Language" famous, but also illustrates in its method and arrangement the most recent tendencies of literary criticism.

On opening the book four columns are displayed: the first records events, chosen to indicate the state of society and the progress of civilization at a given time; the second presents the chief characteristics of the social and political development during the same period; the third comprises brief biographies of authors, whose dominant traits of mind and character are used to interpret their writings; while the fourth column is devoted to criticisms of their works.

The book is arranged under a simple and comprehensive classification, an appendix and an alphabetical index adding materially to its value.

New Juveniles and New Editions

ON THE BLOCKADE

A NEW VOLUME BY OLIVER OPTIC IN "THE BLUE AND THE GRAY SERIES"

Emblematic dies Cloth, two colors Illustrated $1.50

"On the Blockade" is marked by all the popular features of the preceding volumes of the series, and deals with many of the same characters. The young readers will be interested in following the career of Christie Passford and his friends, whose varied experiences will be found full of interest, and we are sure they will never want to lay this volume down until the last page has been read. The author has written nothing more interesting or romantic than the Blue and the Gray Series, the scenes of which are connected with the Civil War, and many of them being founded on facts. The preceding volumes of this series, in uniform style, are "Taken by the Enemy" and "Within the Enemy's Lines."

WONDERFUL DEEDS AND DOINGS OF LITTLE GIANT BOAB AND HIS TALKING RAVEN TABIB

By Ingersoll Lockwood, author of "Travels and Adventures of Little Baron Trump and his Wonderful Dog Bulger," etc. Profusely illustrated by Clifton Johnson Quarto Cloth $2.00

The hero of this story is the grandson of Boabdil the Moor, and the book is an account of his marvellous adventures. His great strength begins to manifest itself soon after his birth, and thereafter he is perpetually performing wonderful feats. The narrative is told most entertainingly and naturally, and the interest is sustained throughout. A great deal of skill is displayed in the conduct of the romance, and a great deal of vigor in the descriptions. The talking raven and scolding parrot supply an element of comedy, and there is not wanting a touch of pathos. The whole forms a delightful romance for young readers and for the older reader who is not averse to a tale of the romantic and marvellous. The work is profusely illustrated by nearly one hundred and fifty drawings from the talented artist, Clifton Johnson.

STORIES OF THE CIVIL WAR

By Albert F. Blaisdell, A.M., author of "First Steps with American and British Authors," "Study of the English Classics," "Readings from the Waverley Novels," "Blaisdell's Temperance Physiology." Illustrated Cloth $1.00

A book of stories of the Great Civil War, the aim of which is to arouse in the younger generation, and those who may come after, a spirit of patriotism and a lively interest in the brave men who fought in the war. In making the selections the editor has endeavored to give such as are interesting, graphic and founded on fact, written in a lively, attractive style, and in clean language, principally by well-known writers. The book is illustrated by portraits and full-page cuts of some of the principal events.

HEROES and MARTYRS of INVENTION

BY GEORGE
MAKEPEACE TOWLE

Author of "Heroes of History," "Young People's History of England," "Young People's History of Ireland," "The Nation in a Nutshell," etc. Cloth Illustrated $1.00

Mr. Towle tells us the stories of Coster and Type-Printing, Gutenberg and the Printing-Press, Lee and the Stocking-Frame, Watt and the Steam-Engine, Davy and the Safety-Lamp, Nasmyth and his Steam-Hammer, the Stephenson, father and son, Fulton and the Steamboat, Goodyear and Gutta-Percha, Howe and the Sewing-Machine, and others, including Palissy the Potter and the Montgolfiers. There is a chapter on early inventions, and two on the invention of Cotton Machinery. The book is clear and simple in style, technicalities being avoided, and appeals in every way to the interest and sympathy of the young readers, for whom it was written, and with whom the author is so popular and successful.

THE KELP-GATHERERS

A NEW NOVEL BY J. T. TROWBRIDGE IN
"THE START IN LIFE SERIES"

Cloth Illustrated $1.00

The young people will be glad to know that, although Mr. Trowbridge is abroad, he has them in mind, and has written a story for them which they will thoroughly enjoy. The characters are drawn as only he can draw them, and all the boys will recognize them, for they live in their neighborhood. The story, with its adventures and lesson, is very entertainingly told and well illustrated. This makes the third volume in "The Start in Life" series, the preceding volumes of which are "A Start in Life," a story of the Genesee country; cloth, illustrated, $1.00; "Biding His Time, or Andrew Hapnell's Fortune;" cloth, illustrated, $1.00. The three volumes in a neat box.

PARDS A STORY OF TWO HOMELESS BOYS

By Effie W. Merriman, editor of "The Housekeeper," Minneapolis Cloth Illustrated $1.00

An interesting story of two homeless, destitute lads, who were devotedly attached to each other. Their gradual progress from absolute destitution to comfort and respectability is amusingly and naturally told. The scenes and incidents in their careers are portrayed in a manner to intensely interest children, and to impress upon them the duties owed to one another and a desire to improve.

A reviewer of long experience says, "Such a bright children's book as this has very seldom come within the range of my reading. It is certainly a long way ahead of many of the popular juveniles of the day."

HAVE NOW READY:

LORNA DOONE. A ROMANCE OF EXMOOR. By R. D. BLACKMORE, author of "Cradock Nowell," etc. Authorized American issue; with new preface specially written by the author for this edition. The Exmoor Edition. 3 vols., 16mo, $3.75.

PREFACE TO PUTNAM'S EXMOOR EDITION.

Certain pears of English birth have found their true home in the West, and grown to higher virtues than their mothers had engendered. Thus the "Good Christian," reared by Williams, and despatched from Turnham Green, became by adoption the great "Bartlett," and forgot humility. The founder of that fruit had pleasure—unalloyed with lucre—that a gallant people loved his work too well to let him own it. More proudly then should the poor producer of a fleeting flavor glory in the joy of larger expansion and gratitude gratuitous.

And now comes welcome news, that none but the wilder tribes of the West stand out for their wicked right to rob the orchards of the English laborer; or rather, to shoulder his pet lamb and rend it in the manner of the Doones. Worse than any Doones are these, who raven not only for their own gorge, but for the laying up of filthy lucre by the sale of stolen goods. The nation shall arise and sweep them out, and the wind toss their leaves away like a noisome stench.

This Lorna visits you not thus, by force of savage ravishers; but under escort of gentle men, fair knights of the order of Copyright. And if you ask her how it is—when so many better tales are told, and die upon the fitful wind—that her simple story still has life and buoyancy on the lips of men, she answers not, but drops her eyes and wonders more than you do; for neither has she skill of style, nor knowledge of the world, nor scheme of arduous humanity. Nothing but meek love of nature, and plain ungarnished words, and tongue that trembles when the heart is touched.

So shall the friend who writes indite of good-will to the friend who reads; though dreary waters stretch between them, and long travel of the sun.

Conditur oceano sol noster; vester abortus,
Lux nequit exstingui solis utrius—amor.

NOTES IN SEASON.

GEORGE A. LEAVITT & Co. fix the date of their annual holiday Trade Sale for December 2 and following days. No books will be sold that cannot be delivered immediately after close of the sale.

LONGMANS, GREEN & Co. will publish on the 3d inst. a cheap edition of William O'Brien's novel, "When We Were Boys," which will have a renewed interest in view of the excitement attending the author's adventurous coming to this country.

D. LOTHROP Co. publish this week "Dollikins and the Miser," by Francis Eaton; "Around the World with the Blue Jackets," by Lieut. H. E. Rhoades, U. S. N., and the "Story of Wisconsin," by Reuben Thwaites. They also announce new editions of "The Might of Right," selections from Gladstone for the Spare Minute Series, Clara Doty Bates' "Child Lore," a volume of "Poetical Quotations" in the Standard Series, and the story "Who Told It to Me?" by Margaret Sidney.

D. APPLETON & Co. will publish at once the final volumes (VII. and VIII.) of Lecky's "History of England in the Eighteenth Century," which will attract more attention than their predecessors, on account of their important contributions to the history of the Irish question; the 15th volume of the International Education Series, entitled "Higher Education of Women in Europe," by Miss Helene Lange of the Victoria Lyceum of Berlin, translated by Dr. L. R. Klemm, with a preface by Mr. Harris, the editor of the series; and Richard Malcolm Johnston's new story, "Widow Guthrie," illustrated by E. W. Kemble.

HOUGHTON, MIFFLIN & Co. have just issued another volume (vol. 34) of their "Modern Classics," a series which Dr. William T. Harris, U. S. Commissioner of Education, has called an "unrivalled list of excellent works." This new volume, entitled "Thackeray's Lighter Hours," contains "Dr. Birch and His Young Friends," "Selections from the Book of Snobs and the Roundabout Papers," and the "Curate's Walk." They have also just published as a Second Reader, "Fables and Folk Stories," phrased by Horace E. Scudder. This book contains literature which the world has chosen to remember. Mr. Scudder's literary taste, clearness of style and hearty sympathy with children have enabled him to clothe these classic stories in classic language, suitable for children who are prepared for a Second Reader. The first half of the "Fables and Folk Stories" has also been published as No. 47 of the Riverside Literature Series. The second half will be published on Dec. 3, as No. 48 of the same series.

CHARLES P. SOMERBY, 28 Lafayette Pl., N. Y., has just published an important little volume entitled "The French Invasion of Ireland in '98: Leaves of unwritten history that tell of an heroic endeavor and a lost opportunity to throw off England's yoke." The book has been written by Valerian Gribayedoff, the pioneer in newspaper illustration, and an artist whose more ambitious work has recently received marked honors in European art galleries. The subject is one which in English literature has received no notice at all, and in French histories but scant mention. The author uses as a basis a small work entitled "Jones' Narrative of the Insurrection in Connaught" which, strangely enough, was reprinted in Carlisle, Pa., in 1805, which he supplements by original research in the archives of the British Museum and the Bibliothèque de France. The leader of the invasion, General Humbert, passed the remainder of his life in America, where he served in the War of 1812. The book contains a number of illustrations by Harry Ogden, Edw. Siebert, Thomas McIlvaine, Baron C. de Grimm, Comerford, W. C. Filler, Charles Graham, and several portraits drawn by the author.

WEEKLY RECORD OF NEW PUBLICATIONS.*

The abbreviations are usually self-explanatory. s. after the date indicates that the book is copyrighted; if the copyright date differs from the imprint date, the year of copyright is added. Books of foreign origin of which the edition (annotated, illustrated, etc.) is entered as copyright, are marked c. ed.; translations, t. v.; m. p. in place of price, indicates that the publisher makes no price, either net or retail, and quotes prices to the trade only upon application.

A colon after initial designates the most usual given name, as: A: Augustus; B: Benjamin; C: Charles; D: David; E: Edward; F: Frederic; G: George; H: Henry; I: Isaac; J: John; L: Louis; N: Nicholas; P: Peter; R: Richard; S: Samuel; T: Thomas; W: William.

Sizes are designated as follows: F. (folio: over 30 centimeters high); (Q. 4to: under 30 cm.); O. (8vo: 25 cm.); D. (same: 20 cm.); S. (16mo: 17½ cm.); T. (same: 15 cm.); Tl. (same: 13½ cm.); Ps. (8mo: 10 cm.). Sq., obl. nov., designate square, oblong, narrow books of these heights.

Alger, Horatio, jr. Struggling upward; or, Luke Larkin's luck. Phil., Porter & Coates, [1890.] c. 333 p. il. D. (Way to success ser.) cl., $1.25.

The story of a young boy who lived in the village of Groveton; he was poor, but intelligent and honest. First he is shown with his companions at school; a skating trial is given, a watch being the prize; but Luke, though the real winner, through a trick played upon him by the boys, loses the watch. After some unusual experience, such as being accused of robbing a bank, the boy goes out into the world, and by dint of perseverance and courage, struggles to a position of importance and honor.

Allen, Elizabeth A. Gold nails to hang memories on: a rhyming review under their Christian names of old acquaintances in history, literature and friendship. N. Y., T. Y. Crowell & Co., [1890.] c. 6+324 p. O. cl., $2.50.

This is the most original autograph book ever published. It aims to give a history and record of the more or less familiar Christian names, and at the same time to commemorate the most familiar and famous men and women who have borne them. The book, therefore, has not only an interest of its own, but is distinctively educational. Spaces are left on each page for autographs.

Allen, Willis Boyd. The lion city of Africa. Bost., D. Lothrop Co., [1890.] c. 2+352 p. il. O. cl., $2.25.

David Livingston Scott and his friend Ned Hastings make a journey through Africa, and their experiences furnish much valuable information. Mr. Allen's story antedates Stanley. It is kept as far as possible within the bounds of fact, and the author makes clear the demarcation between fact and fiction. Pains have been taken to make all descriptions of the known people, places, animals and plants of Africa thoroughly accurate. Dedicated to Horace Lunt.

Arnold, Matthew. Sohrab and Rustum; ed. by Louise Manning Hodgkins. Bost., Leach, Shewell & Sanborn, [1890.] c. ed. 4+69 p. S. (Students' ser. of English classics.) cl., 30 c.

The object is to familiarize the American student with a noble portion of one of the least known of the great epics, "Sohrab and Rustum."

Bagnell, N. D. Poky Clarke: a story of Virginia. N. Y., Hunt & Eaton, 1890. c. 232 p. D. cl., 90 c.

Poky Clarke had an ever-present desire to preach the Gospel, but a lack of education prevented. The story tells of the advent of the Overtons in the Clarke home, and how this was the indirect incentive for "Bill U" to acquire the book-lore that enabled him to realize the dearest hopes of his father.

Baker, Sir S. W. Wild beasts and their ways: reminiscences of Europe, Asia, Africa, and America. N. Y., Macmillan & Co., 1890. 12+455 p. il. O. cl., $3.50.

In his descriptions of wild animals the author confines himself to those he has seen and studied and hunted. As he has been both a great traveller and a great hunter, his list includes all the larger and more famous wild beasts of the world. Adventures occurring in his hunting tours occupy a large portion of the volume. The details gathered from personal observation of the animals' habits are full of value.

Bayma, Jos. Elementary treatise on algebra for the use of beginners. 2d ed. rev., with an appendix. San Francisco, Cal., A. Waldteufel, 1890. c. '85. 118 p. D. hf. leath., $1.

Benet, S. Elgar. Summer thoughts for Yule tide; il. by L. K. Harlow. Bost., L. Prang & Co., [1890.] c. no paging, obl. Tl. bds., $1. Verses and pictures in colors; a souvenir.

Broughton, Rhoda. Alas! A novel. N. Y., United States Book Co., [1890.] c. 387 p. D. (Lovell's International ser., no. 132.) cl., $1; pap., 50 c.

A story of England and the continent. It is both gay and pathetic, as the author of "Not wisely, but too well," knows how to write.

Broughton, Rhoda. Alas! A novel. N. Y., G. Munro, [United States Book Co., 1890.] 2-387 p. D. (Seaside lib., pocket ed., no. 1599.) pap., 20 c.

Browne, W. Hand. George Calvert and Cecilius, Barons Baltimore of Baltimore. N. Y., Dodd, Mead & Co., [1890.] c. 10+181 p. por. D. (Makers of America ser., no. 2.) cl., 75 c.

George Calvert and his son Cecilius may claim to be founders of Maryland, 1605-1676. The author has been able to consult, in their originals, the ancient papers of the Calvert family, manuscripts unknown to previous historians, recently discovered in England among the litter and rubbish of an old conservatory, which have been acquired by the Maryland Historical Society. Both the Calverts had patience, humanity of disposition, moderation and steadiness of purpose. Index.

Bruce, H. Life of General Oglethorpe. N. Y., Dodd, Mead & Co., [1890.] c. 15+297 p. por. D. (Makers of America ser., no. 1.) cl., 75 c.

The first volume appearing in the series Makers of America, for which twenty-two volumes are already under way. General Oglethorpe was born in 1659 and died in 1735. The author gives a remarkable picture of England and America during that important century. The great life-work of Oglethorpe was the colonization of Georgia. Chronological table and full index.

Buffum, G. A. A driftwood fire; il. by F. Schuyler Mathews. Bost., L. Prang & Co., [1890.] c. no paging, sq. O. ribbon tied, bds., $1.

A poem with eight full-p. il. in colors, besides many vignettes.

Butterworth, Ezekiah. Zigzag journeys in the great Northwest; or, a trip to the American Switzerland. Bost., Estes & Lauriat, [1890.] c. 6-319 p. il. O. cl., $2.25; bds., $1.75.

This twelfth volume of the Zigzag books was written after a journey over the Canadian Pacific Railroad to Vancouver, the cities of the Puget Sound, and Columbia River. It gives in a picturesque way a view of the scenery, industrial opportunities, and romances of the great Northwest. There is a portrait and biographical sketch of Mr. Butterworth, which adds to the interest of the volume.

Calloway, Frances Bennett. The wit on the staircase. Buffalo, N. Y., P. Paul & Bro., 1890. no paging, obl. Tl. pap., 40 c.

Clever sayings from many sources grouped under: What is a bore? The charm of listening; The liar; The simple truth; They say; Sob rosa; The social satirist; Noncense etc.

* In this list, the titles generally are verbatim transcriptions (according to the rules of the American Library Association) from books received. Books not received are indicated by a prefixed asterisk and this office cannot be held responsible for the correctness of their record.

Castlemon, Harry, [pseud. for C: A. Fosdick.] Rodney the partisan; il. by G: G. White, Phil., Porter & Coates, [1890.] c. 2-424 p. D. (Castlemon's war ser.) cl., $1.25.

Rodney Gray was one of the boys of the Barrington Military Academy. The story opens with his return to his southern home, just before Sumter is fired upon. He joins the Southern army and has many adventures.

Champney, Elizabeth W. Three Vassar girls in Switzerland; il. by "Champ," and others. Bost., Estes & Lauriat, [1890.] c. 5-239 p. O. cl., $2; bds., $1.50.

With bits of Swiss life, descriptions of Swiss scenery, historic incidents and accounts of happenings at Geneva, Lucerne and the great St. Bernard, is interwoven a very interesting story, in which the Vassar girls figure again.

Chatterbox [1890]; ed. by J. Erskine Clarke. Bost., Estes & Lauriat, [1890.] c. '79-'90. 4+411 p. il. O. cl., $1.75; $2.25; bds., $1.25.

Condit, Rev. U. W. History of Eastern Pa., from Revolutionary times to the present. Easton, Pa., U. W. Condit, 1890. 500 p. il. roy. 8°, cl., $12.

Cox, Palmer. Another brownie book. N. Y., The Century Co. [1890.] c. 6+144 p. il. O. bds., $1.50.

Uniform in appearance and contents with the first Brownie book. The Brownies' snow-man; the Brownies in the academy; the Brownies in the orchard; the Brownies' yacht-race; the Brownies at archery; the Brownies fishing; the Brownies at Niagara Falls, etc., are a few of the subjects upon which Mr. Cox has exercised his pen and pencil. The Brownies are again of all nationalities, and the verses are as amusing as the pictures.

Oroker, B. M. Two masters: a novel. N. Y., G: Munro, [United States Book Co., 1890.] 4-298 p. D. (Seaside lib., pocket ed., no. 1607.) pap., 20 c.

Davidson, J. Thain, D.D. A good start: a book for young men. N. Y., A. C. Armstrong & Son, 1890. 4+283 p. D. cl., $1.25.

Talks to young men on: Something better than riches; The lover of pleasure; £50,000 sacrificed for pleasure; The city's wilderness; Men of pluck; Betting and gambling; The brave man of Ophrah; The northern iron; The brass-founder of Tyre; A lawyer seeking the light; The true test of religion, etc.

Degmann, Rev. Clementinus. A novena in honor of St. Francis Assisi, which may also be used on the five Sundays preceding the feast of the sacred stigmata. San Francisco, Cal., A. Waldteufel, 1890. c. 2-22 p. T. pap., 10 c.

Dock, Lavinia L., comp. Text-book of materia medica for nurses. N. Y., G: P. Putnam's Sons, 1890. c. 5+201 p. D. cl., $1.25.

Materia medica is made, to some extent, a part of the course in all our training schools for nurses; but, so far, no text-book has been prepared along the special lines followed in class recitations. It is in the hope of filling this want that this text-book has been compiled, and the attempt made to collect from all available sources the scattered points which concern a nurse, and to give them simply and directly. The outlines followed are those of the classes in materia medica as taught in Bellevue Training School for Nurses, and include: Something of the source and composition of drugs; their physiological actions; signs indicating their favorable or unfavorable results; the symptoms of poisons, with their antidotes, and practical points on administration.

Drake, S: Adams. The pine-tree coast. Bost., Estes & Lauriat, 1891 [1890.] c. 7-393 p. il. O. cl., $3; hf. roxburgh, $3.50.

Describes and illustrates the scenery, quaint outdoor life and romantic story of the more than 2000 miles of Maine seaboard. By the author of "Nooks and corners of the New England coast."

Ellis, E: S. The cabin in the clearing: a tale of the frontier. Phil., Porter & Coates, [1890.] c. 438 p. il. D. (Wyoming ser., no. 3.) cl., $1.25.

Thrilling adventures with the Indians, episodes of travel in the pioneer days of the west, with some love making, compose an interesting story for boys.

Etheridge, Mary Lee. Mrs. Muff and her friends. Bost., De Wolfe, Fiske & Co., [1890.] c. 9-153 p. O. cl., $1.

Eight stories about animals, for very small children, with full-p. il.

Everett, C: Carroll, D.D. The science of thought; new rev. ed. Bost., De Wolfe, Fiske & Co., [1890.] c. 10+430 p. D. cl., $1.50.

In the successive imprints of this book that have appeared since it was first published in 1869, no changes have been made except the correction of typographical and similar errors. In the present edition several alterations have been made, both in the way of addition and omission.

Farrington, Margaret Vere. Fra Lippo Lippi: a romance. N. Y., G: P. Putnam's Sons, 1890. c. 9+225 p. il. O. cl., $2.50.

A romance of Florence in the 15th century. The hero is the Carmelite monk Lippo Lippi, who is famous in the history of Italian art as a great fresco artist. His model for one of the madonnas he painted in the chapel of the convent of Santa Margharita was a young novice of noble birth. In spite of the Abbess' presence at the sittings, the artist and the nun find means to show they love each other. The love-tale has many episodes, and is gracefully and poetically related. The book is illustrated with 14 full-page photogravures of old paintings—mostly those of Fra Lippi.

Finck, H: T. The Pacific coast scenic tour: from Southern California to Alaska, the Canadian Pacific railway, Yellowstone Park and the Grand Cañon. N. Y., C: Scribner's Sons, 1890. c. 12+309 p. il. and map. O. cl., $2.50.

Climate and scenery, in the opinion of the enthusiastic author of "Romantic and personal beauty," make up fully one-half of human happiness. He describes the climate and scenery of the whole Pacific coast from San Diego to Sitka, dwelling particularly upon the beauty of Oregon and Washington. The country described "includes the grandest water-falls, the largest lakes, the finest river scenery and geysers, the most stupendous glaciers, and some of the most superb snow-peaks and ranges in the whole world; while the Yosemite and the Grand Cañon are absolutely unique and without rivals anywhere." The preface is dated from Tokio, Japan. Mr. Finck is certainly an experienced traveller.

Francis, Laurence H., ed. Through thick and thin; or, school-days at St. Egbert's. Bost., Estes & Lauriat, [1890.] c. 3-224 p. il. O. bds., $1.25.

An interesting account of English school life, giving the trials and tribulations of a new boy at school. Fully illustrated.

Fuller, Mabel Louise. In poppy land; il. by Elizabeth S. Tucker. Bost., De Wolfe, Fiske & Co., 1890. c. 5-214 p. il. D. cl., $1.25.

Seven delightful fairy-tales, each with a full-page picture; by the author of the successful novel of last year, "Aspen shade."

Fullerton, W. Y. God's jewels, their dignity and destiny. N. Y., American Tract Soc., [1890.] 123 p. il. S. cl., 60 c.

Facts concerning the principal known gems, finely applied to Christian character and life.

Gelbach, Wilhelm, ed. Das dritte buch für schule und haus. N. Y., E. Steiger & Co., [1890.] c. 5+168 p. O. hf. leath., 70 c.

Gladden, Washington. Santa Claus on a lark; and other Christmas stories. N. Y., The Century Co., 1890. c. 3+178 p. il. O. cl., $1.25.

A collection of Christmas stories, some of which have been published in St. Nicholas in past years. The type is large and the pictures very pretty.

Gronlund, Laurence. The co-operative commonwealth. New rev. ed. Bost., Lee & Shepard, 1890. 304 p. 16°, cl., $1; pap., 50 c.

Hale, E: Everett. The story of a dory, told in verse, by E: Everett Hale, and salted down picturesquely by F. Schuyler Mathews. Bost.

Halo (The) and other selections, il. by Elizabeth Gilman. Bost., L. Prang & Co., [1890.] c. no paging il. obl. D. bds., $1.

Poetical selections in monochrome, a souvenir

Hamilton, G. W. Finding Blodgett: the story of a boy and his dog. Bost., D. Lothrop Co., [1890.] c. 2 + 160 p. il. D. cl., $1.25.

The story is one of twenty-five years ago in the sheep counties of Pennsylvania. It has a bright, manly boy and a clever faithful collie dog for heroes. Glimpses of the country in war time are given and many interesting descriptions, but the story is especially notable for its simple, straightforward telling of a fight against the heavy odds of poverty and trouble.

Hurlbut, Jesse L., D. D. and Doherty, Rob. R. Illustrative notes: a guide to the study of Sunday-school lessons for 1891. N. Y., Hunt & Eaton, 1890. c. 3-395 p. map and il. O. cl., $1.25.

Includes original and selected expositions, plans of instruction, illustrative anecdotes, practical applications, archaeological notes, library references, maps, picture diagrams.

Jäger, Henrik. Henrik Ibsen, 1828-1888, a critical biography from the Norwegian, by W. Morton Payne. Chic., A. C. McClurg & Co., 1890. c. 2-275 p. por. and il. D. cl., $1.50.

The translator had for some time been contemplating a critical essay upon Ibsen, when Henrik Jäger's work came into his hands. He considered that Jäger clearly outlined Ibsen, carefully defined and distinctly stated his message and gave a broad sympathetic analysis and criticism to the long series of his works, and therefore made a translation of Jäger, instead of writing his proposed essay. Contains several portraits of Ibsen.

Jefferson, Joseph. Autobiography. N. Y., Century Co., [1890] c. '89-'90, 3 + 501 p. por. and il. O. vellum, $4.

Rich in anecdotes of celebrated actors and actresses, and full of the most entertaining episodes taken from Mr. Jefferson's own experience in his long life as an actor, this autobiography must rank as one of the most valuable and interesting volumes relating to contemporary stage life yet published. In its course through the Century Magazine it attracted universal attention. Now, in the beautiful shape given it in book form, it promises to be one of the most popular holiday books. There are 75 full-page portraits of actors and actresses. The book is fine y printed and handsomely bound in white and gold.

Juvenal ["Juvenalis."] The satires of Juvenal; [Latin.] ed. by T. B. Lindsay. N. Y., American Book Co., [1890.] c. 16 + 226 p. por. and il. S. (Appleton's classical ser.) hf. leath., $1.

The text of this edition agrees in the main with that of Bücheler's edition of Jahn. Several of the satires are omitted, and in those which are retained the editor has omitted all lines that seemed likely to offend a rational delicacy. The notes are the result of several years' experience, careful study, and a comparison of the views of the best editors, especially J. Ruperti, Heinrich, Jahn, MacLennan, Mayor, Weidner and Bücheler.

Keddie, Miss Henrietta, ["Sarah Tytler," pseud.] A household of girls. N. Y., T. Whittaker, 1890. 3 + 408 p. D. cl., $1.50.

Dr. Miller's daughters are the heroines. The story opens in Redcross, and tells of their prompt action during the time of a business crisis, why Anne and Rose went to London, of Dora's action in regard to her first proposal, and ends with two romantic incidents in the lives of Anne and Dora. This novel, of English middle class life depends solely on incident for interest.

Lockey, W. E. Hartpole. A history of England in the eighteenth century, v. 7. N. Y., Appleton, 1890. 14 + 465 p. O. cl., $2.25.

In the final volumes (7 and 8—v. 8 will be issued shortly) the author makes important and timely contributions to the history of the Irish question. He shows that the abatement of Irish landlords has been responsible to a very large extent for the abuses which have attended the management of Irish property. At the same time he main- tains that improvidence and ignorance have been the principal cause of the serious congestion of population in certain portions of Ireland where the soil is poor and unfitted to support so many people. Mr. Lockey blames the middle-men and the farmers for the extortion which has resulted from the system of comparative rents during the last two centuries. He traces the rise and progress of Fenianism and the agrarian movement, and denounces some of its accompaniments. He declares his belief that the Fenians have not abandoned any of the ulterior objects of their organization.

Longfellow, H. Wadsworth. The song of Hiawatha; il. by F. Remington. Bost., Houghton, Mifflin & Co., 1891 [1890.] c. '55-'90 18 + 242 p. O. buckskin, $6; large-pap. ed. O. vellum, $15.

A new Christmased of this favorite poem. The illustrations consist of 32 full-page photographs and about 400 text il. of Indians, Indian costumes, implements, arms, etc., animals and scenery, by F. Remington. They represent with the utmost fidelity the Indian elements which the poem describes. The buckskin cover is something new, it has an original characteristic design by Mrs. Henry Whitman.

Lowell, J. Russell. The writings of J. R. Lowell. New Riverside ed. In 10 v. V. 7 and 8, Poems. Bost., Houghton, Mifflin & Co., 1890. 8 + 312, 5 + 437 p. por. 8°, cl., ea., $1.50. Large-pap. ed., $4.

Martin, E. Sandford. A little brother of the rich, and other verses. N. Y., C. Scribner's Sons, 1890. c. 7 + 91 p. D. cl., $1.25.

Issued in 1888, under the imprint of Mitchell & Miller. See notice, P. W., "Weekly Record," June 9, '88, [84.]

Mason, E. Campbell. The veto power: its origin, development and function in the government of the United States (1789-1889); ed. by Albert Bushnell Hart. Bost., Ginn & Co., 1890. c. 232 p. O. (Harvard historical monographs, no. 1.) pap., $1.10.

The object of the present monograph is to trace the development and operation of the veto power in the government of the United States. The work is wholly the result of an examination of the sources. The basis of the study is a list of the Presidential vetoes, compiled from the records of Congress, and covering the period from the foundation of the present form of government in 1789 to the end of President Cleveland's administration, March 4, 1889. For convenience of comparison the vetoes have been classified according to subject; and to the discussion of these classes the greater part of the work is devoted.

Mathews, F. Schuyler, comp. The golden flower chrysanthemum: verses, by Edith M. Thomas, R. H. Stoddard, Alice Ward Bailey, [and others], il., with reproductions of studies from nature, in water-color, by J. E. Sidney Callowhill, Alois Lunzer, and F. S. M. Bost., L. Prang & Co., [1890.] c. no paging, Q. hf. cl., $10.

This volume is made up of 34 exquisitely colored and printed plates. The half are beautiful specimens of the flower which gives its name to the book, the other half are verses enclosed in graceful emblematical borders. Bound in sage green cloth and yellow India silk, with cover design in gold and colors.

Merrill, G. E. Crusaders and captives; a tale of the children's crusade (thirteenth century). Bost., De Wolfe, Fiske & Co., [1890.] c. 2-299 p. D. cl., $1.

The general course of these pages follows with accuracy the story of that strange event of the middle ages known as the children's crusade. No attempt to write history has been made, the tale being simply illustrative. The reader will recognize the Holy Stephen, the two merchants of Marseilles, and a few other characters as historic.

Ober, F. A. The Knockabout Club in North Africa. Bost., Estes & Lauriat, [1890.] c. 4-240 p. il. O. cl., $2; bds., $1.50.

An account of a trip along the coast of the Dark Continent, caravan journeys, and a visit to a pirate city, with stories of lion hunting and life among the Moors. With many full-p. il.

O'Donnell, Jessie F., comp. Love poems of three centuries, 1590-1890. N. Y., G. P. Putnam's Sons, [1890.] c. 2 v., 36 + 348; 15 + 364 p. T. (Knickerbocker nuggets, no. 29.) bl. cl., $2.

Putnam, G. P., comp. Tabular views of universal history: a series of chronological tables presenting in parallel columns a record of the more noteworthy events in the history of the world from the earliest times down to 1890; continued to date by Lynds E. Jones. N. Y.: G. P. Putnam's Sons, 1890. c. 3+211 p. D. hf. leath., $1.75.

This chronology of historical events originally compiled by the late George P. Putnam and forming a part of his comprehensive cyclopædia on "The world's progress," has been carefully revised and brought down to the present time by Lynds E. Jones. It is now issued in a separate form, in the trust that every one who needs at his elbow a convenient manual of dates may find his requirements satisfied in this volume. To teachers especially it is hoped that it may prove an important aid in imparting instruction.

Rand, Rev. E. A. Too late for the tide-mill. N. Y., T. Whittaker, 1890. c. 3+307 p. il. D. (Look ahead ser.) cl. $1.25.

Opens in Seaton, a New England village. The theme is Tim Shattuck and his predominant fault—a desire to put off duties until the last moment. When sent to have some corn ground he arrived after the miller had stopped the mill, and was told there was such a thing as being "too late for the tide-mill," and cautioned to avoid a recurrence of this in the future. Tim's application of this advice is shown in a later incident that occurs in the old mill. The author aims to show up procrastination which has for its motive self-indulgences, and to teach other moral lessons.

Reinick, C. Night song; il. by H. Sandham. Bost., Estes & Lauriat, [1890.] c. no paging. P. cl., $7.50.

A brief poem by C. Reinick, each line of which suggests a picture. The pictures, 16 in number, were first paintings in oil by H. Sandham, and are reproduced by photographic process and printed in tints. There are an equal number of decorative pages facing the pictures, done first in pen and ink.

Richards, Laura E. Captain January. Bost., Estes & Lauriat, 1891 [1890.] c. 4+64 p. D. cl., 50 c.

A little girl baby is the only thing saved from a wreck by Capt. January, a lighthouse keeper on the coast of Maine. The life this little "Star" and the Captain lead on the barren island that is their home, is quaintly pictured. When "Star" is ten years old, an uncle and aunt discover her and would take her away from the old Captain. The ending is very pathetic.

Russell, W. Clark. My shipmate Louise. N. Y., G. Munro, [United States Book Co., 1890.] 1+358 p. D. (Seaside lib., pocket ed., no. 1603.) pap., 20 c.

Sanderson, Edgar. Epitome of the world's history, ancient, mediæval and modern, with special relation to the history of civilization and the progress of mankind; rev. and condensed with emendations and new matter, by J. Hardiman. Pt. 1, Ancient and Mediæval. Bost., Boston School Supply Co., 1890. c. 9+464 p. il. maps, cl., $1.20.

The American editor's work has been chiefly in the way of revision of the English author's style, the removal of some partisan epithets and characterizations, the putting the work in accord with the authorities of the present day, and the supplying of omissions in the narrative.

Schubert, Ossip. [pseud. for Lola Kirschner.] Asbelin; from the life of a virtuoso; tr. by Elise L. Lathrop. N. Y., Worthington Co., 1890. c. tr. 341 p. D. (Rose lib., no. 2) cl., $1; pap., 50 c.

An Arabian legend tells that when the Devil, banished from heaven, resolved to make use of music for the temptation of mankind, the Almighty robbed him of memory, so he could recall but a single strain, which received the name of "Asbelin," the Devil's strain. A musical story of which the hero, though appearing as a violinist, is said to be intended for Anton Rubinstein. Marriage with a Russian princess does not satisfy the restless ambition of his genius. The peculiar trials of the wife of a genius are worked into an interesting plot.

Shuylar, Eugene. Peter the Great, Emperor of Russia: a study of historical biography. New cheaper ed. N. Y., C: Scribner's Sons, 1890. c. '84-'90. 2 v., 18+445, 10+560 p. map and il. O. cl., $6.

See notice, "Weekly Record," P. W., March 29, '84, [635.] This work was first issued in 1884. Aside from its literary importance, it is noticeable for its wealth of excellent illustrations.

Schwab, I. (Rabbi.) The Sabbath in history. St. Joseph, Mo., St. Joseph Steam Pr. Co., 1889. c. '89. 2 pts., 3-132, 133-320 p. O. pap., $1.25.

A research into the observances of the Sabbath, and the position held toward it in the past both by Christians and Jews. The author's purpose is both religious and scientific. The first part consists of four articles: 1, From Nehemiah to the age of the Antonines; 2 and 3, Pagan writers on the Jewish religion and the Sabbath; 4, Roman writers on the Jewish Sabbath. Pt. 2 is devoted to a discussion of the Sabbath with Jesus, as to doctrine and practice, the Sabbath in the apostolic age, the Sabbath with the Jewish Christian sects, the Nazarenes and Ebionites; the Sabbath in Pauline and Gentile Christianity.

Schwab, J. Christopher. History of the New York property tax: an introd. to the history of state and local finance in New York. [N. Y., American Economic Assoc., 1890. c. 4-108 p. O. (Publications of American Economic Assoc., v. 5, no. 5) pap., $1.

Divided into four periods of time—the Dutch period, 1623-1664; the English period, 1664-1683; the colonial assembly, 1683-1777, and the constitutional period, 1777-1890. A list of authorities.

Soudder, Vida D. An introduction to the writings of John Ruskin. Bost. Leach, Shewell & Sanborn, [1890.] c. 5+259 p. S. (Student's ser. of English classics.) cl., 54 c.

A selection from Ruskin's writings intended primarily for the use of students. The principles by which the selections have been chosen are, first, to find passages fairly typical of Ruskin's most characteristic modes of thought, and to place them, in just proportion, under clearly defined heads; second, to represent as many of his books as possible; third, to avoid, so far as consistent with the other two principles, passages hackneyed from use in other collections.

Sharp, W. Children of to-morrow; a romance. N. Y., G. Munro, [United States Book Co., 1890.] 1+312 p. D. (Seaside lib., pocket ed., no. 1559.) pap., 20 c.

Smith, H. R., D.D. System of Christian theology; ed., by W. S. Karr, D.D. 4th ed. rev. with an introd. by T. S. Hastings, D.D. N. Y., A. C. Armstrong & Son, 1890. c. '84-'90. 8+641 p. O. cl., $2.

Smith, Mrs. L. T. [formerly L. T. Meade.] Heart of gold. N. Y., United States Book Co., [1890.] c. 2-118 p. D. (Lovell's International ser., no. 120.) cl., $1. pap., 50 c.

An English story of two sisters who lose their mother just as they are going into society. With their mother they also lose all their money. The story deals with the joys and trials of their lives, one sister being adopted by a wealthy aunt, the other preferring poverty and independence.

Stoddard, W. O. Crowded out o' Crofield; or, the boy who made his way. N. Y., Appleton, 1890. c. 3-261 p. il. O. cl., $1.50.

Jack Ogden was fifteen years old and the son of the blacksmith Crofield, where he lived, was a sleepy country town. Jack had tried in many ways to earn a living there, and finally determined to leave it. His adventures on the way to New York City, and while in New York, are varied and full of instruction.

Tolstoi, Count Lyof N. Toil. Chfc., C: H. Sergel & Co., 1890. 12", pap., 25 c.; 50 c.; cl., $1.

Vernon, R. James Calvert; or, from dark to dawn in Fiji. N. Y. and Chfc., Fleming H. Revell, 1890. 160 p. il. 12", (Missionary biography ser., no. 11.) cl., 75 c.

Walker, Lola Mae, comp. Dreams of the sea; selected and arranged by Lola Mae Walker. Bost., Estes & Lauriat, 1890. c. no paging. il. obl. D. bds., $2.50.
Choice selections from celebrated writers, interwoven with pictures of the sea. The pages are all printed in delicate tints. A holiday gift-book.

Warden, Florence. [pseud. for Florence Alice Price; now Mrs. G. E. James.] Missing—a young girl. N. Y., United States Book Co., [1890.] 121 p. D. (Lovell's Westminster ser., no. 15.) pap., 25 c.

Wilkinson, J. A. A real Robinson Crusoe: being the story of the strange yet true experiences of a company of castaways on a Pacific Island; ed. from the survivor's own narrative. Bost., D. Lothrop Co., [1890.] c. 3+339 p. il. D. cl., $1.25.
This story is vouched for as true in every particular. It is the story of the experiences of a party of six castaways—four men and two women—on a South Pacific island. Of the six, five were simply aristocratic do-nothings. One alone had brains, cleverness, ingenuity and aptitude. The story of what he accomplished with only an axe as his aid is simply marvellous.

Willcox, G. B., D.D. The pastor amidst his flock. N. Y., American Tract Soc., [1890.] c. 2-186 p. D. cl., $1.

A treasure-house of practical suggestions on the whole range of pastoral duties, drawn from many years of experience and observation. It is unique in interest and value for theological students and young pastors.

Wood's (W. & Co.) medical and surgical monographs: consisting of original treatises and reproductions in English of books and monographs selected from the latest literature of foreign countries. V. 8, no 1. N. Y., W: Wood & Co., 1890. c. 5+253 p. il. O. pap., $1.
Contents: Suppuration and septic diseases, by W. Watson Cheyne; Pharmacopœia for diseases of the skin, by Jas. Startin; The nasal neuroses, by Granville Macdonald, M.D.; Artificial respiration: the theory and practice, by B. W. Richardson, M.D.; The new-born infant, its physiology and nourishment, by Dr. A. Auvard; The urine in neurotic diseases, by Dr. Alex. Peyer.

Yonge, Charlotte M. The slaves of Sabinus, Jew and Gentile. N. Y., T: Whittaker, 1890. 5+246 p. D. cl., $1.50.
The story opens A.D. 71 and pictures the incident that made the heathens, Julius Sabinus and Eponina his wife, fugitives and dependent upon two slaves, Eadras and Telamon, Jew and Gentile, who both in time became Christians, and bring about the conversion of their master. A very good idea is given of the Christian church in the time of the Roman Emperor Vespasian. The main incidents are facts according to Plutarch.

The Publishers' Weekly.

FOUNDED BY F. LEYPOLDT.

NOVEMBER 1, 1890.

The editor does not hold himself responsible for the views expressed in contributed articles or communications.

All matter, whether for the reading-matter columns or our advertising pages, should reach this office not later than Wednesday noon, to insure insertion in the same week's issue.

In case of business changes, notification or card should be immediately sent to this office for entry under "Business Notes." New catalogues issued will also be mentioned when forwarded.

Publishers are requested to furnish title-page proofs and advance information of books forthcoming, both for entry in the lists and for descriptive mention. An early copy of each book published should be forwarded, to insure correctness in the final entry.

"Every man is a debtor to his profession, from the which, as men do of course seek to receive maintenance and profit, so ought they of duty to endeavor themselves by way of amends to be a help thereunto."—LORD BACON.

PUBLISHERS AND AUTHORS.

MR. G. W. SMALLEY, the gifted English correspondent of the New York Tribune, makes frequent opportunity to arraign the publishers for their dealings with authors. The burden of his complaint is the underpaid author and the overpaid publisher. In his recent articles concerning the dispute between the venerable Archdeacon Farrar and Cassell & Co. (Limited), he makes rather broad the conclusion that most publishers are growing rich at the expense of the authors. It might be of benefit to the public if Mr. Smalley would enumerate the publishing houses that have amassed fortunes or gained large pecuniary results from their profession. If one could carefully obtain a list of those houses, and especially in America, it would, perhaps, not be wide of the truth to affirm that those who have made a competency could be readily counted, while those who have failed to make a bare living are innumerable.

It seems almost a moral wrong to educate the public in the belief that men who have given years of labor, and all the money they possess, to the task of disseminating knowledge, are capable of so bold and flagrant a wrong as Mr. Smalley's accusations imply. In the publishing business as elsewhere, men devoid of principle are to be found; but by implication to allow such a blot to be cast upon the fraternity as a class, is an imputation as unjust as it is untrue. Canon Farrar was quite willing to accept without question Messrs. Cassell's offer. It was a venture—and all publishing is a venture—the publishers were willing to take. The offer was a liberal one, and entirely at the author's option either to refuse or accept. The book proved an unusual success, and undoubtedly Cassell & Co. derived large profit from its sale; but Mr. Smalley does not tell the public how many dollars made out of the profits of this one book were sunk in other ventures that terminated disastrously, nor does he mention how many years and how much money it has cost the publishers to establish the imprint that undoubtedly first carried the sale of Canon Farrar's book. He insists that the Messrs. Cassell & Co. should give to the public an account of the net profits they have made out of this one transaction. In making this demand, Mr. Smalley overlooks the fact that the point he is arguing may be as applicable to his profession as to authors and publishers. It is to be presumed that he has received pecuniary reward for his able contributions to the Tribune, and that his pen has had something to do towards strengthening its constituency and widening its circulation. Does Mr. Smalley feel that he has participated in the profits of the Tribune to a larger proportionate extent than Canon Farrar did in the profits Messrs. Cassell & Co. made out of "The Life of Christ"? Is Mr. Smalley quite willing to tell the public the pecuniary compensation he received for his literary work, and the Tribune to give to the public the yearly profits, that the public may sit in judgment and pass upon the question as to Mr. Smalley's compensation?

The principle that Mr. Smalley endeavors to establish in literature is not applicable to mercantile transactions. For example: if a clerk in a house draws a salary of $3000 and sells $100,000 for his employer, upon which his employer nets a profit of $10,000, has the clerk a "moral right" to take his employer to task for underpaying him? A man invents a useful machine, patents it, and sells the patent for $100,000 to some firm, who, by a judicious investment of capital involving risk and toil, make a large fortune out of it. Has the man, who was satisfied with the sale, a moral right to participate in the after-profits which his patent has realized? These cases are parallel, and it seems strange that any question should have been raised as to the moral right of Canon Farrar to participate further in the sale of a book, for which he was paid what he considered an ample sum. There seems to be a growing tendency for the public to interfere with private enterprises. The result is lack of confidence and boldness of assertions that are often both incorrect and maliciously false.

We learn from Senator Hoar that the clause in favor of professors and teachers which appeared in the original draft of paragraph 515 of the Tariff bill (referred to in our last issue) was not adopted by the Senate. It was reported by the Committee and then withdrawn. There was therefore no omission, as was supposed. It was only a proposed amendment which was withdrawn. The paragraph in the bill as enacted reads as follows:

Free List, Section 2. ¶ 515. Books, maps, lithographic prints and charts, specially imported, not more than two copies in any one invoice, in good faith, for the use of any society incorporated or established for educational, philosophical, literary or religious purposes, or for the encouragement of the fine arts or for the use or by order of any college, academy, school or seminary of learning in the United States, subject to such regulations as the Secretary of the Treasury shall prescribe.

NOTE.—Italics represent new matter.

A MOVEMENT is afoot among certain printers in New York City that will, for a time at least, revolutionize plain book composition in the East. A number of printing houses—such as Trow, De Vinne, Little, Rogers and others—have formed an organization which is to undertake type-setting for the trade, employing for that purpose type-setting machines or typographs. For years publishers in New York have sent the bulk of their book composition out of the city to New Jersey, up the Hudson, to Connecticut, some of it even going to Boston, because the prices in those places were from twenty to fifty per cent. cheaper than here. While sending work away has been a saving in cost, it has often been attended with annoyances that made it impracticable to send out work which needed particular attention. The projectors of the new company, recognizing this, have taken advantage of the many recent improvements in type-setting machinery, and, beginning with the new year, will make an effort to control all the work that is turned out by New York publishing houses. They will be able to compete with the smallest country office as to prices, and as an additional advantage, by the use of machinery, will be able to turn out as much work in a day as could formerly be turned out by hand in a week. This will be a direct saving to the publishing trade, and ought to contribute towards the movement of making cheaper books

THE FARRAR-CASELL CONTROVERSY.

AT the recent Church Congress in Hull, which dealt with questions of morals as well as religion, Archdeacon Farrar, in an address, made the remark that "he might expose the dishonorable customs which tainted the trade of publishers, and speak of sweating publishers who, without a blush, would toss to the author perhaps a hundredth part of what, by bargains grossly inequitable, they had obtained." This remark was taken up, in rather strong language, by Mr. J. Russell Endean in the London Times, to which the Archdeacon replied by correcting a number of errors in the newspaper report of his remarks. The Archdeacon's letter induced Cassell & Co. to reply to it in the following communication:

"SIR. We had not intended to notice the language which Archdeacon Farrar has seen fit to use with regard to the commercial morality of this country in general, and of publishers in particular, feeling that charges so vague and so manifestly exaggerated might safely be left to the judgment of the public; but your correspondent in the Times of to-day makes an appeal to those publishers who have had transactions with Archdeacon Farrar to say whether the charges which he brings against the 'trade of the publisher' are or are not well founded.

"As we are well known as the publishers of three of Archdeacon Farrar's most important works, we think we are entitled to ask you to allow us to make a brief statement in reply to Mr. Russell Endean's letter.

"First of all, let us repeat the passage from Archdeacon Farrar's speech to which Mr. Russell Endean refers. It is in the following words: 'I might expose the dishonorable customs which tainted the trade of the publisher, and speak of sweating publishers, who without a blush would toss to the author perhaps a hundredth part of what, by bargains grossly inequitable, they had obtained.'

"We shall now proceed to show how far this language is applicable to ourselves in our dealings with the gentleman who has made use of it. More than 20 years ago we projected a work which was to be a 'Popular Life of Christ.' The whole scheme of that work as well as its general character was conceived in this house. The idea having been put in a concrete form, we entered into negotiations with one or two popular writers for the production of the book; but these negotiations falling through, our attention was drawn to Mr., now Archdeacon, Farrar. It is no disparagement to Archdeacon Farrar's present position to say that at that time (1870) he was comparatively unknown, and had certainly not gained any great reputation in literature. We laid before him the proposal that he should write a 'Popular Life of Christ' on the lines suggested by ourselves, and offered him for the copyright of this work the sum of £500, with an additional sum of £100 as a contribution towards the expense of a visit to the Holy Land in connection with the writing of the work. This offer he accepted, and he duly produced the book which has since attained so wide a fame. We were the first to recognize, not only the exceptional merit of his work, but the popularity which it quickly attained, though we venture to point out that such popularity was at least in part to be attributed to the heavy expenditure on which we embarked in order to make it known to the reading world. In fact, we doubt if any book of the kind has ever been so extensively advertised as this work written by the clergyman who now protests against the iniquity of advertising. Archdeacon Farrar duly received in 1873 the sum we had agreed to pay him for writing the 'Life of Christ'; but in consideration of the success of the work we paid him in 1874 an additional sum of £200, in 1875 a further sum of £350, besides an honorarium of £100 for the preparation of an index; in 1876, £200; in 1877, £250, in 1878, £205, and in 1881, £100. Thus for the work for which we had covenanted to pay only £600, and which was absolutely our own property, we voluntarily paid in addition £14 making £2005 in all. We leave your readers to determine whether such action is to be regarded as dishonorable, or whether those who take it are open to the taunt of being 'sweating publishers.'

"This, however, does not exhaust the story of our dealings with Archdeacon Farrar. After he had written the 'Life of Christ,' he agreed to write for us a similar 'Life of St. Paul.' By this time both he and ourselves knew the pecuniary value of his work. For the writing of 'St. Paul' we agreed to pay him the sum of £1000 down. Subsequently Mr. Farrar informed us that, in consequence of the great success of the 'Life of Christ,' he had received an offer of £2000 and a royalty from another firm of publishers for a similar book. Although under no compulsion to do so, we at once raised our own payment for the 'Life of St. Paul' to the amount thus offered to him by another house. The result is that he has received up to the present date, including a royalty of £2333 17s. 1d., a sum of £4333 17s. 1d. for this particular book. Again we leave your readers to judge whether there was anything inequitable in a bargain which had results such as these for the author.

"A third work was also written by Archdeacon Farrar for us. This was 'The Early Days of Christianity.' We agreed to pay him the same terms as for the 'Life of St. Paul.' He received £2000 on writing the book, and it is only because this work has failed to attain the success of his earlier books that the additional royalty paid to him has amounted to the comparatively small sum of £400.

"We have thought it only just, both to ourselves and to Archdeacon Farrar, to give an explicit statement of our relations to him as publishers, and can only repeat that we leave your readers to judge whether the heated language he used at the Church Congress has any application to ourselves.

"We are, sir, your obedient servants,

"CASSELL & COMPANY (Limited).

"La Belle Sauvage, Ludgate Hill, E.C., Oct. 7."

The controversy has called out a host of correspondence from English publishers and authors, the most important of which is reprinted in the London Publishers' Circular of October 15, which devotes six pages to letters from Messrs. Endean, T. Dixon Galpin, A. W. Tuer, Walter Besant, E. Marston, Archdeacon Farrar and others.

THE ENCYCLOPÆDIA BRITANNICA SUITS.

JAMES T., Francis and Adam W. Black, publishers of the original edition of the Encyclopædia Britannica on the 30th ult. filed in the United States Circuit Court a supplemental bill of complaint against Samuel W. and Julius S. Ehrich, of New York, setting forth among other things that the defendants are guilty of infringement on the American copyright of the articles "Albert Galatin," by Henry Cabot Lodge; "Galveston," by Major-General Q. A. Gilmore; "Garrison, an outline of his life," by Oliver Johnson; "Georgia," by Samuel A. Drake; "Horace Greeley," by Whitelaw Reid; "Alexander Hamilton," by George Shea; "Lafayette," by John Bigelow; "Modern History and the present distribution of North American Indians," and "Indian Territory," by Henry Garnett; "Abraham Lincoln," by John C. Nicolay; "Henry Wadsworth Longfellow," by Thomas Alden; "Maine," by Joseph L. Chamberlain;

"Maryland," by W. T. Brantly; "Massachusetts," by Justin Winsor; "United States, Part I., History and Constitution," by Alexander Johnston; "United States, Part II., Physical Geography and Statistics," by Josiah D. Whitney; "United States, Part III., Political Geography and Statistics," by Francis A. Walker. The defendants, it is alleged, put on the market a reprint of the work, but when suit was brought against them, left out of the book the articles that have been copyrighted in this country. The Messrs. Black, however, deny the right of the defendants to use the name "Encyclopædia Britannica," Ninth Edition, as the title of a book which does not contain the copyrighted articles.

KIPLING AND HARPER & BROTHERS.

THE London Athenæum recently printed an absurd paragraph to the effect that a year or so ago, when Mr. Kipling called on Messrs. Harper and offered them for reprinting "Soldiers Three, etc.," he "was speedily shown the door, and told that a firm devoted to the publication of literature of a high class could not trouble itself about such writings as his." That after Mr. Kipling became famous the Harpers "picked out of the magazines some six stories of Mr. Kipling's without asking his permission, . . . and printed them as a volume. They have sent Mr. Kipling a letter containing a bald announcement of the fact and a sum of £10, which has been promptly returned."

To this the Harpers have made answer as follows:

To the Editor of the Athenæum:

DEAR SIR: The paragraph in your issue of the 4th inst. indicates that you have been misinformed respecting the relations between Mr. Rudyard Kipling and ourselves. The statements therein made are so at variance with the facts that we feel justified in assuming that they could not have been derived from Mr. Kipling himself. The facts are these:

In September, 1889, Mr. Kipling called upon us in person with a letter of introduction from Mr. E. A. Abbey, and was, of course, courteously received. He submitted for examination several Indian stories, and they were at once shown to our readers, whose opinions were unfavorable.

In December of the same year the volume entitled "Plain Tales from the Hills" was forwarded to us by our London agent. This having been one of the books originally submitted by Mr. Kipling, it was again declined.

The stories included in the only volume which we have issued of Mr. Kipling's works, and which forms the subject of your comment, have been put forth since our declination of Mr. Kipling's earlier volume, and have been recently published by us in our Franklin Square Library. All of them save one, "The Incarnation of Krishna Mulvaney," had been previously published in Harper's Weekly. They were offered to us by Mr. Kipling or his business agent, and we paid for them in each case the price asked—the total amounting to some seventy-eight pounds (£78). The additional payment of ten pounds (£10) was tendered in acknowledgment for the story, "The Incarnation of Krishna Mulvaney," and in pursuance of our rule of making pecuniary recognition of the issue by us of any non-copyright work which we had not before published or paid for. We might here say that the story, "The Incarnation of Krishna Mulvaney," which was included in the volume to make it of suitable length, had already appeared in several American newspapers. We are, dear sir, very truly yours,
HARPER & BROTHERS.

COMMUNICATIONS.

FUNK & WAGNALL'S PROPOSED PLEDGE NOT TO HANDLE UNAUTHORIZED REPRINTS.

To the Editor of the Publishers' Weekly

SEVERAL weeks ago there appeared in your columns an erroneous interpretation of a suggestion of ours that is being reprinted in other papers to an extent that makes it necessary for us to request you to permit us to correct the error. You said,

"This suggestion does not strike us as being so much to the point as Messrs. Funk & Wagnall insist it is. Supposing the leading publishers, who honestly believe in copyright, were to sign such an agreement, what would bind those who are honestly not in favor of such a measure? No, gentlemen, there is but one way—human nature being still in an unregenerate state—and that is, as the Epoch tersely puts it, 'to have a law by which everybody shall be compelled to respect literary property with regard to its origin.'"

It was furthest from our intention to suggest this as a substitute for an International Copyright law, instead, we urged it as a sure way to convince the public that the publishing trade in America really desired copyright, believing that this conviction would prove a long and necessary step toward the enactment of such a law. These words appeared in our reply in the Evening Post to George Haven Putnam's onslaught upon us for having handled (not reprinted) the "Britannica," this month after we had ceased taking orders for the same. We called attention to the inconsistency of such attacks by publishing a letter from Mr. Putnam's firm, dated the day after the publication of his letter against us. In this letter, Mr. Putnam's firm offered to supply the "International Encyclopedia," which, as all know, is a reprint, with American additions, of "Chambers' Encyclopedia," an unauthorized reprint made by that most notorious of American "pirates," John B. Alden—and which is now owned and published by one of the "old publishing houses." After calling attention to this and other inconsistencies on the part of "leading publishers," as Mr. Putnam rightly calls them, we used the words which you unintentionally interpreted so wrongly. Our exact language was as follows:

"If we [the publishers] really mean copyright, there is an easy way to make people believe that we mean it. An ounce of action is worth a ton of talk. Permit us to suggest an easy, simple way for the book trade to convince the people that they really, honestly wish copyrights. Let Mr. Putnam or the League which he represents, request the signatures of the book trade to something like this:

"We, the undersigned publishers and booksellers of America, pledge that we will not publish nor handle any copies of an unauthorized reprint of a foreign book made after the date of this agreement."

"That is to the point and easily understood. It is in the dialect of the hour. It means business. We will sign it. Will Mr. Putnam's sign it? Will all of the leading publishers? If the book trade really believes in copyright, let us cease this talk, which cannot but be wearisome to the extreme to the public, and do something that means something. Just you or otherwise, the impression is in many minds that the reason copyright does not carry in Congress is that 'leading publishers' are at heart against it, and dig the pit into which it falls."

[We have similar word from a leading dealer who had ordered 50 copies, also at a price higher than that at which he could buy at retail as advertised above. We are glad to print at the same time the following explicit and unequivocal statement by the Cassell Publishing Company as to their position in the matter.—ED. P. W.]

New York, October 28, 1890.

To the Editor of the Publishers' Weekly:

DEAR SIR: Please accept our thanks for allowing us to see the proof of Messrs. Duprat & Co.'s letter, complaining of the sale of the McAllister book by a Sixth Avenue dry-goods house at less than regular price. We have received quite a number of similar complaints, and can only reply to this as we have replied to the others, that we regret exceedingly that any house should take the course this firm has taken. We have declined to fill any further orders from this house, or to do any further business with them. We assure you that these books were purchased by them at precisely the same price paid by other dealers, and which was far in excess of the price for which they were sold by them. It is certainly to be deplored that any house should sell goods at less than cost, particularly a book of such prominence as Mr. McAllister's, thereby working a positive injury to the entire retail trade of the city. Yet, as you very well know, there is no legal means of preventing a man from buying an article of commerce and then selling it, if he so chooses, at half its cost. We need not say how sincerely we regret that any one should make use of our books for such a purpose, and how strongly we are opposed to such action. We have done, and will continue at all times to do, everything in our power to prevent this. We feel that the trade should not hold us culpable, as we are in no way responsible for this. Such sales are never made with our consent, and, whenever discovered, we do all we can to stop them and to prevent their recurrence.

Yours truly,

O. M. DUNHAM, Pres.

OBITUARY NOTES.

WE regret to hear of the death, on October 19, of the wife of Arthur Harris Smythe, the well-known bookseller of Columbus, O.

A CABLE despatch from London announces the death of Mr. Mudie, the proprietor of the London circulating library known by his name.

THE death is announced of an old and almost forgotten member of the English publishing and bookselling trades, viz., Mr. John Snow, who died recently, in London, at the age of eighty-three. His business, which was in Paternoster Row, was connected mainly with Congregationalism.

NOTES ON AUTHORS.

THOMAS BAILEY ALDRICH's volume of short stories may be looked for at an early day, but his volume of verse, announced for this season, has been deferred until February.

THE city of Frederick, Md., is trying to raise $10,000 to build a monument in Mount Olivet Cemetery over the grave of Francis S. Key, author of "The Star Spangled Banner."

MR. ARTHUR LUMLEY, well known here and in England, as a painter and illustrator, has been blinded by cataracts, and is living in an almost helpless condition at his studio, at 1300 Broadway. He was a student at the National Academy in this city, and when the war broke out was sent to the front by Frank Leslie. He illustrated an edition of "The Culpit Fay," and besides the drawings made for American periodicals was a contributor to the London News, The Graphic and Le Monde Illustré. To help him out in his present straits, and enable him to have an operation performed that may restore his sight, an exhibition of paintings to be sold for his benefit is being arranged, to which the following artists have already promised to contribute: J. G. Brown, Herman Fueschel, John L. Fitch, Henry Sandham, of Boston, W. H. Dannat, of Paris, T. B. Hardy, of London, Edward Moran, Walter Goodman, William Magrath, C. C. Ward, and others. The Art Guild of New York City, of which Mr. Lumley is a member, is also interesting itself in the work.—Critic.

The Critic, in its issue for October 25, announces the result of the vote for its twenty immortelles, those twenty American women deemed "the truest representatives of what is best in cultivated American womanhood." Here is the list, with the number of votes cast for each: Harriet Beecher Stowe, 268; Frances Hodgson Burnett, 241; Mary N. Murfree (Charles Egbert Craddock), 215; Julia Ward Howe, 204; Elizabeth Stewart Phelps Ward, 203; Sarah Orne Jewett, 193; Mary Mapes Dodge, 182; Constance Fenimore Woolson, 149; Edith M. Thomas, 146; Margaret Deland, 142; Adeline D. T. Whitney, 125; Celia Thaxter, 123; Amelia E. Barr, 123; Lucy Larcom, 115; Rose Terry Cooke, 104; Mary Abigail Dodge (Gail Hamilton), 102; Harriet Prescott Spofford, 97; Louise Chandler Moulton, 97; Mary E. Wilkins, 96; Blanche Willis Howard Teufel, 84. The names of the next highest twenty are also given. Mary Halleck Foote heads this list with 78 votes, and Elizabeth B. Stoddard closes it with 31. Miss Jeanette L. Gilder received 43 votes, but being one of the editors of The Critic she considered herself out of the competition.

BUSINESS NOTES.

MILWAUKEE, WIS.—Halse & Haferkorn, publishers and proprietors of the South Side Bookstore, at 274 Grove Street, have dissolved partnership. H. E. Haferkorn retiring. Mr. Paul Halse will continue the book and stationery business under the name of South Side Bookstore, and will continue the publication of the remaining portions of the "Handy Lists of Technical Literature."

WARSAW, WIS.—Charles W. Chubbuck, bookseller and stationer, has sold out.

JOURNALISTIC NOTES.

STORIES by Kipling have been secured by the Atlantic, besides letters by Charles and Mary Lamb.

WALT WHITMAN has written for the November North American Review an article on Longfellow, Bryant, Emerson and Whittier.

DR. RICHARD WHEATLEY has written for the current number of Harper's Weekly an elaborate article on the Cotton Exchange, which includes a brief history of the cotton industry of the country.

A CURIOSITY in the shape of a part of Whittier's poem, "The Hero," in the embossed type used by the blind, is bound in the November Wide Awake, with the article about Dr. Howe, famous for giving eyes, ears, and a voice to blind, deaf and dumb Laura Bridgman, and the real hero of Whittier's poem.

THE most recent addition to phonographic literature is a shorthand edition of Tit-Bits, the first number of which appeared on October 11. It is a reprint of a portion of the longhand issue of the same date, and consists of ten pages of beautifully lithographed shorthand. This edition will be published monthly, the next number being due November 15.

THE New York Herald and the Toronto Mail were the successful joint bidders for the autobiography of Birchall (awaiting execution in Canada). The sale took place in jail at Woodstock, Ontario, October 25, the jailer acting as auctioneer. About fifty publishers were present. The price paid was $1700, half of which was paid down, the other half to be paid immediately after the execution to Mrs. Birchall, the prisoner's wife.

SIR EDWIN ARNOLD's first Scribner article on Japan will be printed in the December number, with illustrations by Robert Blum. A series on India, by James Bryce, has been arranged for—the outcome of Prof. Bryce's recent visit. Another promised Scribner series will treat of the world's great streets—Broadway, Piccadilly and Unter den Linden. The first will be "Broadway," by Richard Harding Davis, with illustrations by A. B. Frost.

THE October issue of Centralblatt für Bibliothekswesen (published in Leipzig by Otto Harrassowitz) contains an extremely interesting article on the most recent German researches into Gutenberg's life and work at Mayence. The documents relating to the partnership between Fust and Gutenberg, and the action brought by Fust in order to recover the interest of six per cent. on the capital advanced by him to Gutenberg, are important and curious.

THE growing interest in ethics has created a demand for a larger and more important publication than The Ethical Record which is now merged in the new quarterly periodical entitled The International Journal of Ethics. Its prospectus states that it will not be the organ of any society or sect, or of any particular set of opinions. It will publish articles upon theoretical and practical ethics from the ablest writers of all schools of thought. Its Editorial Committee includes Felix Adler, New York, Stanton Coit and J. H. Muirhead, London, Prof. G. von Gitzycki, Berlin, Prof. Fred. Jodl, Prague, J. S. Mackenzie, Manchester, and Josiah Royce, of Harvard University. All communications should be addressed to S. Burns Weston, 1602 Chestnut Street, Philadelphia. The first number has articles on the Morality of Strife, by Prof. Henry Sidgwick, of Cambridge University; The Ethics of Land Tenure, by Prof. J. B. Clark, Smith College; a criticism of Dr. Abbot's "Way Out of Agnosticism," by Prof. Royce, and Service of Ethics to Philosophy, by Wm. M. Salter.

NOTES ON CATALOGUES.

F. A. BROCKHAUS announces the approaching publication of about a dozen different catalogues of his large and important stock of second-hand books in zoology, botany, mineralogy, palæontology, classical philology and archæology, and German language and literature. Booksellers are invited to apply for copies of these catalogues.

THE BOSTON PUBLIC LIBRARY has just issued the ninth edition of its "Handbook for Readers." While intended primarily for use in the institution which issues it, this catalogue of bibliographies will be found a useful guide for smaller libraries, and especially for booksellers, to what they ought to have in certain branches to help them in their work. One of the most valuable features of the appendix is the list of indexes to periodicals which covers nearly forty-seven pages. Other matters in the appendix are an account of the special libraries included in the Boston Public, and of its works of art, a chronology of the library from Vattumare's time down, and statistics of growth up to the present half million volumes. (378 p. 16°, pap., 50c.)

Catalogues of New and Second-hand Books—John W. Cadby, Springfield, Mass., Miscellaneous. (No. 3, 16 p., 16°)—Ch. Chadenat, 21 Quai des Grands, Augustins, Paris, France, Americana. (No. 6 Sept., Oct., 816 titles 12°)—E. W. Johnson, 1338 Broadway, N. Y., Good second-hand books. (No. 12, 237 titles, 8°)—Henry Stevens & Son, 39 Great Russell Street, London, Eng., Americana. (No. 21, 16 p. 12°)—S. H. Zahn & Co., Lancaster, Pa., Miscellaneous second-hand books. (No. 43, 233 titles, 12°)

LITERARY AND TRADE NOTES.

MR. GEO. W. SNODDY, who was formerly with Glick's Bookstore, Kansas City, Mo., is now at Laird & Lee's, 203 Jackson Street, Chicago.

THE HOME PUBLISHING COMPANY, N. Y., announces that the first edition of 60,000 copies of Archibald C. Gunter's new story, "Miss Nobody of Nowhere," will be issued at once.

RITCHIE & HULL, of the Newburg (N. Y.) Journal, have in preparation a work entitled, "Newburg: Historical and Descriptive," a quarto volume, to be fully illustrated.

FUNK & WAGNALLS will publish at once General Booth's "In Darkest England, and the Way Out," noticed in our last issue. The first large edition published in London was all sold within three hours after publication.

DUPRAT & Co., New York, have just ready "Cleopatra," a study from the French of Henry Houssaye, translated by A. F. Deiren. The book is printed on heavy laid paper, with appropriate head and tail pieces, by the De Vinne Press.

THE American Geographical Society Bulletin for October, 1890, contains a Washington letter, modestly signed "H," which is by Mr. J. H. Hickox, and contains among other much valuable matter, an interesting sketch of the Library of the United States Geological Survey.

THE FOREST AND STREAM PUBLISHING CO., New York, will issue at once the first number of a quarterly publication entitled "The Book of the Game Laws," compiled by the editor of Forest and Stream, and containing all the laws of the United States and Canada relating to game and fish.

THE last work that Prof. Austin Phelps put his hand to, just before his death, was correcting the proofs of his additions to a new edition of his most popular book, "The Still Hour"—a volume on prayer which has had a steady sale for thirty years. D. Lothrop Co. will issue this new edition speedily.

T. B. PETERSON & BROTHERS have added to their twenty-five cent series of popular fiction Mrs. Southworth's favorite story, "Love's Labor Won." This series now includes some of the best-selling stories of Mrs. Southworth, Mrs. Ann S. Stephens, Mrs. Hentz, Mrs. Burnett, Emile Zola, and a number of others.

THE Dunlap Society will issue at once William Winter's biography of the late John Gilbert, illustrated with a portrait of the comedian as "Sir Peter Teazle." The final publication of the Dunlap Society for this year will be a volume of "Occasional Addresses," edited by Mr. Laurence Hutton and Mr. William Carey, which will contain the chief of the many American poems written to be spoken at benefits and anniversaries.

THE following card will be probably the last communication addressed to the trade by our old friends, Robert Carter & Bros.:

The Bookselling and Publishing business of Robert Carter & Brothers was established by Mr. Robert Carter, in April, 1834.

The business thus begun has been successfully carried on (distributing an immense amount of Evangelical literature) for fifty-six years, till Sept. 1890, when it was closed. The books and stereotype plates and other material were sold at auction.

The retiring firm take this opportunity to thank their friends and customers for their kindly co-operation and patronage.

NEW YORK, October, 1890.

E. & J. B. YOUNG & Co. will receive subscriptions for the English fac-simile of the original manuscript of the "Book of Common Prayer of the Church of England." Of this interesting manuscript no duplicate exists. It was signed in 1661, and in 1662 was deposited in an ancient tower near the Chapter House of Westminster Abbey, and is now in a very good state of preservation. The fac-simile has been made through the use of photography. But the photographs had to be made within the precincts of the House of Lords, and under the eye of responsible custodians. The edition of the fac-simile reproduction is limited to 750 copies, the price of which is $17.50 each.

HOUGHTON, MIFFLIN & Co. will publish at once "Lyrics for a Lute," a volume of imaginative, sonny and decidedly lyrical ideas in verse, by Frank Dempster Sherman; "A Ward of the Golden Gate," a new Californian story by Bret Harte; an enlarged Household Edition of "Songs of Three Centuries," with introductory essay by John G. Whittier, "Thoreau's Thoughts," selections from the writings of Henry D. Thoreau, edited by H. G. O. Blake, with a full bibliography of Thoreau's writings; and a popular edition of "Hymns of the Faith," edited by Professors George Harris and W. J. Tucker, of Andover Theological Seminary, and Mr. E. K. Glezen, of Providence, R. I.

A. J. BICKNELL, 115 Broadway, N. Y., has bound in one volume the numbers of his Architectural and Building Monthly issued from April to September, 1890. This makes a handsome book, containing a great variety of practical designs and details of cottages, city and suburban houses, double and semi-detached houses, flats, store fronts, park entrances, gateways, staircases, mantels, doors, windows, furniture, mason-builders' details, etc. The volume also gives the iron fire-proof construction of roofs, stores and office buildings, method of framing roof with gables and valley rafters, miscellaneous details, etc., all drawn to scale. There are sixty full plates, and twelve vignettes described in detail in the text. The second volume will be published April 1, 1891. If builders and architects will but give proper support to Mr. Bicknell, the collected volumes of his paper will make a valuable library for future reference.

A. M. THAYER & Co., 79 Milk St., Boston, have just issued a work entitled, "Luther in Rome," by the renowned German author, Schöningh, translated by Mrs. E. L. South, President of the Franklin Institute, Kentucky. It is a fine volume illustrated with full-page and smaller wood-engravings, and photogravures. It is a piece of unwritten religious history, which shows the ideas and conditions which caused Martin Luther to become the head of the Reformatory Movement. They announce that they have been favored by Gen. Benj. F. Butler with the contract to publish his forthcoming work, his memoirs and personal recollections, which will be published under the title of "Butler's Book." This will be exclusively a subscription-book, and will be ready for delivery in the summer of next year. It will be a volume of nearly 1200 pages and contain upwards of 200 engravings. It will be sold at a very low price and will be, it is promised, "a literary bombshell, and a book that will become one of the literary headlamps." They will publish this month a book entitled, "Success and Its Achievers Illustrated," by Mr. Wm. M. Thayer, the well-known biographer. It contains 120 chapters of the different necessities and requirements to become successful. It is emblematically illustrated and contains incidents and anecdotes of the lives of noted men and women.

ERNST KEIL'S SUCCESSORS (Leipzig) announce the completion of the collected illustrated edition of E. Marlitt's novels and romances in ten volumes.

THE NATIONAL LIBRARY, of Paris, has recently acquired an Arabic MS., containing the greater part of a translation of Dioscorides. The MS., says the Athenæum, "seems to be written about the twelfth century."

SELLEY & Co., London, will publish shortly a volume entitled "Scenes Connected with the Life of Alfred, Lord Tennyson," written by the Rev. A. J. Church, and illustrated with fourteen copperplates and many other engravings from drawings by Mr. Edward Hull.

SAMPSON LOW & Co. have just published, as the first volume of a new series entitled The Queen's Prime Ministers, "The Earl of Beaconsfield," by Mr. J. A. Froude, with a portrait. It is understood that the author has received valuable assistance not only from Mr. Ralph Disraeli, but also from the Duke of Rutland and other political friends of the late Premier.

FRANK MURRAY, Moray House, Derby, England, will publish before the end of the year a "Wordsworth Dictionary of Persons and Places," prepared by J. R. Tuten, the compiler of a bibliography of Wordsworth. The work is to contain an index of all the persons named or described in Wordsworth's poems, an index of all the places mentioned or described, a collection of the familiar quotations from Wordsworth and a chronological list of the best of Wordsworth's poems.

AN International and Universal exposition will be held in Bordeaux, France, in 1891, from May 1 to November 5. The articles for exposition will be divided into five groups, and printing and book-making will be classified in the first group. For particulars, application should be made to Henry Garcia, 7 Allées de Tournay, Bordeaux, who addresses all the nations of the world, and endeavors to inspire them with the ambition to do their parts toward making this a representative exposition of all the products handled in the commerce of the world.

GRIFFITH, FARRAN & Co. will publish, early in December, an illustrated biography of Isaac Pitman, by Thomas Allen Reed. Many sketches of the life and labors of Isaac Pitman have appeared from time to time in the magazines and newspapers, but nothing has hitherto appeared in the nature of a continuous and complete biography. Mr. Reed is peculiarly qualified for the task, from his long personal acquaintance, which early ripened into friendship, with Mr. Pitman and most of the members of his family, and from having been for many years a fellow-laborer in the movement which more than half a century ago Mr. Pitman originated. The proof-sheets of the work have been read by Mr. Pitman, and therefore the book may be considered authentic. Copies will be for sale at the New York branch of Isaac Pitman & Sons, 3 East 14th Street.

"PICK-UPS."

A STOCK PHRASE WATERED. — She: "He talks like a book, doesn't he?" He: "Yes; an unpublished one." — Harper's Bazar.

A LITERARY TASTE. — Bookseller. "Well, Miss Primrose, how do you like the encyclopedia I sold you last month?" Miss Primrose. "I like the kivers vary much; so do my hoosband. But us don't care much for the rating matter."

AN INCONSISTENCY.

The bibliophile who loves his margins wide—
Who grudges e'en to type an inch or two—
Most strangely has not ever stopped aside
To read with glee a virgin blank-book through.

CHRISTMAS!

THE most representative of the Christmas issues, having no special interests to represent, giving best value to both dealers and advertisers, and out first, is the Christmas issue of the PUBLISHERS' WEEKLY. The cover will be new, tasteful and taking.

As usual, special articles on leading books, the finest specimen illustrations from others, full descriptive summary of new books and stationery novelties, reference price-lists covering the ILLUSTRATED WORKS, BOOKS FOR THE YOUNG, and other CHOICE BOOKS published during 1890, etc.

Furnished at the earliest possible date, orders recorded in order of receipt. As paper is made for it, we need prompt word. Prices are put below cost of manufacture, to insure the widest circulation to advertising.

To avoid delay it is absolutely necessary that copy for imprint, together with full directions for forwarding, should accompany the order. All packages sent by express unpaid, unless other shipping directions are given.

When We Were Boys.

A NOVEL.

By WILLIAM O'BRIEN, M.P.

. The volume contains the following letter from Mr. O'Brien, reproduced in fac-simile :
I desire respectfully to acquaint the American public that Messrs. Longmans, Green & Co. are the only authorized publishers of this novel in America, and that editions issued by them are the only ones from which I derive any profits.
DUBLIN, April 12, 1890. WILLIAM O'BRIEN.

CHRISTIAN UNION, New York :
" The book is a perfect storehouse of information about the real life and character of all classes of the Irish people. Types abound, and as they have been closely studied from nature, we see, as he is, the Irish priest, tenant, peasant, politician, farmer, land owner and patriot."
CATHOLIC NEWS, New York :
" The book will be read by thousands and do more than speeches in Parliament or public meetings, or labored essays in reviews and magazines to bring Ireland's real position home to the hearts of sympathetic men who love liberty."

For sale by all booksellers, or sent, on receipt of price, by the publishers.

NEW AND IMPORTANT BOOKS.

I.

ALEXANDER MACKAY OF UGANDA.

By His Sister. With Portrait and Colored Map. Nearly 500 pages.
Crown 8vo, cloth, $1.50.

"This is one of the best and most inspiring of missionary biographies. There is a still, intense glow of feeling, which becomes more and more impressive as the narrative proceeds.

"Of his work in Africa it is impossible to give any account here. It must be read in Mrs. Harrison's book, almost every page of which contains some romantic incident or detail. Mackay was a layman, a man of extraordinary faculties and resources, which were fully taxed.

"To his wonderful constructive skill and achievements STANLEY and EMIN PACHA bear the warmest testimony."—British Weekly.

Rev. Wm. M. Taylor's New Work on the Miracles.

THE MIRACLES OF OUR SAVIOUR. Expounded and illustrated. Uniform with the same author's "Parables of Our Saviour." One vol., crown 8vo, cloth, $1.75.

The success of Dr. Taylor's work on the Parables, now in its Fourth Thousand, has led him to accede to the publisher's request to prepare this companion volume.

New Books—Now Ready.

THIRD SERIES OF

The Book-Worm.

An Illustrated Treasury of Old-Time Literature. Tastefully printed in old style, on antique paper, with numerous illustrations and ornamental embellishments. Octavo, cloth, $3.00.

It is a treasury of knowledge on old-time literature, and presents its readers with stores of wisdom on subjects which are attractive to the book-lover, giving him in a readable form much out-of-the-way and little-known information on the literature of the past. In its pages will be found chapters on Scarce Books, the works of Special Presses, First Editions, and Unique Copies and their former and present value; Remarkable Dedications, Bookselling Reminiscences, Americana, Elizabethan Literature, Great Libraries, Collectors, Whims, etc., and nearly every other conceivable topic relating to books and their surroundings, Early Book Auctions and old Catalogues, Ancient Bookbinding and old Printing Presses, etc.

J. THAIN DAVIDSON'S NEW WORK.

A Good Start.

A Book for Young Men. Uniform with the same author's "Talks with Young Men," etc. 12mo, cloth, $1.25.

"Another of the series of addresses by one who is facile princeps as counsellor and guide to young men. We trust that these pages, at once winning and stimulating, will be perused by thousands of our young men."—The Christian, London.

NEW WORK BY THE REV. R. W. DALE, LL.D. The Living Christ and the Four Gospels.

Crown 8vo, cloth, $1.50.

"An unanswerable argument for the verity of the Christian religion. The book meets a definite need as a popular statement of the warrant of faith, with special reference to critical methods which would depreciate the Gospel story. . . . Christian experience is, with admirable cogency, shown to establish the truth of the Gospel. The divinity of Christ is maintained, and the evidence for the authenticity of the Fourth Gospel presented with convincing force. Other positions which rationalistic writers have challenged, are also defended."—The Christian, London.

NEW VOL. (12TH) OF THE BOOK-LOVERS' LIBRARY.

Studies in Jocular Literature.

A Popular Subject more Closely Considered. By W. B. Hazlitt. 12mo, cloth, uncut edges, $1.25. Being the 12th volume of this library.

In this new volume of the Book-lovers' Library, Mr. Hazlitt has treated Jocular Literature from the point of view of the philosopher and the student. He points out the real use of the Jest, and traces the origin of the literature of humor from the earliest of times, showing its dependence on the varying conditions of society in which it was originated. The various forms of epigram, skit, pun, retort, ballads, nursery rhymes, etc., are all noted and commented upon in their places more or less fully.

NOTES IN SEASON.

SCRIBNER & WELFORD have just ready a new edition of Mary Wollstonecraft's "A Vindication of the Rights of Woman, with strictures on political and other subjects," with critical introduction by Mrs. Henry Fawcett, in which she traces the development of the theory of the equality of the sexes from that day till now. They have nearly ready, in the edition of Ibsen's prose dramas, edited by William Archer, the fifth volume, containing "Romersholm," "The Lady from the Sea," and a new play hitherto unpublished, translated by Mr. Archer. They have also nearly ready, in the series of Events of Our Own Time, the following volumes: "The War in the Crimea," by Gen. Sir Edward Hamley, and "The Indian Mutiny of 1857," by Col. Malle-son, both to contain portraits and maps. The volumes to follow are "Achievements in Engin-eering," by Prof. Vernon Harcourt; "The Liber-ation of Italy," by Edward Dicey; "The Re- founding of the German Empire;" "The Civil War in America;" "The Exploration of Africa;" "The Opening of Japan," and others.

D. APPLETON & Co. announce a book by a new American novelist whose work is said to show rare talent. The author is Miss Lilly A. Long, of St. Paul, Minn., and the title of her novel is "A Squire of Low Degree." The scene is laid in the North- west. The leading motive of the book is a peculi- arly noble form of self-sacrifice, and the finely-told story is relieved by incidents which include an experience in a blizzard, and a vivid sketch of an ice carnival in a city which will probably be re- cognized as St. Paul. This novel is to be pub- lished immediately in the Town and Country Library. Jules Breton has written an apprecia- tive and flattering letter to the Appleton's, au- thorizing the translation by Mrs. Mary J. Serrano of his autobiography, which is about to be published.

ROBERTS BROTHERS will publish on the 12th inst. "Poems," by Emily Dickinson, a towns- woman and intimate friend of "H. H.," edited by her friends Mabel L. Todd and T. W. Hig- ginson; "Nanon," (one of the most delightful of George Sand's later works, giving the best view of the French Revolution from the rustic's point of view), translated by Elizabeth Wormeley Latimer. Also "News from Nowhere; or, an epoch of rest, being some chapters from a Utopian Romance," by William Morris, author of "The Earthly Paradise," etc., a charming socialistic novel, depicting the future of England under favored conditions of human equality, with the lower Thames lined with homes and gardens instead of factories, and workingmen clad in æsthetic costume. Labor is glorified; hospitality is ennobled; education idealized. The frontis- piece of the book is called Labor May Day, and represents a globe inscribed "Solidarity of La- bor," and its countries united by fraternity, free- dom and equality.

HARPER & BROTHERS have just issued in a sumptuous volume Daudet's "The Last Advent- ures of the Illustrious Tartarin," and an appro- priate holiday volume entitled "Christmas in Song, Sketch and Story," by J. P. McCaskey, which volume comprises a collection of the most famous songs, hymns and stories relating to the Christmas season, and is liberally illustrated from paintings by the old masters and from drawings by modern artists. They will publish at once a handsome volume of "Selections from the Sonnets of William Wordsworth," with nu- merous illustrations from drawings by Alfred Parsons. The book is in every respect a work of art, and will compare favorably with the other well-known holiday gift-books published in recent years by the same house. The next volume in the popular Odd Number Series will be a selec- tion of "Ten Tales by François Coppée," trans- lated by Walter Learned, with an introduction by Brander Matthews, and illustrated from drawings by Albert E. Sterner.

WEEKLY RECORD OF NEW PUBLICATIONS.*

The abbreviations are usually self-explanatory. c. after the date indicates that the book is copyrighted; if the copyright date differs from the imprint date, the year of copyright is added. Books of foreign origin of which the edition (annotated, illustrated, etc.) is entered as copyright, are marked c. ed.; translations, c. tr.; n. p. in place of price, indicates that the publisher makes no price, either net or retail, and quotes prices to the trade only upon application.

A colon after initial designates the most usual given name, as: A: Augustus; B: Benjamin; C: Charles; D: David; E: Edward; F: Frederic; G: George; H: Henry; I: Isaac; J: John; L: Louis; N: Nicholas; P: Peter; R: Richard; S: Samuel; T: Thomas; W: William.

Sizes are designated as follows: F. (folio, over 30 centimeters high); Q. (4to: under 30 cm.); O. (8vo: 25 cm.); D. (same: 20 cm.); S. (same: 17½ cm.); T. (same: 15 cm.); Tl. (same: 12½ cm.); Ps. (same: 10 cm.). Sq., obli. mor., designate square, oblong, narrow books of these heights.

Abbot, Willis J. Battlefields and camp-fires: a narrative of the principal military operations of the Civil war; from the removal of McClellan to the accession of Grant (1862-1863); II., by W. C. Jackson. N. Y., Dodd, Mead & Co., [1890.] c. 9+349 p. ll. O. cl., $3.

The chief battles of the period covered are graphically described and abundantly illustrated with full-p. pictures. Intended for young readers. Bound richly in blue, red and gold.

Abbott, C. C., M.D. Outings at odd times. N. Y., Appleton, 1890. c. 10+288 p. S. cl., $1.50.

Short essays on nature grouped as: In winter; in spring; in summer; in autumn.

Adams, Oscar Fay, ed. The poet's year: original and selected poems, embodying the spirit of the seasons; including poems by Longfellow, Tennyson, Whittier, and others. Bost., D. Lothrop Co., [1890.] c. no paging, ll. obl. O. cl., $6; full mor., $10.

The book is a combination of pictures and poems devoted to the twelve months of the passing year. A wealth of illustrations accompanies the text. Each month is prefaced by a dainty and appropriate design, and full-page, half-page and small text-cuts are scattered through the book with almost prodigal profusion. The poetical selections show taste and judgment.

Arnold, Sir Edwin. The light of Asia; or, the great renunciation (Mahabhinishkramana) being the life and teachings of Gautama, Prince of India and founder of Buddhism, as told in verse by an Indian Buddhist. [New holiday ed.] Bost., Roberts Bros., 1890. 14+236 p. por. D. cl., $1.50, $2.

A new illustrated ed. of this famous poem, with a new por. of the author by Damman, and illustrative cover design. The illustrations are taken, for the most part, from photographs of Buddhist sculptures and frescoes found in ancient ruins of India, averaging 3000 years old, many of them being identified by eminent archaeological authorities, both in India and at home, as actually illustrating scenes in the life of Gautama Buddha, the founder of Buddhism, and the hero of Mr. Arnold's poem.

Artists' gallery: forty-five fac-simile reproductions of famous paintings by Millet, Rosa Bonheur, Leighton, Bougereau, and Landseer; with por. and biographical sketches. Bost., D. Lothrop Co., [1890.] c. '86. no paging, sq. S. cl., $3; leather, $5.

The title fully covers this work. Its interesting contents and handsome exterior especially adapt it for a holiday gift-book.

Babyland [1890]; ed. by the editors of "Wide Awake." Bost., D. Lothrop Co., [1890.] c. 7-104 p. ll. O. cl., $1; bds., 75 c.

Bandelier, Adolf F. The delight makers. N. Y., Dodd, Mead & Co., [1890.] c. 4+490 p. D. cl., $1.50.

A background entirely new in fiction is given to Prof. Bandelier's novel. The time is before the discovery of the new world, and consequently no white person appears as a character in the story. Ambition is the demon that aways the breast of Tyope, one of the chief characters, and this is his ruin. We follow him through intrigue, war, and defeat, and the subsequent contempt of his tribe, which his schemes have nearly destroyed, to follow the primitive but none the less attractive wooing of his daughter Mitsaba by her manly lover Okoya. The Indians in their cave dwellings, with their manners, dress, modes of life, etc., are most accurately described.

Barr, Amelia E. Friend Olivia. N. Y., Dodd, Mead & Co., [1890.] c. '89-90. 5+455 p. D. cl., $1.25.

This novel has been running through The Century Magazine during the past year. It is a tale of the days of Cromwell, and gives many vivid scenes from Quaker and Puritan home life; the persecution of the Quakers in England and in the colonies form a large part of the narrative. The hero is a Puritan who loves "Friend Olivia," a beautiful Quakeress.

All lands are considered in this handsome volume, and nearly 100 of the largest cities of the world are described and illustrated.

Brown, Horatio F. The Venetian printing press: an historical study based upon documents for the most part hitherto unpublished; with fac-similes of early printing. N. Y., G. P. Putnam's Sons, 1891 [1890.] 16+463 p. ll. Q. cl., $10. (Limited ed. of 250 copies.)

Consists of two parts: first, an historical study of the Venetian Printing Press from its origin down to the fall of the Republic, based in a large degree upon the documents which form the second part of the book. In this study the writer traces the history of the Venetian press from its introduction, through the 16th century—noting especially how press legislation grew up, preceded by custom and practice, and then formulated in law, how the government dealt with such questions as copyright, protection and censorship; how the Guild of Printers and Booksellers was founded and governed; how the book trade came under the influence of the Index and the Inquisitorial censorship, and how the Republic endeavored to protect the trade, thereby involving itself in a long struggle with the Church of Rome. The second part of the book contains the documents which served as a basis for the study. By far the larger part are published now for the first time.

Brown, J. D. D. Bunyan's home, by J. Brown, D. D., minister of the church at Bunyan meeting, Bedford; ill. by Allan Barraud. N. Y., E. P. Dutton & Co., [1890.] no paging, obl. S. cl., $3.

Katow village, in Bedfordshire, England, where John Bunyan was born, is the scene described and illustrated by this beautiful book. Charming views in colors are given in full pages or gracefully let into the text. Printed by Nister, at Nuremberg.

Brown, Maggie. Wanted—a king; or, how Merle set the nursery rhymes to rights; ill. by Harry Furniss. N. Y., Cassell & Co., 1890. 3+183 p. D. cl., $1.50.

Merle is a little girl who falls asleep and wakes up in a sort of "wonderland" where all the characters of the old nursery rhymes live. She has a variety of odd adventures, which are capably illustrated by Mr. Harry Furniss.

Browning, Robert. Saul; with drawings by Frank O. Small. Bost., L: Prang & Co., [1890.] c. 4+44 p. F. cl., $10.

One of Browning's poems illustrated with no full-page designs, printed in monotype; also contains a large portrait of Browning. Printed only on one side of very thick paper.

Clark, Simeon Tucker. Halcyon hours; ill. by Lena J. Ringueberg and F. Schuyler Mathews. Bost., De Wolfe, Fiske & Co., [1890.] c. 87. no paging, obl. O. cl., $3.50.

Originally published under the title of "My Garden," by S. B. Camino, 1887. A poem; with 22 plates of flowers and verses.

Cole, Cyrus. The auroraphone: a romance. Chic., C: H. Kerr & Co., 1890. c. 4-249 p. D. cl., $1.

Three young men, inexperienced, inoffensive sight-seers with their fire-arms, an English literature, a Bible and Spencer's First Principles, start upon a pleasure trip among the mountains of Colorado. On a high peak they come upon a professor who has just completed an auroraphone, which, during a storm, is connected by electricity with the planet Saturn. By this means the young men are taught a new system of existence under which all mankind become happy. The author has imagination, and many of his theories show careful criticism of the many new discoveries in science and political economy.

A new ed. profusely illustrated in the text in the same manner as "Disillusion" and "Sister Philomene."

Daudet, Alphonse. Port Tarascon: the last adventures of the illustrious Tartarin; tr. by H. James; ill. by Rosal Myrbach, Montegut, and Moutenard. N. Y., Harper, 1891 [1890.] c. tr. '90. 2+359 p. O. cl., $2.50.

The book is the result of a remarkable combination of talent and skill, being written by one of the greatest of French novelists, translated by one of the greatest of American authors, illustrated by distinguished French artists, who have created an original style in the art of illustration, and published with the accessories of handsome type and dainty binding. The admirers of Daudet's peculiar humor will find in this "largely, hugely laughable" story of the last adventures of Tartarin no abatement of the French novelist's power. And all who are attracted by the higher forms of modern fiction will be pleased with the artistic management of the tale, its alternations of comedy and tragedy, and its varying succession of interesting and amusing situations. "Its only defect," says Henry James, "is that it leaves no more to come: it exhausts the possibilities."

Dickinson, Emily. Poems; ed. by two of her friends, Mabel Loomis Todd and T. W. Higginson. Bost., Roberts Bros., 1890. c. 2+152 p. D. cl., $1.25.

Miss Dickinson was born in Amherst, Mass., Dec. 10, 1830, and died there May 15, 1886. Her father, Hon. Edward Dickinson, was the leading lawyer of Amherst, and treasurer of the well-known college there situated. Miss D. was a recluse by temperament and habit. Her poems were all written without thought of publication. Only two or three of them were printed during her lifetime. Mr. Thomas Wentworth Higginson, who furnishes an introduction, says of the collection here offered: "It is believed that the thoughtful reader will find in these pages a quality more suggestive of the poetry of William Blake than of anything to be elsewhere found—fables of wholly original and profound insight into nature and life; words and phrases exhibiting an extraordinary vividness of descriptive and imaginative power, yet often set in a seemingly whimsical or even rugged frame." Bound in grey and white, with ornamental designs in silver.

Dobson, Austin. Four Frenchwomen. N. Y., Dodd, Mead & Co., [1890.] 2+207 p. por. D. (Giunta ser.) cl., $1.25.

With appreciated insight and practiced pen are briefly brought together the peculiar combination of circumstances which made famous the names of Charlotte Corday, Madame Roland, Madame Genlis and the Princess de Lamballe. The latter was by birth an Italian, but "by marriage, by the more important part of her life and by her tragic death, she belongs to the country of her adoption." An etched portrait of Charlotte Corday by Thomas Johnson forms the frontispiece. These essays have been carefully revised since first issued in magazines. They are dedicated to Brauder Matthews. The first volume of the Giunta series.

Dobson, Austin. The sun dial: a poem; with drawings and decorations by G: Wharton Edwards. N. Y., Dodd, Mead & Co., 1890. no paging, Q. cl., $7.50; Edition de luxe, $20.

Austin Dobson's charming little poem of "The Sun Dial" is illustrated with a number of full-page photographs in tints and many pen and ink sketches. The verses all begin with illuminated initials in red. The whole work is printed only on one side of stiff card board.

Faith Whitney in earliest childhood heard voices and saw visions and was pronounced by some to be possessed of the devil. She becomes a teacher in a university town on New England soil, and there meets Kyn-Dhwen, a Sinhalese student. He convinces her that she is under astral influence. Long conversations upon the sameness and the difference of Christianity and Buddhism form the interesting portions of the story. The love does not run smooth, but the end is in accordance with the truths taught.

Captain Raymond, Max and Lulu first make a trip by the cars to Saratoga. After visiting Mount McGregor, where General Grant died, and many other places noted as the scenes of battles and historic incidents during the revolutionary war, they go to West Point, to Albany and on to Newport. Here Capt. Raymond has a new yacht upon which the whole party embark with "Grandma Elsie" for a pleasure voyage. Boston, Concord and other historical towns are visited as they stop along the New England coast. Much information is offered regarding American history.

Fletcher, C. R. L. Gustavus Adolphus and the struggle of Protestantism. N. Y., G: P. Putnam's Sons, 1890. 15+316 p. por. map, and il. D. (Heroes of the nations, no. 2.) cl., $1.50.

This work was undertaken and material partly gathered before the author, late Fellow of All Souls College, Oxford, was aware that it would be used for one of this series of biographies. The difficulty of accommodating the proportions to this object has been very great, as Gustavus Adolphus has been attacked and defended in innumerable books and pamphlets for two hundred and fifty-eight years. He was born 1611 and died 1632. The thirty years' war in Germany and the great struggle of Protestantism against Romanism are made clear and interesting to young minds, and the telling part played by Sweden boldly brought out. "It is a story that reproduces the life of a past era with a picturesque accuracy that is fairly fascinating; and the descriptions of Quebec in the olden days, and of wild hunting adventures, as well as of scenes in the French and English war and in the revolution, together with the reproduction of wonderful legends, are full of novel interest for those who have never read the Canadian classic in the original. Not the least interesting portions of the volume are those devoted to the songs of voyageurs and habitans. The novel is steadily entertaining, and is not without practical value to the student of history."—Boston Gazette.

The history of the French expedition under General Humbert, sent to invade Ireland in 1798, finds but small mention in the works of Irish or English historians. And yet, if the expedition had been successful, the history of Ireland might have been changed. The army sent by the French Directory was at first intended to be a very large one, but it finally dwindled down to 1100 men. On the day they landed at Killala, the country was occupied by 150,000 English troops. For three weeks the invader held his own in the face of every difficulty, penetrated 150 miles into the interior of the country, and was only stopped in his march to Dublin by an unfortunate delay of a few hours which prevented his junction with a large body of Irish insurgents. The story is full of romantic incidents exceedingly well told. The book is unusually well gotten up and illustrated.

A memoir bringing to our attention one of the greatest romances of history. Désirée Clary, of Marseilles, at the age of fourteen, is betrothed to Joseph Bonaparte; Napoleon, visiting her at his brother's request, is charmed with her, and, persuading Joseph to marry her sister, becomes betrothed in his stead. But this engagement falling through, by reason of his infatuation for Madame de Beauharnais, she is later on married to Bernadotte, and on his becoming King of Sweden is elevated to royal honors.

The first part of the book is devoted to the personal narrative of the authors, showing their terrible experience in the southern prisons during the late war. They were all officers in western regiments. Their stories were prepared for the press many years ago, while the incidents related were still fresh in the memory. The general account of prisons and prisoners in the south which follows, gives a more extended view of the subject, and shows that the treatment described by the narrators was general, and not confined to particular prisoners or special localities. There are also statistical information pertaining to prisoners of war, with a list of officers who were prisoners of war from Jan. 1, 1864, taken from official sources. Il. with 19 full p. cuts, besides many smaller ones.

This is a complete recast of a work that has for years been well known. The changes that have been made are as follows: To facilitate reference, the order of the main words has in both parts of the dictionary been made a strictly alphabetical one, compounds having been grouped under their initial parts. In the English-German part great pains have been bestowed on the enlargement of the English vocabulary, to bring it on a level with contemporary usage in speech and current literature—space having been gained by expunging antiquated words; and the pronunciation of Stormonth has been substituted for Walker. As regards the German-English part, the alphabetical order of the leading words is based on the "neue orthographie" of 1879-80. Here, too, the vocabulary has been enlarged.

The same plan pursued in the preparation of previous volumes of the "Boy Travellers" series has been followed in the present one. To the party, however, which has hitherto consisted of Doctor Bronson, Fred Bronson and Frank Bassett are added Mrs. Bassett, Frank's mother and his sister Mary. Starting from Queenstown they go through Ireland, Scotland and England. The history, geography, manners and customs of the people, the scenery, etc., are all vividly described and illustrated.

Kraszewski, Jos. Ignatius. The Jew; from the Polish, by Linda da Kowalewska. N. Y., Dodd, Mead & Co., [1890.] c. 4+469 p. D. cl., $1.50.

A novel from the hands of a writer nearly unknown to English-speaking people. Kraszewski was born in Warsaw in 1812, of a family of long lineage. As poet, dramatist, historian, archæologist, he enriched the literature of his country with nearly three hundred volumes. He may be said to have been the father of the modern Russian school of fiction, since he was the predecessor of Tolstol, Dostoyefski, and the rest; and before his day no one in Russia or Poland had produced romances. He died in Geneva in 1887. "The Jew" is laid in the time of the last insurrection of the Poles, during the days of Napoleon III. Poland had given the Jews shelter when it was denied them elsewhere. At the time of the insurrection they determine to throw in their lot with the patriots. Joseph, the hero, uses all his influence in this direction. Besides the stormy scenes from the insurrection, great insight is given into Polish and Jewish characters.

Lovett, Rev. R: London pictures drawn with pen and pencil. N. Y. and Chic., Fleming H. Revell, 1890. 3-224 p. il. Q. (Pen and pencil ser.) cl., $3.20.

The author's aim has been to try and give the reader a satisfactory and an accurate sketch of the present condition and the past history of the great city of London, in relation to such subjects as the civic and commercial life, the Tower, the great ecclesiastical and governmental buildings, the legal and literary life. With numerous pictures. The first volume of this series is devoted to a city, all the others have described countries.

McCaskey, J. P., ed. Christmas in song, sketch and story: nearly three hundred Christmas songs, hymns and carols; with selections from Beecher, Wallace, Auerbach (and others); il. by Raphael, Murillo, Bougereau, (and others.)

N. Y., Harper. 1891 [1890.] c. 2-320 p. Q. cl., $2.50.

The arrangement of the pages is the same as Mr McCaskey's popular compilations, "Harper's Franklin Square Song Collection." Each old song or hymn or carol, which generations of Christians have sung in honor of Christmas, is complete, with the music in the centre of a separate page. Above and beneath it is the reading matter which consists of the tender story of the Incarnation from Beecher's "Life of Christ," the story of the journey to Bethlehem from "Ben-Hur," a sketch of the Judea of the boy Jesus by Dr. Lyman Abbott, and Christmas sketches by Dickens and Auerbach. His book is profusely illustrated with very beautiful full-page pictures.

Moorehead, Warren K. Wanneta, the Sioux; il.

from life. N. Y., Dodd, Mead & Co., [1890.] c. 6+285 p. D. cl., $2.

The scene of "Wanneta" is laid among the Sioux, and nearly all the characters are taken from life. The time is that of Custer's great march through the Black Hills the year before the massacre. The book is illustrated with photographs taken from scenes among the Sioux. It has a freshness which comes from a delineation of Indian scenes drawn from actual knowledge. Mr. Moorehead is especially fitted to write on this subject, having on three occasions lived for several months at a time among the tips of the Sioux. He first began the study of the manners, habits and customs of the Indians in 1881, his labors being confined to the opening of the ancient mounds in the Ohio valley, over one thousand of which he has thoroughly explored. His private collection of antiquities is now in the Smithsonian Institution.

Sand, George. [pseud. for Mme. A. L. A. D. Du-devant.] The gallant lords of Bois Doré; from the French, by Steven Clovis. N. Y., Dodd, Mead & Co., 1890. c. 2 v. 2 + 374; 2 + 344 p. D. cl., $3.

In "The Gallant Lords of Bois Doré" George Sand has given a delightful picture of the manners, ideas and mode of life of the French nobility resident upon their estates in the first half of the 17th century. The scene is laid near Bourges, in the centre of France, where the authoress herself lived for so many years that the local and archaeological details have the accuracy and value of an historical work. The principal character is a high-minded and romantically chivalric old Huguenot warrior, whose life has been spent in the service of Henry of Navarre. The political, social and domestic relations of the times are so interwoven with the story of thrilling personal adventure that the tale commands the unbroken interest of the historical student as well as of the lover of romance and combat.

Sand, George. [pseud. for Mme. A. L. A. D. Du-devant.] The haunted pool (La mare au diable), from the French, by Frank Hunter Potter, ill. with etchings by Rudeaux. N. Y., Dodd, Mead & Co., [1890.] c. 4-180 p. Q. cl., $5.

A simple tale of peasant life, told with a tender sympathy. Illustrated with 14 etchings and beautifully bound.

Sea chimes. selected poems of the sea; with etchings by H. R. Blaney. N. Y., F. A. Stokes Co., 1890. c. no paging, obl. D. tied with silken cords, pap., $1.50.

Five etchings, with poetical selections.

Sermon Bible (The). Matthew i-xxi. N. Y., A. C. Armstrong & Son, 1890. 3 + 410 p. O. cl., $1.50.

Sidney, Sir Philip. Certain sonnets from the Countess of Pembroke's Arcadia; with accompaniment of drawings, by G. Wharton Edwards. Cleveland, O., The Burrows Bros. Co., 1890. 3-335 p. 1l. F. cl., $7.50; special limited ed., net, $15.

Illustrated with 14 full-p. photogravures from original designs. After a frontispiece and dedication there are figure studies illustrating the following sonnets. Over these books, 'Lock up, fair lids! My true love hath my heart. What tongue can her perfection tell? Leave me, O Love, since shunning pain, O Philomela fair! To the tune of a Neapolitan villanelle! What changes here! Of this high grace, Ring out your bells! The smokes of melancholy. The decorative half-titles, headings, etc., are very graceful and pretty, and open a l the poems. The work is printed on thick, rich paper, and only on one side.

Stahl, P. J. Maroussla, a maid of Ukraine; from the French, by Cornelia W. Cyr. N. Y., Dodd, Mead & Co., [1890.] c. 4 + 268 p. 1l. D. cl., $1.

On its first appearance this story was crowned by the French academy, and is used to-day by the French government as a prize in the schools. Its heroine is a little girl, who took a prominent part in the defence of Ukraine against the Russians. While there is a background of violence and bloodshed, the author gives vivid descriptions of the mountains, valleys and steppes of Ukraine, and of the Cosack peasantry, their simple dignity, their peculiar costumes, etc. A story for both old and young.

Stanley, Mrs. H. M. [formerly Dorothy Tennant.] London street Arabs. N. Y., Cassell & Co., 1890. 4-12 p. 1l. and por., O. cl., $2.

A collection of pictures of street children made at various times and for various English illustrated papers by Dorothy Tennant, now the wife of H. M. Stanley, the African explorer. A pleasant paper on the peculiarities of the "London street Arabs" is given by way of introduction by Mrs. Stanley.

Stephen, Leslie and Lee, Sidney. Dictionary of national biography, V. 24, Halles-Harriott. N. Y., Macmillan & Co., 1890. 445 p. 8° cl., $3.75.

Stokes, F. A., ed. Xxiv. blts of vers de société; with fac-simile of water-color sketches, by H. W. McVickar; with 1l. in black-and-white, by various artists. N. Y., F. A. Stokes Co., 1890. c. 4 + 76 p. Q. cl., $3.

Twelve very beautiful plates of female figures in modern costume representing the months are contributed by McVickar. The black and white designs are woven into the text, which consists of dainty verses by Dobson, Suckling, Praed, Locker, Larned, Peck, Stokes, and Frank Dempster Sherman.

Sunter, Mrs. J. Pauline. The cupid calendar, 1l. in water-col. [N. Y., F. A. Stokes Co., 1890.] c. no paging, O. pap., rings and chain, 75 c.

Swift, Jonathan. Gulliver's travels, exactly reprinted from the first edition, and other works; [also] Some account of Cyrano de Bergerac, and of his voyages to the sun and moon; ed. by H. Morley. N. Y., G. Routledge & Sons, 1890. 3-445 p. O. (Carisbrooke lib., no. 11.) cl., $1.

Tennyson, Alfred (Lord.) Out of doors with Tennyson; selections from the poems of Alfred Lord Tennyson, illustrative of pastoral life and scenes; with an introd. by Elbridge S. Brooks. Bost., D. Lothrop Co., [1890.] c. 4-112 p. 1l. O. bds., $2.50.

Such gems as "The May Queen," "Tears, idle tears," "Blow, bugle, blow," "Go not, happy day," "The brook," "Locksley Hall" and other equally famous lyrics have been selected for illustrations. The pictures are full-p. and vignettes, and are generously mingled with the text.

Tennyson, Alfred (Lord.) The princess, and other poems; vignette ed., 1l. by C. Howard Johnson. N. Y., F. A. Stokes Co., 1890. c. 64 400 p. D. hf. cl., $1.50; hf. cl., $3.

Profusely illustrated by new half-tone engravings after original designs made especially for the work. Many of the 1l. are full p. and the remainder are of various sizes and odd shapes, and are set in the text in the French style. Printed on fine paper with wide margins.

Tennyson, Alfred (Lord.) Tennyson gems; 1l. by W. Goodrich Beal. Bost., S. E. Cassino, [De Wolfe, Fiske & Co.] [1890.] c. '89. no paging, por., ob. O. cl. or antique pap., tied with ribbons, $2.50.

Six reproductions of etchings; with illustrated pages containing verses from Tennyson. Cover decorated by hand and lettered in metalline.

Thomson, Sir W. Mathematical and physical papers. V. 3, Elasticity, heat, electro-magnetism, etc., coll. from scientific periodicals from May, 1841 to the present time; with supplementary articles, written for the present volume. N. Y., Macmillan & Co., 1890. 9 + 529 p. 8° cl., $5.50.

Thus think and smoke tobacco: a rhyme (xvii century) with drawings and decorations, by G. Wharton Edwards. N. Y., F. A. Stokes Co., [1890.] c. no paging, Q. cl., tied with leather thongs, $2.50.

The quaint rhymes which suggest the pictures and decorations draw a moral upon life from the pipe, the smoke, the ashes, etc., each verse ending with the refrain "Thus think and smoke tobacco." The entire book is printed in brown tints, the verses opening with red initial letters. The designs are quaint and in harmony with the text. They include a full-page 1l. of the Indian (the first smoker), the cavalier with his pipe, and the modern society man with his cigarette.

Tiffany, Esther B. The spirit of the Pine; il. by W. S. Tiffany. Bost., L: Prang & Co., [1890.] c. 12 p. O. bds., $1.

Tsar (The) and his people; or. social life in Russia. N. Y., Harper, 1891 [1890.] c. 4+435 p. il. O. cl., $3.
A series of brilliant articles, handsomely illustrated, on Russia and the Russians. The Vicomte Eugene Melchior de Voglé furnishes two articles. "Social life in Russia" and "Through the Caucasus." By Theodore Child we have "Palatial Petersburg," "The fair of Nijnii-Novgorod," "Holy Moscow," "The Kremlin and Russian art," "Modern Russian art," "Russian bronzes" are treated by Clarence Cook, and "A Russian village" is the subject of a paper by Vassili Verestchagin. The il. are extremely fine, having been made by T. de Thulstrup, and others from photographs of scenery, Russian pictures, bronzes, etc. The cover is in a bright yellow cloth, with the Russian coat-of-arms, in black and red and blue and silver, ornamenting the front cover.

Tupper, Edith Sessions. By whose hand? N. Y., United States Book Co., [1890.] c. '89. 4-135 p. D. (American author's ser., no. 22.) pap., 50 c.

Valentine, Mrs. ed. The old, old fairy tales; with col. il. and woodcuts. N. Y., F: Warne & Co., 1890. 9+564 p. O. cl., $3.
A handsome volume of the old fairy tales, compiled from Madame D'Aulnoy, Perrault and others. With a profusion of pictures.

Van Rensselaer, Mrs. J: King. The Devil's picture books: a history of playing cards. N. Y., Dodd, Mead & Co., [1890.] c. 207 p. col. il. O. cl., $5.
A book on playing cards, the information being in a large measure derived from Les Cartes à jouer by Paul la Croix; "Facts and speculations about playing-cards," by Mr. Chatto; "The history of playing cards," by the Rev. E. Taylor; and "The history of playing-cards," by Mr. Singer. These books are now out of print, and difficult to obtain; hence many readers will be glad to find their interesting facts in an obtainable and attractive form. The cards of all nations are described and illustrated. There are 16 full-page plates in color, and many il. in black-and-white.

The Publishers' Weekly.

FOUNDED BY F. LEYPOLDT.

NOVEMBER 8, 1890.

The editor does not hold himself responsible for the views expressed in contributed articles or communications.

All matter, whether for the reading-matter columns or our advertising pages, should reach this office not later than Wednesday noon, to insure insertion in the same week's issue.

In case of business changes, notification or card should be immediately sent to this office for entry under "Business Notes." New catalogues issued will also be mentioned when forwarded.

Publishers are requested to furnish title-page proofs and advance information of books forthcoming, both for entry in the lists and for descriptive mention. An early copy of each book published should be forwarded, to insure correctness in the final entry.

"Every man is a debtor to his profession, from the which, as men do of course seek to receive countenance and profit, so ought they of duty to endeavor themselves by way of amends to be a help thereunto."—LORD BACON.

THE CHRISTMAS TRADE.

THE bookseller, of all wise business men, must take time by the forelock—especially in the matter of stocking up for the Christmas trade. By this time of the year every bookseller who contemplates making the most of the harvest that the Fall and Winter produces, ought to have his shelves fully stocked with everything that his constituency may be likely to call for, so that when the demand is made upon him he may fill it at once, and not put off his customer until he can get the needed article from New York, Boston, Philadelphia, Chicago or San Francisco. He must be a good "old stand-by" indeed, who will patiently wait until what he wants comes creeping along by cheap freight or through other uncertain channels of transportation. In ninety-nine cases out of a hundred there will be a dozen or more other houses who will have what is wanted—especially the department shops. The bookseller must never forget that it is with what he sells as it is with the druggist's wares—when a thing is wanted, it is wanted badly, and at once.

It is with the publishers a matter of a year or more to lay out their work for the holiday season, and the bookseller in his turn must inform himself thoroughly months before the holiday shopper invades his establishment. We propose, as usual, to issue our Christmas number as early this month as the material can be got ready. This, we hope, will serve the double purpose of giving a cue to the bookseller of what is most likely to be in demand, and of giving him plenty of time to get this issue, with his imprint, well distributed among his customers.

From year to year, unfortunately, the holiday season is compressed into narrower and narrower limits, and therefore is more brisk while it lasts. Every year, so far, jobbers and publishers have been overwhelmed with telegraphic orders which, as Christmas-day came nearer and nearer, they found it absolutely impossible to fill. In this way not a few dealers have lost valuable sales. If they measure their market carefully and buy wisely they are not likely, even on large and varied orders, to litter up their shelves with what will be "plugs" next year.

ON THE PHILOSOPHY OF BUYING BOOKS.

"The Listener" in the Boston Transcript.

HAVING been tempted the other day to buy an excellent old edition of Rousseau's works which was going very cheap, and having resisted the temptation on grounds which were satisfactory to himself, the Listener was led to meditate a little on the philosophy of buying books. It occurred to him at the time that possibly the subject had been meditated on before, but he boldly proceeded just the same. The point of his meditations was this: Unless one is a book collector, an amateur of editions (and if one sets out to collect books he must needs be sure of living a thousand years if he desires to do it well), there is little use of buying authors out of one's own century, except as to the great masters, like Shakespeare, and the indispensable classics. Take an author like Rousseau, for instance. Jean Jacques was great, and he helped, with a handful of others, to remake the world—to fashion it over again. But e'er this time the essential part of Jean Jacques has been imbedded in the thought of the time. It has become a part of everybody. One does not take up his daily newspaper, or even his weekly Independent or Christian Register, without reading Rousseau, though the people who write those papers may never have read a word of him directly. What is the use, then, of buying his books? They have done their work.

So as to a score of other authors whose books one often sees ranged in lines, like tombs at Mount Auburn, in gentlemen's private libraries. Putting aside considerations of bibliology, which are of interest to but few people, it is reasonable to say that one's bookbuying should be, after the poets and the classics of the language are fairly represented on one's shelves, confined to the real authors of the time—to the men and women who are saying something new, or saying something old in such a way as to make it take a new hold on people's thoughts. Read enough of the reviews and of book news to know what is really significant in the books that are appearing, and buy along those lines as fast as you are able to read thoughtfully the books you buy. Obtain your books as far as you can in editions printed in the author's own country; they are more representative of the personality of the author, and help you to get on even terms of sympathy with him. But of course you will not buy a book in a foreign language if it has been translated into English, unless you are able to read it without translating it to yourself as you go along. To do that would be, as Emerson said, like insisting upon swimming across the Charles River instead of coming over on the bridge.

One word more as to buying authors in editions printed in their own country: One would not, of course, buy an American author in an English edition; that would be an affectation. To see our own authors in English type, printing and binding always has the effect upon the Listener of hearing an American speak with a British accent. And if this has such an effect, why should he buy an English author in an American edition, when the English edition can be ordered and obtained in a month through any bookseller? Besides, it is undeniable that English books as a rule are much better specimens of the book-makers' art than ours are. It may be wounding to our national pride that it is so, but it is so. Furthermore, a great many of the most valuable English books are never reprinted on this side. Reprinting is a matter of the prospect of making money; and it is not always the good book which sells, as everybody knows who has read more than a dozen books. For instance, Walter Pater's "Marius the Epicurean" is a greater book—the book of a greater thinker and a better writer—than "Robert Elsmere," but it has never been reprinted in America. And of course a cheap and dirty reprint of any book does not deserve a place upon a thoughtful person's book-shelves.

There seems to be no good reason why one should care to keep forever all the books one buys. A certain proportion of one's books will, anyway, turn out to be failures, so far as influencing the mind and occupying a place in one's intellectual affections are concerned. When your book-shelves begin to overflow, a judicious culling should be made. Select a dozen or two of the books you like least and need least, carry them to the dealer in second-hand books, and get for them as many as you can make him give you of the books you do want. Mere novelty should not be consulted in this transaction. Perhaps a book that is twenty-five years old has only just swum into your ken. Perhaps it will be a classic that you want. But at any rate, your book-shelves, culled and recruited in this manner, will always represent the present stage of your intellectual, moral and æsthetic development; they will, much more than an indiscriminate collection, including everything you have ever bought, represent you, and be a "proof to you of your own existence." Among the books you keep always by you, no doubt, will be some that you inherited, or bought when you were fifteen years old; those are of the books that stick, and are a legitimate part of you. The book you buy to-day, on the other hand, may come to overtop all the rest. Perhaps you may pack off to the second-hand dealer the real intellectual pearl of your collection; no matter—

"What care I how fair she be,
If she be not fair to me?"

You may not always be just or wise in your judgments; but you have at least the satisfaction, in buying books in this way, that you are true to your own best and most studious self.

JAEGER'S LIFE OF IBSEN: A CORRESPONDENCE.

To the Editor of the New York Times:

I beg to inform you that the "Life of Henrik Ibsen," just published by William Heinemann, London, and Lovell, New York, has never been authorized by its author, Henry Jaeger, who in a letter just received pronounces the undertaking a "literary piracy," and has given me the permission, in his and my own name, publicly to announce and denounce that fact.

The sole authorization was given to me in January, and I hold the American copyright. My manuscript was completed several weeks ago and in the hands of my publisher, who, however, returned it when the book appeared.

In the interest of international copyright, and as a plea for justice, please publish this in your esteemed paper. I remain, gentlemen, yours very truly.

HENRIK G. PETERSEN, M.D.

VIENNA, Sunday, 19th of October, 1890.
J. Garelli Gasse IX.

NEW YORK, November 5, 1890.

Editor of New York Times.

DEAR SIR: I notice in your issue of November 3, in a letter headed "Pirated," and signed by Henrik G. Petersen, M.D., a statement that Jaeger's "Life of Ibsen" has been issued by Lovell.

Dr. Petersen is evidently in error, as I have not published such a work, nor has it been issued by my successors, The United States Book Co. Yours very truly,

JOHN W. LOVELL.

THACKERAY LETTERS AND MSS.

From the Pall Mall Gazette.

There is to be sold at Sotheby's, on November 26, an important collection of manuscripts and autograph letters by Thackeray and Rossetti. The MSS., autograph letters and drawings by Thackeray belonged to the late Mr. J. F. Boyes, a schoolfellow of the great novelist's at the Charterhouse, with whom he corresponded throughout life in terms of the most intimate friendship.

The MSS. include "Horace Carthusianæ," an original unpublished manuscript in verse, 7 pp. 4to, written by Thackeray when monitor at the Charterhouse, at seventeen years of age. It consists of a poem of 100 lines, dated Charterhouse, Thursday, December 4, 1828, and presents a picture of the procedure of the school from early morning to bed time, and fully authenticates the reputation attached to the head master (Dr. Russell, see "Moments with Thackeray") for severity. The interest of the MS. is increased by a series of footnotes explaining passages in the text, indicated by asterisks, and showing the customs of the school, and original manuscript Latin verses (sixteen lines) with his signature, W. M. Thackeray, 1 p. 4to, with a large caricature pen-and-ink drawing on the reverse, of an invalid attended by a doctor and nurse. The verses show him in an amorous mood, and as the writing appears to be contemporary with letters written from the Charterhouse in 1826, it is highly probable that the "Clara" referred to was Joseph Carne's sister, the supposed "Star of Harrow" of his Holiday Song, which is also offered for sale, and which was written when at the Charterhouse at fifteen years of age. It is a good specimen of Thackeray's youthful bantering muse, commencing:

Now let us dance and sing
While Carthusian bells do ring;
Joy twangs the fiddle-string,
And Freedom blows the flute.
Tiddle dum and tiddle di,
What a joke for you and I,
Dulce domum! let us cry,
Charterhouse adieu.

Various among his schoolfellows are mentioned by name, as Joseph Carne, Edward Langdale Smith, Hudson, Oare, Hastings and George Shakespear; while one verse, the most interesting of them all, proves Thackeray's susceptibility to female charms even at that early age. It runs:

Queen of Beauty! Star of Harrow!
Thou hast shot through heart and marrow,
And stricken Makepeace with thy arrow
In the head and brain.

Thackeray's Schrevelius' Greek Lexicon, old leather binding, is likewise offered for sale. It contains his name in a boyish hand, the fly-leaves (seven pages) are covered with sketches, portraits and scraps of verse, and thirty of the pages bear slight but humorous sketches on the margins, by Thackeray, being portraits of school-fellows and others (including a head of Napoleon I., and one believed to be a portrait of Dr. Russell, headmaster in the Charterhouse in Thackeray's school days), caricatures, etc., etc. His "Froissart's Chronicles" bears on the fly-leaves seven clever pencil sketches, one (full-page) being a joust between an English knight and a French knight, the remainder being knights in armor, horses caparisoned for the tournament, etc.

There is also an album containing twenty-two very clever original pen-and-ink and pencil sketches, by W. M. Thackeray, made by him while at the Charterhouse, and principally of a humorous character, some bearing inscriptions in his autograph, and including the following subjects: Hector and Andromache (burlesque); Combats between Brigands, Turks and Soldiers; Country Fair; The Minstrel Boy; Maltese Carriage; Death of Marmion (burlesque); Prize for English verse at the Charterhouse (satirical); Brutus (burlesque), etc., etc. The sketches were given to J. F. Boyes while at the Charterhouse.

LACK OF INTERNATIONAL COPYRIGHT LOWERING THE STANDARD OF AMERICAN AUTHORSHIP.

"In all of the talk about the need of an international copyright," the reader of a well-known New York publishing house said to a Sun reporter, "the most important phase of the whole matter has received scant attention. I found myself obliged the other day to wait three hours one morning, in the reception-room of a doctor on the east side of town. A servant of mine, to whom all of the household were devotedly attached, had grown ill, and she insisted on going to the east side doctor's house, instead of allowing me to call in our family physician. We drove over there, and took our place in turn with the score or two other visitors who were scattered around the big waiting-room. I had a short conference with the doctor when I went in, and he informed me that it was impossible for him to make any distinction with his patients. He must see them in turn. I had not brought a morning paper with me, although reading has been the habit of my life. On the mantel of the room was a collection of dog-eared, paper-covered novels of the cheap and penny dreadful order. They were the works of authors whose names were unknown to me, although, doubtless, they would be familiar to readers of weekly story papers. Of course, we never read papers of that kind. I suppose I am as skillful as most men of my line, whose business is getting at the merits of works of fiction. I went over the entire list of books—there might have been half a hundred or more—and selected six, by as many different authors. I was amazed at the promise which at least four of them showed. All the novels had been written down to the multitude, but the dramatic force, originality and ability in writing dialogue which the writers showed gave the keenest promise of future power. Of course, these books were written to keep the authors alive, and equally, of course, they could not come into competition with the works of the French, German and English masters, whose efforts have been nursed and liberally paid for by their appreciative countrymen. The writers of this cheap literature are kept to their level by an iron rod. There is no chance of their mounting. The very instant they improve their style they lose their hold on the ignorant readers, and they come into competition with foreign novelists; hence they are confined to depicting local life for every day people. There is no question about the waste of ability and genius which our system encourages."

NOTES ON AUTHORS.

FRIEDERICH SPIELHAGEN has fully recovered his health and is preparing a drama "In eiserner Zeit," to be performed shortly at Frankfurt a-m, Vienna, and Berlin.

M. TAINX has just finished correcting the proofs of another volume in his series on the Origines de la France Contemporaine. It is the first volume of his "Le Régime Moderne," and deals with the Napoleonic epoch.

GEORGE BANCROFT, the venerable historian, in a conversation with a friend, recently said: "I have laid my work upon the shelf, and can now only wait for the future summons. Literary effort has passed beyond my powers. I can do no more, so I must accept the common lot of humanity. I enjoy taking a retrospective view of the events of the long past, but, dimmed by the infirmities of age, the scene is without the sharp lines of detail which younger faculties of mind bring out in interesting relief." Mr. Bancroft is again comfortably established in his Washington home, amid pleasant surroundings, and is in full possession of his senses. He can still enjoy many of the pleasures of life, but the work of life for him is over.

PERSONAL NOTES

JOHN DURIE, one of the oldest booksellers in Canada, and his wife, celebrated the fiftieth anniversary of their wedding day a week ago, at Bytown. Many friends called on the happy couple at their residence, to offer congratulations. A most pleasing incident was a visit from the ladies of the board of management of the Protestant Orphans' Home, who presented Mrs. Durie with an address read by the recording secretary, accompanied by a beautiful gift of silver.

BUSINESS NOTES.

MURFREESBORO, TENN.—Smith & Fox have succeeded Smith & Baird, booksellers and stationers.

BELOIT, WIS.—Shumaker & Middlebrook, booksellers, have been succeeded by Middlebrook & Barnes.

NEW YORK CITY.—Bowden & Smith, booksellers, have removed from 8 Astor Place, and will in future carry on business at 830 Broadway. The firm will be known hereafter as "Mitchells." Having secured a large addition to their capital, they propose to materially extend their business operations. They have despatched an agent to London and Paris, who will represent them in those cities for the next three months, when they hope to establish permanent offices there. As before, they will deal in standard, new, old and rare books, autographs, prints, engravings, etc., and will issue catalogues at frequent intervals.

JOURNALISTIC NOTES.

A BIOGRAPHY of Mr. Birket Foster, illustrated by examples of his most popular works, will form the subject of the Christmas number of the Art Journal.

Public Opinion, the eclectic weekly published in Washington and New York, offers a first prize of $50, a second of $30, and a third of $20, for the best three essays on the interesting question: "The Industrial Future of the South." The essays must be limited to 3000 words, and must be received by December 15th. Full particulars may be had by addressing Public Opinion, Washington, D. C.

THE LEONARD SCOTT PUBLICATION COMPANY, New York, announce that, beginning with the November number, they will in the future furnish their subscribers with the original Edinburgh edition of Blackwood's Magazine, printed in Edinburgh and published by them here under authority of Messrs. Wm. Blackwood & Son. This firm is now supplying the original English editions of nine periodicals at nearly 50 per cent. less than they can be purchased abroad.

The Newsman's issue for October is probably the largest and most important number it has ever published, comprising thirty-two pages and a cover. Its first page is a cartoon by Chip, illustrating the dominance of the American News Company over the publisher and newsdealer. A full report is given of the seventh annual conference of the Newsdealers' and Booksellers' National Association. We notice an increase of the news items and general information, and a decided improvement in the general make-up of the journal. The Newsman certainly has a large and for the greater part unworked field, in which it may do useful work.

Harper's Weekly for November 8 contains an interesting sketch of George Washburn Smalley, the London correspondent of the New York Tribune, written by Edmund C. Stedman. It appears that Mr. Smalley was born of good old Colony stock in Franklin, Suffolk County, Mass., June 2, 1833, and was a member of the now well known class of "53," having for classmates Andrew D. White, C. T. Lewis, J. T. Whiton, R. L. Gibson, Benjamin K. Phelps, and others long since distinguished for their respective achievements. He read law with the Hon. George Hoar, was admitted to the bar in 1856 and practiced law until the opening of the Civil War. In 1860 he entered journalism in the service of the New York Tribune, going at once to the front. In 1862 he married Miss Phoebe Garnaut, the adopted daughter of Wendell Phillips, and assumed an editorial chair in the Tribune office. In 1867 he went to England to organize the European bureau of his journal, and established himself permanently at London. "It has been his lot," says Mr. Stedman, "to chronicle and comment upon, often to predict, the political changes of Great Britain and the Continent, to describe notable pageants, and characterize the art, the drama and the literature of the transatlantic world." A portrait accompanies the sketch.

LITERARY AND TRADE NOTES.

HENRY HAVARD has just finished the fourth and concluding volume of his "Dictionnaire de l'Ameublement et de la Decoration," in the compilation of which he had been at work for fourteen weeks. The work is published in Paris by Quantin.

CHARLES H. SERGEL & Co., Chicago, call attention to fact that the price of "Jerome Leaster" was incorrectly given in their advertisement in THE PUBLISHERS' WEEKLY, October 25. It ought to have been 75 cents, instead of 50 cents, for paper cover.

THOMAS WHITTAKER will publish at once Prof. J. Macbride Sterrett's "Reason and Authority in Religion," a brochure on a contemporary topic; also, Dr. Henry Wace's "Central Points of our Lord's Ministry," a series of popular New Testament studies.

ALBERT & SCOTT, Chicago, will shortly issue a volume consisting of the three great essays on Friendship by Cicero, Bacon and Emerson. It will be printed and bound in an attractive style as a gift-book, and will be a most appropriate token of friendship for the season.

SILVER, BURDETT & Co., Boston, have ready the second edition of "Our Own Country," Book III. of the "The World and Its People," a delightful series of geographical readers. This book is vol. 7 of the Young Folk's Library, edited by the well known educator, Dr. Larkin Dunton, Head Master of Boston Normal School.

W. R. JENKINS has just published "Sans Famille," by Hector Malot, abridged and arranged for school use by Prof. Paul Bercy; "Les travailleurs de la mer," by Victor Hugo, uniform with the handsome edition of the same author's other works already issued by this firm; "L'Homme à L'Oreille Cassée," by Edmond About, in Romans Choisis; and a "First Course in French Conversation," by Prof. Charles P. Du Croquet.

ESTES & LAURIAT have now ready a sumptuous edition of Flammarion's delightful astronomical romance "Urania," translated by Augusta Rice Stetson, daughter of ex-Governor Rice, of Massachusetts, lavishly illustrated with designs from drawings by prominent French artists; an édition de luxe of Victor Hugo's "Hans of Iceland," translated by Abby Langdon Alger, illustrated with a number of etchings, photogravures and half-tone plates, from designs by French artists.

As agent for the London Religious Tract Society, Fleming H. Revell announces for immediate publication two additions to the Bypaths of Bible Knowledge series: "Modern Discoveries on the Site of Ancient Ephesus," by the late J. T. Wood, F.S.A., with thirteen illustrations, a sketch of the excavations carried on at Ephesus by the author, that resulted in the discovery of the actual site of the famous temple of Diana, and "Early Bible Songs," by A. H. Drysdale, a scholarly treatment of the various songs imbedded in the early books of the Old Testament, with a sketch of Hebrew poetry.

THE GOSSIP PRINTING CO., 69 St. Michael Street, Mobile, Ala., will publish at once a skit on "Society as I Have Found It," by T. C. De Leon, who very cleverly "took off" "The Quick or The Dead." It will be entitled "Society as I Have Foundered It," by Cad McBallaster, and is promised to be "funnier, fresher and saucier" than "The Rock or the Rye," which is now issued in the Library of American Authors, published by the United States Book Co. Mr. De Leon has also in preparation a volume on the "Alabama State Troops in Camp and Field," with rosters and records fully illustrated.

LITTLE, BROWN & Co. have in preparation "Judaism and Christianity," by Crawford Howell Toy, professor in Harvard University, which will attempt to sketch the progress of thought from the Old to the New Testaments; "Myths and Folk Tales of the Russians, Western Slovacks and Magyars," by Jeremiah Curtin, author of "Myths and Folk Lore of Ireland," a work which has received strong endorsement by John Fiske in the Atlantic Monthly, and other critics; also "Greek and Roman Antiquities," by Dr. Wm. Smith, a new revised edition, much enlarged, and mostly re-written, to appear in two quarto volumes. Vol. 1 will be ready in December.

HOUGHTON, MIFFLIN & Co. publish to day "Over the Teacups," by Oliver Wendell Holmes, which has been described as an "Evening supplement to the Breakfast Table Series," and which, though naturally somewhat more grave in tone, is no less vigorous and original, brilliant and pungent, humorous and pathetic than its predecessors. "Walford," a new novel of life in a New England manufacturing town, by Ellen Olney Kirk; and a new edition of her popular book "Queen Money"; "Timothy's Quest," a bright, humorous and touching story for young people, by Kate Douglas Wiggin; "Essays in Philosophy," by Prof. William Knight of St. Andrews, Scotland, whose reputation as a thinker and writer will commend this book to readers interested in the large themes to which it is devoted. They have also just ready a special book, entitled "A Legislative Handbook," relating to the preparation of statutes, with a chapter on the publication of statutes, by Ashton R. Willard. This book gives specific directions respecting the preparation of bills for presentation to the Legislature. It states what is important and what is desirable in statutory expression, and, as it is applicable to all American legislative bodies, it ought to have a wide circulation.

HARPER & BROTHERS have still three important books to publish this year, among which the most important will probably be "Sir Walter Scott's Journal," reproduced from the original copy preserved at Abbotsford, and edited by David Douglas. It will be enriched with numerous explanatory notes by the editor, and accompanied by illustrative extracts from unpublished sources, together with the reminiscences of James Skene, one of Scott's oldest and most intimate friends. The second will be a collection of the letters written by George W. Smalley, within the past twenty years to the New York Tribune, comprising his impressions of men and events in Europe during that period. Few Americans have a more extensive personal acquaintance with European celebrities than Mr. George W. Smalley, and few have been so long and so thoroughly informed concerning the political, social and literary aspect of affairs abroad. His observations, therefore, are important contributions to contemporary history and criticism, and as such well worthy of preservation. They have been collected and arranged, not chronologically, but with reference to their subjects, and will be published in two volumes early in November. The third is a short study of Lord Beaconsfield, by J. A. Froude. This volume was written with the co-operation of Lord Beaconsfield's brother Mr. Ralph Disraeli, and the assistance of the Duke of Rutland, and other well-informed friends of the great Conservative statesman. It portrays the literary no less than the political achievements of Lord Beaconsfield, and may be said to be the first authoritative record of his career. This work is the initial volume of a series of biographies of the Queen's Prime Ministers, edited by Stuart J. Reid, to be published at periodical intervals.

THE first instalment of Zola's latest novel, "L'Argent," will make its appearance at once in a Paris journal. It will not be issued in book form until late in the Spring of 1891.

MACMILLAN & Co. have nearly ready Prof. Mahaffy's new book on "The Greek World under the Roman Sway," which completes another stage in his account of the social life and civilization of the Greeks, and pursues the subject from the subjugation of Hellenic lands by Rome down to the accession of Hadrian, when Greece may be said to have recovered her supremacy.

F. A. BROCKHAUS, Leipzig, has just issued the first volume of an encyclopædia in the Russian language, edited by Prof. J. E. Andrejewskij of St. Petersburg. This is the first undertaking of the kind for the Russian people which promises to end successfully, all other attempts in Russia having ended disastrously. The work will probably be completed in 16 or 18 volumes, each to be fully illustrated, and furnished with maps on the plan of Brockhaus' famous "Conversations-Lexikon."

MR. MUDIE, whose death was announced in our last issue, was in many respects a remarkable man. The vast circulating library which he built up out of nothing, in the forty years of its existence, is said to have handled "seven times as many books as there are in the British Museum, and twice as many as there are in the twenty largest libraries in the United States." His system, now a limited liability company with a hundred thousand subscribers, was, up to within a few years ago, under his direct management, and modified to a large degree the whole course of the publishing trade in England, and helped very largely to keep up the published price of books.

Charles Scribner's Sons New Books.

IN SCRIPTURE LANDS. New Views of Sacred Places.

By EDWARD L. WILSON. With 150 original illustrations engraved from photographs taken by the author. Large 8vo, $3.50.

Mr. Wilson's journey was the first instance in which a fully-equipped artist photographer has visited the scenes made memorable by the Bible narratives, and has reproduced, both by camera and by word painting, the people, the ruins, and the famous spots which have become household words throughout Christendom.

ELECTRICITY IN DAILY LIFE.

A Popular Account of the Application of Electricity to Every Day Uses. With 120 illustrations, 8vo, $3.00.

A work similar in scope and importance to the "American Railway" published last year. Eminent experts treating in a popular manner of the electric railway, motors, lighting telegraphs, cables and their laying, electricity in the household, in warfare, on land and sea, and as applied to the human body.

THE EVIDENCE OF CHRISTIAN EXPERIENCE.

By Prof. LEWIS F. STEARNS, D.D. 12mo, $2.00.

Prof. Stearns' important work opens up a new field in theological science, dealing in a masterly way with a subject that finds no place in the traditional system of apologetics.

THE PACIFIC COAST SCENIC TOUR.

From Southern California to Alaska.—The Yosemite.—The Canadian Pacific Railway.—Yellowstone Park and the Grand Cañon. By HENRY T. FINCK. With 20 full-page illustrations. 8vo, $2.50.

A patriotic demonstration of the superiority of American scenery. The description, by so experienced a traveller and so vivacious a writer, of the character and accessibility of the natural grandeurs of the Pacific Slope, is as entertaining as it is valuable. The picture is more comprehensive than any heretofore attempted.

IN THE VALLEY.

By HAROLD FREDERIC. With 16 full-page illustrations by Howard Pyle. 12mo, $1.50.

"It is uncommonly well written, and the whole mise en scene has verity and importance, for the valley of the Hudson, at the moment before the Revolution broke out, is new to romance, and it is certainly picturesque."—W. D. HOWELLS, in Harper's Magazine.

FAMOUS WOMEN OF THE FRENCH COURT.

Translated from the French of IMBERT DE SAINT-AMAND by Thomas Sergeant Perry. Each with Portrait. 12mo $1.25 per volume. Six volumes in a box, $7.50.

HAVE JUST PUBLISHED:

Teetotaler Dick.

His Temptations, Struggles and Triumphs.
By THOMAS W. KNOX, author of "The Boy Travellers," "The Young Nimrods," etc., etc.
1 vol., 12mo, cloth, 418 pp., 6 illus., $1.50.

A Story of Country and City Life in the United States, and of Travel and Adventure in Foreign Lands.

Prominence is given throughout the narrative to the temperance question, and the effects of alcohol are considered in their moral, physical, social, business, economical and other aspects. Many of the views and investigations are here published in book form for the first time, and are of great general interest.

ALSO NEW EDITION OF

Come Ye Apart.

Daily Readings in the Life of Christ. By J. R.
MILLER, D.D. 1 vol., 12mo, cloth, $1.50.

Helena's Household.

A Tale of Rome in the 1st Century. By JAS.
DE MILLE. 1 vol., 12mo, cloth, $1.50.

READY NOVEMBER 12.

POEMS.

By EMILY DICKINSON. Edited by Mabel Loomis Todd and T. W. Higginson. One volume, 16mo, bound in drab and white cloth with gilt design, gilt top, $1.50.

"It is believed that the thoughtful reader will find in these pages a quality more suggestive of the poetry of William Blake than of anything to be elsewhere found—flashes of wholly original and profound insight into nature and life; words and phrases exhibiting an extraordinary vividness of descriptive and imaginative power. Mrs. Todd and Mr. Higginson were intimate friends of Miss Dickinson's and are fully qualified to place her work before the lover of true poetry in its best light.

"Miss Dickinson was born in Amherst, Mass., December, 10, 1830, and died there May 15, 1886. Mr. Higginson says in his preface: 'She was a townswoman and intimate friend of Helen Jackson, H.H., who had a high opinion of her poetic abilities.'"

NANON.

By GEORGE SAND. Translated by Elizabeth Wormeley Latimer. 12mo, half Russia, uniform with "Mauprat," "The Snow Man," "Antonia," "The Bagpipers," etc. $1.50.

One of the prettiest and most carefully constructed of George Sand's later works, giving the best view of the French Revolution from a rural standpoint.

NEWS FROM NOWHERE;

Or, An Epoch of Rest. Being some chapters from a Utopian romance. By WILLIAM MORRIS, author of "The Earthly Paradise," "Life and Death of Jason," "The House of the Wolfings," etc. With a drawing by Walter Crane, entitled "Labor's May Day." 16mo, cloth, $1.00.

This is a socialistic romance, picturing an imaginary future state of society in which there is to be a solidarity of labor.

Popular Holiday Art Books and Juveniles.

Summerland. A new volume by Margaret MacDonald Pullman. With 63 original illustrations, engraved on wood by Andrew. Size $9\frac{1}{2} \times 12\frac{1}{2}$ inches. Oblong quarto, artistic cover of two colored cloths, beautifully ornamented, full gilt, \$3.75; turkey morocco, \$9.00; tree calf, \$10.00; English seal style, \$7.00.

"How to describe Margaret MacDonald Pullman's 'Summerland'! It is beautiful, very beautiful—alive and vibrant, in its every tiniest bit of expression, with the divinity of inner meaning which makes true art the faithful interpreter of Nature."—Boston Times.

Days Serene. Original illustrations by Margaret MacDonald Pullman. Engraved on wood by Andrew. Royal oblong quarto. Emblematic cover designs in colors. Thirty full-page original illustrations, full gilt, size, $10\frac{1}{2} \times 14\frac{1}{2}$. Cloth, \$5; turkey morocco, \$12.50; tree calf, \$12.50; English seal style, \$9.00.

An Old Love-Letter. Miss Jerome's latest work. Designed and illuminated by Irene E. Jerome, author of "One Year's Sketch Book," "Nature's Hallelujah," "In a Fair Country," "A Bunch of Violets," "The Message of the Bluebird," etc. Antique covers, tied with silk, boxed, $1.00.

One of the handsomest of the inexpensive illustrated volumes of the year, bearing on its every page and throughout its every thought the fragrance of a truly divine message.

New editions of:

In a Fair Country. Gold cloth, $6.00.

Nature's Hallelujah. Gold cloth, $6.00.

One Year's Sketch-Book. Gold cloth, $6.00.

A Bunch of Violets. Gold cloth, $3.75.

Message of the Bluebird. Blue and white cloth, $2.00; Palatine boards, $1.00.

Baby's Kingdom. An entirely new edition, wherein may be chronicled, as memories for grown-up days, the Mother's Story of the Progress of the Baby. Designed and illustrated by Annie F. Cox. Oblong quarto, blue and white cloth, gold and white cloth, full gold cloth, $3.75; turkey morocco, $9.00.

The thought which conceived the publication of such a book is a most worthy one; as among all the treasures which in our maturing years we might gather, none would possess the peculiar value attached to a book of this character, where a mother's hand recorded our early biography of the long ago.

The Guest Book. "Welcome the coming, speed the parting guest." In which may be recorded the coming and the going of guests, with pages for autographs, incidents, and sketches pertaining to Pleasant Visits, Social Calls, and other Gatherings. Designed and illustrated by Annie F. Cox, author of "Baby's Kingdom." New Edition. Gold cloth, $3.75; calf or turkey morocco, $9.00.

The Wooing of Grandmother Grey. An Idyl of the Olden Time. Poem by Kate Tannatt Woods. Illustrations by Copeland. Engraved and printed under the direction of George T. Andrew. Oblong quarto, twenty-four illustrations, gold or white cloth, full gilt, gilt edges, $2.00.

"Seldom have we seen so much homely joy and sadness portrayed and interpreted in a few graceful stanzas. Mrs. Wood's illustrated poem is a very beautiful gift, which will never cease to interest and delight its recipients."—Woman's Journal.

All Around the Year—1891. Lee and Shepard's New Calendar. Designed in Sepiatint and Color by J. Pauline Sunter. Printed on heavy cardboard, gilt edges, with chain, tassels, and rings; size, $4\frac{3}{4} \times 5\frac{1}{2}$ inches; boxed, price 50 cents.

On the Blockade. A new volume by Oliver Optic in "The Blue and the Gray Series." Emblematic dyes. Illustrated. Cloth, two colors, $1.50.

The author has written nothing more interesting or romantic than the Blue and the Gray Series, the scenes of which are connected with the Civil War, and many of them being founded on facts. The preceding volumes of this series, in uniform style, are "Taken by the Enemy" and "Within the Enemy's Lines."

Wonderful Deeds and Doings of Little Giant Boab and His Talking Raven Tabib. By Ingersoll Lockwood, author of "Travels and Adventures of Little Baron Trump and his Wonderful Dog Bulger," etc. Profusely illustrated by Clifton Johnson. Quarto, cloth, $2.00.

The whole forms a delightful romance for young readers, and for the older reader who is not averse to a tale of the romantic and marvelous. The work is profusely illustrated by nearly one hundred and fifty drawings from the talented artist, Clifton Johnson.

The Kelp-Gatherers. A new volume by J. T. Trowbridge in "The Start in Life Series." Illustrated. Cloth, $1.00 each volume.

This makes the third volume in "The Start in Life Series," the preceding volumes of which are "A Start in Life," a story of the Genesee country, "Biding His Time; or, Andrew Hapnell's Fortune." The three volumes in a neat box.

A Lost Jewel. By Harriet Prescott Spofford. Illustrated. Cloth, $1.00.

This is a sweet story that will hold the reader's attention from first to last. The incidents narrated are perfectly natural in their happenings, and the characters are sketched with skill and vigor, as would be expected in any work by this author.

The Log of the Maryland; or, Adventures at Sea. By Captain Douglas Frazar, author of "Perseverance Island; or, Robinson Crusoe of the 19th Century," "Practical Boat Sailing," etc. Illustrated. Cloth, $1.50.

It rarely happens that one who has spent some years at sea has the inclination and the literary ability to describe his experiences and adventures, but the author of "Perseverance Island" gives us an interesting book in this story of a voyage of the good ship Maryland. The scenes and incidents of every-day life on board ship, and the detail of the sailor's life at sea, the hard work and strict discipline, as well as the amusements of Jack Tar, are lively and clearly described.

Dorothy's Experience. By Adeline Trafton, author of "An American Girl Abroad," "His Inheritance," "Katherine Earle," etc. Cloth, $1.00.

Dorothy Drake, the subject of Miss Trafton's story, "was born into the church," and surrounded early with its influence. The spiritual experience she went through, and the efforts she made to elevate and reform others by self-sacrificing labors, and her desire to establish in the hearts of all Christ-like principles, are told with telling effect. The fascinating story appeared as a serial in the columns of the N. Y. Christian Union, awakening the liveliest interest.

Pards. A Story of Two Homeless Boys. By Effie W. Merriman, editor of The Housekeeper, Minneapolis. Illustrated. Cloth, $1.00.

A reviewer of long experience says: "Such a bright children's book as this has very seldom come within the range of my reading. It is certainly a long way ahead of many of the popular juveniles of the day."

THE LATEST BOOK ON

Africa

And the best that has yet been written.

Among the wonderful works of the present day is "The Ogowe Country," a graphic narrative of travel in the Dark Continent. It has the accuracy of Stanley, the Christian tone of Schweinfurth, the adventurous spirit of Du Chaillu !

Add to these characteristics a charming fascination of style that rivets the attention, a descriptive power that renders illustrations almost unnecessary, and a profound knowledge of the country and its natives that stamps the book at once as an authority on all subjects pertaining to the Dark Continent.

It is full of interest from title-page to finish. It is charmingly and graphically written. So wide in its scope that it treats of country, climate, habits, customs, superstitions and resources of the people of Africa, not dryly, but in a fascinating way.

Its illustrations are as numerous as they are beautiful and artistic—over sixty full-page engravings from photographs.

Then its appearance. Four hundred pages, elegant binding, beautiful letter-press, excellent paper.

An interesting and delightful volume, it is without exception the handsomest and most valuable gift-book of the year.

NOTES IN SEASON.

THE WORTHINGTON Co. call attention to the fact that they have recently come into possession of the plates of several standards, which they intend to issue in uniform sets. Among the volumes in preparation for immediate publication are Wharton's "Wits and Beaux of Society" and "Queens of Society;" Wilson's "Noces Ambrosianæ;" Las Cases' "Napoleon;" O'Meara's "Napoleon in Exile;" Napier's "Peninsular War;" "Works of Thomas Gray;" Payne's "Arabian Nights;" and "Thackeray's Complete Works."

FUNK & WAGNALLS will publish at once "Samantha Among the Brethren," by Josiah Allen's Wife (Marietta Holley). This book is a humorous and semi-serious protest by "Josiah Allen's Wife" against the decision of the General Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church of 1888 respecting the admission of women as delegates to that body. There are many strong points made in favor of the weaker sex possessing equal rights with man, and they are submitted in that inimitable style for which the author is noted. The arguments are witty, and they lose no force from being expressed in the homely Yankee dialect. The book contains numerous illustrations.

THOMAS Y. CROWELL & Co. will publish at once the first volume of Sybel's important work on "The Founding of the German Empire by William I." It is an open secret that Bismarck took an active part in the production of the work; in fact, all the anecdotal matter is directly from his pen, and many of the diplomatic disclosures (a few of which go beyond the archives themselves) may be traced to the ex-Chancellor's dictation. Much of the diplomatic material is given fuller than in the official documents; and in other directions it is apparent that von Sybel has been permitted to draw upon sources inaccessible to others. His work, therefore, will create considerable attention and discussion. The second volume will be ready early in January next, the remaining three volumes early in the spring of 1891. In the first two months of publication in Germany it is reported that fifty thousand copies were sold. The work has been translated by Prof. Livingston Perrin, of the Boston University.

HOUGHTON, MIFFLIN & COMPANY publish next Wednesday another volume of Miss Jewett's delightful New England stories, entitled "Strangers and Wayfarers;" "Walford," a novel of New England, said to be exceedingly readable, by Ellen Olney Kirk, whose "Story of Margaret Kent" has made her very widely known; a new edition, at a reduced price, of Mrs. Kirk's "Queen Money;" a story for either young people or older ones, "Timothy's Quest," by Kate Douglas Wiggin, whose "Birds' Christmas Carol" and "Story of Patsy" have found hosts of readers; a book called "The Story Hour," containing short stories for the home and the kindergarten, by Mrs. Wiggin and her sister, Miss Nora A. Smith; a volume of "Representative Sonnets by American Authors," with essays, biographical notes, indexes, etc., by Chas. H. Crandall; the fifth and sixth volumes of Mr. Lowell's works in the new Riverside Edition, including "Political Essays" and "Literary and Political Addresses," the latter volume, which completes the prose works, containing a remarkably full index (of about 100 pages to the six prize volumes; and a "Sketch of Chester Harding," the illustrious artist, drawn by his own hand, edited by his daughter, Mrs. Margaret E. White. On the 26th will appear Alexander Brown's elaborate work on "The Genesis of the United States," showing by documents the contest between England and Spain, nearly three centuries ago, for the possession of the country which is now the United States; the "Life of Richard H. Dana, Jr.," known all over the world as the author of "Two Years Before the Mast," by Chas. Francis Adams; a third historical novel by Mrs. Jane G. Austin, entitled "Dr. Le Baron and His Daughters;" and a choice little volume of "American Sonnets," edited by Col. Higginson and Mr. E. H. Bigelow.

WEEKLY RECORD OF NEW PUBLICATIONS.*

The abbreviations are usually self-explanatory. c. after the date indicates that the book is copyrighted; if the copyright date differs from the imprint date, the year of copyright is added. Books of foreign origin of which the edition (annotated, illustrated, etc.) is entered as copyright, are marked c. ed.; translations, c. tr.; n. p. in place of price, indicates that the publisher makes no price, either net or retail, and quotes prices to the trade only upon application.

Sizes are designated as follows: F. (folio: over 30 centimeters high); (Q. 4to: under 30 cm.); O. (8vo: 25 cm.); D. (12mo: 20 cm.); S. (16mo: 17½ cm.); T. (24mo: 15 cm.); Tl. (32mo: 12½ cm.); Fe. (48mo: 10 cm.). Sq., obl. nar., designate square, oblong, narrow books of these heights.

About, Edmond. L'homme a l'oreille cassée. N. Y., W: R. Jenkins, 1891 [1890.] 3-273 p. D. (Romans choisis, no. 16.) pap., 60 c.

Acton, Mrs. Adams, [formerly Jennie Hering.] Rosebud; il., by M. E. Edwards. N. Y., G: Routledge & Sons, 1891 [1890.] 5+248 p. il. D. cl., 90 c.

"Rosebud" was the pet name for Rosalind Trelawney. The story tells why Rollo, Felicia and Rosalind were forced to leave their beautiful home in Devonshire, and live in a little house on Norway Road, London, and how the children regarded the change. Rosebud is the most interesting of the trio, and the most pleasing part of the book is that which tells how she won the love of her grandparents and returned with them to Fairyland.

Æsop. [Æsopus.] The favorite book of fables. N. Y., T: Nelson & Sons, 1890. 5-128 p. il. D. bds., 50 c.

Æsop's fables, prettily illustrated and bound.

Armatage, G: The horseowner and stableman's companion; or, hints on selection, purchase and general management of the horse. 3d ed., rev. N. Y., F: Warne & Co., 1890. 8-120 p. 12°, cl., 50 c.

Armatage, G: How to feed the horse, avoid disease and save money. 3d ed., rev. N. Y., F: Warne & Co., 1890. 8-132 p. 12°, cl., 50 c.

Armatage, G: The thermometer as an aid to diagnosis in veterinary medicine. 2d ed., rev. N. Y., F: Warne & Co., 1890. 6-64 p. 12°, cl., 50 c.

Ballantyne, R. M. Charlie to the rescue; a tale of the sea and Rockies; il. by the author. N. Y., T: Nelson & Sons, 1890. 6+423 p. D. cl., $1.50.

One of Ballantyne's characteristic stories of adventures for boys. A larger part of the scene is laid in the west.

Balzac, Honoré de. The Chouans; il. with engravings on wood, from drawings by Julien Le Blant; tr. by G: Saintsbury. N. Y., Cassell Pub. Co., [1890.] 12+418 p. Q. cl., $7.50.

One of the first romances Balzac wrote, and considered by Mr. Saintsbury, the scholarly critic who furnishes an introduction on Balzac's life and works, to be one of his best. It is a story of France at the end of the last century. Printed on paper with a wide margin, and profusely illustrated through the text.

Baynell, N. D. Carl and Violet. N. Y., Hunt & Eaton, 1890. c. 2-279 p. D. cl., $1.

Carl Sigurd was the betrothed lover of Cherry Harcourt, until her sister Violet's visit to their grandfather; after this Carl's sentiments changed. Upon Violet's action in this crisis, and later, her adoption of Carl the second, the story depends. A spirit of self-renunciation is beautifully exemplified in Violet.

Beale, Anne. The twin houses, and other tales of real life. N. Y. and Chic., Fleming H. Revell, 1890. 208 p. il. 12°, cl., $1.

Bettany, G. T. The red, brown, and black men of America and Australia, and their white supplanters. N. Y., Ward, Lock & Co., 1890. 9+289 p. il. D. cl., $1.

A popularly written account of the inhabitants of America and Oceania. Profusely illustrated.

Blackstone, Sir W: Commentaries on the laws of England; in four books; so abridged as to retain all portions of the original work which are of historical or practical value, with notes and references to Am. decisions; for the use of Am. students, by G: Chase. 3d ed. N. Y., Banks & Bros., 1890. c. 20+1148 p. O. (The Am. student's Blackstone.) shp., $6.50.

Book (The) of knowledge, and guide to rapid wealth: 1000 facts worth remembering. N. Y., Street & Smith, [1890.] c. 2-103 p. (Handbook lib., no. 6.) pap., 25 c.

Bouvet, Marguerite. Sweet William; il. by Helen and Margaret Armstrong. Chic., A. C. McClurg & Co., 1890. c. 7-209 p. il. D. cl., $1.50.

A pretty tale of Normandy, many centuries ago, for young children. There is a wicked Duke who slays his brother through jealousy, and two pretty motherless children who have a strange, eventful career. One is for many years kept a prisoner in the tower, the other is the delight of the old Norman court. In the end it is seen that the wicked Duke, in seeking to put his brother's child out of his sight, has imprisoned his own son. With many pictures.

Bradford, Sarah. The dominie; or, reminiscences of a girl's life. N. Y., Hunt & Eaton, 1890. c. 265 p. 1 il. D. cl., $1.

Edith Cameron was the daughter of an English officer who was killed in one of the revolts of the natives in India. This sad incident is the cause of her mother's death, Edith pictures the varying scenes of her childhood, tells of her uncle's kindness, her aunt's austerity, Evelyn Carr's coquettishness, and the dominie's romance.

Bramston, M. Dangerous jewels. N. Y., T: Whittaker, [1890.] 6+240 p. il. D. cl., $1.25.

The opening scenes are laid in Brittany, at the time of the great French revolution. The children of the Baron de Kergoët are sent to England in order to be out of danger, but on the road thither they are kidnapped by gypsies, for the sake of the family jewels which they are carrying with them. There are some vivid descriptions of rough life in a lonely hut on the moorlands of Devonshire.

Bullion, Judge, (pseud.) Victims of marriage. Columbus, O., The Heller Pub. Co., 32-34 Wesley Block, 1890. c. '89. 306 p. D. pap., 50 c.

In incident, character and plot the author aims to show that marriage impedes the progress of woman, and in the majority of cases debases her. Different phases of life are given, and the question is viewed in many lights. The closing chapter resolves itself into bold lines of argument, and denounces the institution of matrimony as it now exists.

Coleridge, Christabel R. The Green girls of Greythorpe. N. Y., T. Whittaker, [1890.] 5-250 p. il. D. cl., $1.25.

The Green School of Greythorpe is an old endowed institution that has come under the notice of the Charity Commissioners, who decide that a reorganization and extension of the school is necessary, and that the education it affords must be brought into harmony with modern requirements. While the necessary building alterations are being carried out, a number of the girls are taken to a quiet spot in Cumberland for a holiday, and Miss Coleridge's story is largely taken up with the adventures that befall them in the mountains near Scremside.

Collwell, F. M. Dorothy Arden: a story of England and France two hundred years ago. N. Y., T. Nelson & Sons, 1890. 7-349 p. il. D. cl., $1.50.

A story of the dragonnades in France in the time of Louis XIV.; also of the persecutions in England under James II., the Monmouth rebellion, the Bloody Assize, and the Revolution. The interest of the narrative is well sustained throughout, and graphic pictures are given of life in France and England during those troubled times. While a staunch Protestant, the author shows great fairness in recording and judging the action of both parties.

An exposition of the writer's belief that Nationalism (by which he means American Socialism) will be the future economic system in all civilized countries, and that it will be inaugurated, not by violence, but by enthusiasm.

Haggard, H. Rider and Lang, Andrew. The world's desire: a novel. N. Y., Harper, 1890. 6+274 p. S. (Harper's Franklin sq. lib., new series, no. 684.) pap., 35 c.

The story opens with the return of Odysseus (Ulysses), King of Ithaca, twenty years after the siege of Troy. Penelope, his wife, is dead, and the island has been devastated. Ulysses is hopeless, until Aphrodite shows him a vision of "The world's desire," and inspires him to search for her. Ulysses again becomes a wanderer, and after much adventure is about to claim what all men covet, but, alas! finds that by disregarding Aphrodite's warning he has been deceived by the serpent and lost Helen, with the bleeding star.

Hall, A. D. A Parisian romance: novelized from the play of the same name, by Octave Feuillet, by A. D. Hall. N. Y., Street & Smith, 1890. c. 5-240 p. 1 il. D. (Primrose ser., no. 8.) pap., 50 c.

Harte, Bret. A ward of the Golden Gate. Bost., Houghton, Mifflin & Co., 1890. c. 2+249 p. D. cl., $1.25.

A strange and sensational incident introduces the characters. The interest then concentrates itself in Yerba Buena, whose on y knowledge of her personal history is that she is a scholar of the Santa Clara convent, an heiress and a ward to the successive mayors of San Francisco, who hold this trust in conjunction with Col. Harry Pendleton and Paul Hatheway. This ignorance leads her to identify herself with a noted Spanish family, whose name she adopts. The consequences of this step make up a large part of the story.

Henty, G. A. By England's aid; or, the freeing of the Netherlands (1585-1604), il. by Alfred Pearse. N. Y., Scribner & Welford, [1890.] 5-384 p. map, D. cl., $1.50.

Mr. Henty here gives us the story of two English lads, who go to Holland as pages in the service of one of the "fighting Veres"—the Sir Francis Vere who played so important a part in the freeing of the Netherlands from the yoke of Spain. After many adventures by sea and land, one of the lads finds himself on board a Spanish ship at the time of the defeat of the Armada, and escapes from Spain only to fall into the hands of the corsairs. He is successful, however, in getting back to Spain under the protection of a wealthy Spanish merchant, and regains his native country after the capture of Cadix, which finally broke the power of Spain in Europe. While the plot is entirely distinct from that of "By pike and dyke," it follows it immediately in point of historic interest, and is in this sense a sequel to it.

Jephson, A. J. Mounteney. Emin Pasha, and the rebellion at the equator: a story of nine months' experiences in the last of the Soudan Provinces, with the revision and co-operation of H: M. Stanley. N. Y., C: Scribner's Sons, 1890. il. 8°, cl., subd., $3.75.

Mr. Jephson was appointed by Stanley to assist Emin Pasha in preparing his people to start for Egypt, if they wished to do so. In time he discovered that Emin's people were disloyal, and that they were inclined to revolt, to rob their white allies and to turn them adrift. All the incidents of his stay at Emin's station, the revolt of Emin's troops, the imprisonment of Emin and himself, and finally the long, adventurous and dangerous flight of Emin and his faithful to lovers to rejoin Stanley, are fully described, supplementing Stanley's account in his "In Darkest Africa," and supplying the record of events which he touched upon only slightly. As Stanley explains in the preface, "I think you have done wisely in not treading out again already threshed corn. You have commenced your story where a great gap occurred in my own narrative—a gap which you alone could fill."

Jones, C. A. Little Sir Nicholas: a story for children. N. Y. F. Warne & Co., 1890. 6+250 p. il. D. cl., $1.50.

"Little Sir Nicholas," the heir to a baronetcy and a great name, is supposed to have been lost in the wreck of the ship that was bringing him and his father and mother from India. His cousin, Gerald Tremaine, is called to take his place at Treacastle as the heir, but in a few years Sir Nicholas is found in France, where a sailor had carried him. The boys live together at Treacastle, Gerald first disliking his cousin, then learning to love him fondly.

Molesworth, Mrs. M. A. ["Ennis Graham," pseud.] The children of the castle; il. by Walter Crane. N. Y., Macmillan & Co., [1890.] 6+196 p. D. cl., $1.25.

Ruby and Mavis were twin sisters, who lived in an old English castle. They had for their playmates cousin Bertram, the hotheaded Winfried, and now and then a mysterious visitor, whom Winfried called the princess with the Forget-me-not eyes. The story tells how she took them to a land of her own name or, literally speaking, how they were brought to realize or remember their faults. An imaginative child can deduct a moral from this fantastical tale.

Morris, C. Civilization an historical review of its elements. Chic., S. C. Griggs & Co., 1890. c. 2 v., 13+510; 7+490 p. D. cl., $1.

The present work makes no pretence to be a history of civilization in the ordinarily accepted sense of the term, but is offered rather as an outline view of its elements, with some attempt to set forth the philosophy of human progress, and indicate the evolutionary steps by which the world of man has passed upward from primitive savagery to modern enlightenment. The field covered is a broad one. Each topic has been considered separately, so as to form, to some extent, a distinct treatise. The author has succeeded in his aim of being both interesting.

and instructive. Author of "The Aryan race" and "A manual of classical literature."

Schücking, Levin. Luther in Rome; or, Corradina, the last of the Hohenstaufen: a religious-historical romance; from the German, by Mrs. Eudora Lindsay South. Bost., A. M. Thayer & Co., 1890. c. 1+377 p. por. and il. O. cl., $2.50; full rus., $3.50.

The author, one of Germany's most famous writers, has taken for his leading character Luther, and surrounded him with the living characters of the age in Rome in the years preceding the Reformation. The time is the year 1510, in the reign of Alexander Borgia, when Pope Julius II, sat upon the highest throne of Christendom. Luther was then twenty-seven years old, and of the same age as Raphael, the great artist. This was the transformation period of Luther's life, and the influences which made him the world's apostle of free thought are carefully traced. Raphael's independence in art and the prophetic instincts of two pure and noble women help to form Luther's resolution to go back over the Alps and begin his great mission. The inside workings of the Roman church at this period are revealed. Il. with photographs, portraits, etc.

Sherman, Frank Dempster. Lyrics for a lute. Bost., Houghton, Mifflin & Co., 1890. c. 5-112 p. S. cl., $1.

Mr. Sherman is not a poet who is saddest when he sings, but his tone is cheerful. His previous volume, "Madrigals and catches," has introduced him very favorably to the lovers of poetry; and these will gladly welcome this tasteful little book containing about sixty poems, grouped under the heads of Fancy, Love, Nature, and Books. Their fine imaginativeness, sunny spirit and lyrical quality will win for them a hearty greeting.

Stearns, L: French, D.D. The evidence of Christian experience: being the Ely lectures for 1890. N. Y., C: Scribner's Sons, 1890. c. 8+473 p. D. cl., $2.

While this book was in press the author was elected to succeed Prof. W. G. T. Shedd in the Union Theological Seminary, at which institution these lectures were delivered during Jan. and Feb., 1890. In them is presented, with clearness of logic and brilliancy of style, the new system of evidence that has replaced the traditional apologetics of the Butler and Paley school.

Stredder, Eleanor. Jack and his ostrich: an African story. N. Y., T: Nelson & Sons, 1890. 5-192 p. il. D. cl., 60 c.

Jack Treby lived on a sheep farm with his father, a hired man, a couple of Hottentots, and an ostrich to serve as a watch-dog; when natives fired the farm Vickel gave the alarm; when they sought refuge at the Boers, she prevented Otto from robbing Jack; through her he is enabled to make the dishonored honored; and, as he owes his prosperity to her, it is but fair to say that she shares the heroship with Jack.

Thoreau, H: D: Thoreau's thoughts: selections from the writings of Henry David Thoreau; ed. by H. G. O. Blake. Bost., Houghton, Mifflin & Co., 1890. c. 5+153 p. S. cl., $1.

Thoreau's writings are unusually rich in quotable sentences which can stand alone. Mr. Blake has made a judicious selection of these, which form a delightful little volume that cannot fail to be welcome to lovers of Thoreau, and may attract to him others who are so unfortunate as not to know him. With a full bibliography of Thoreau's writings.

Thornton, J: P. Training for health, strength, speed and agility; for the instruction of amateurs and others. N. Y., Excelsior Pub. House, 1890. 260 p. il. 12°, cl., $1.

A plain, practical, sensible book, abounding in suggestions as to how the best physical conditions can be reached, without being technical or scientific. Training, diet, air, sleep, clothing, work, hurdling, walking, cycling, boxing, exercise for women and children, and the various troubles resulting from training, are discussed intelligently and practically.

Tucker, Mrs. Charlotte, ["A. L. O. E.," pseud.]

Beyond the black waters. N. Y., T: Nelson & Sons, [1890.] 5-248 p. il. D. cl., $1.

Beyond the black waters lie the Andaman Islands, where the English Government transports criminals; hence the mention of these waters is significant to the natives of Hindostan. In a moment of passion Oscar Coldstream commits a crime that weighs heavily upon him until he relieves himself by confession. His sentence is life-banishment to Andaman. The result of this makes a very pathetic story, which introduces the Karens and many facts about them, for the purpose of interesting the people of England and America in these mission fields.

Twombly, Alex. S., D.D. The choir-boy of York cathedral, and other Christmas stories. Bost., Congregational S. S. and Pub. Soc., [1890.] c. 2-292 p. il. D. cl., $1.25.

The stories are quite varied. That of the title gives a thrilling description of the burning of York Minster by a maniac. "Pietro and Nina" are two children who stray into Rome and earn their living—Pietro by selling goat's milk, and Nina by her service in the Odescalchi palace. In "The best possible Christmas" we have a fantastic child's dream. The longest, and in some respects the best, is "A Huguenot story," a thrilling description of the abduction of a Huguenot boy, his life in and escape from a monastery, and his final return to friends after a bitter experience.

V., A. V. Smitten and slain: a nineteenth century romance of life in China. N. Y., T: Nelson & Sons, 1890. 7-264 p. il. D. cl., $1.

A story setting forth the great evil of the "opium traffic" in China, and the responsibility of the British nation in connection therewith. Many side-glances are given of Chinese life and character.

(Johns Hopkins Univ. studies, extra, v. 7.) cl., $1.25.

The work is both historical and legal, and, presenting as it does the first systematic treatment of the history and nature of the powers of the most original portion of our political structure, it will be of interest and importance to the lawyer as well as to the student of constitutional history and the philosophy of government. What Cooley, Von Holst and Hare have done in the statement of the laws and principles by which this court is governed, is here attempted in the narration of its history, and the exposition of the practical part played by the Supreme Court in the administration of Federal affairs.

Wilson, E. L. In Scripture lands: new views of sacred places; il. by the author. N. Y., C. Scribner's Sons, 1890. c. 16+386 p. il. O. cl., $3.50.

"The feeling of personal want for such a book as 'In Scripture lands' was the first incentive toward its production. I wanted to see pictures of the places made sacred by Scriptural history which were not idealized by the pencils of those whose sympathy with art too often rode over truth. I wanted to see such pictures accompanied by descriptions free from either the shallow sentiment of the superficial tourist, the narrowness of the enthusiast or the arbitrariness of denominationalism. I likewise wanted them connected with data and textual references which should give me helpful hints for the further study and enjoyment of the events that have made the Scripture lands the most interesting of any in the world."—Author's Preface.

World (The) moves: all goes well; by a layman. Bost., J. G. Cupples Co., 1890. c. 5+200 p. D. cl., $1.

Illustrates the progress made in religious thought in recent years by all denominations. The writer, during the past twenty years, has been brought into close relations with the leading spirits of various churches, orthodox, Baptist, Presbyterian, and others. Their liberal leanings, as reported in the conversations embraced in the volume, are revelations.

Wyatt, G. E. Follow the right: a tale for boys. N. Y., T: Nelson & Sons, 1890. 5-250 p. il. D. cl., $1.

A poem which Geoffrey Treherne once read led him to make the resolution to first see clearly what was the right thing to do, and then to do it because it was right, whether pleasant or unpleasant in consequences to him self. His way of doing this makes a very good story for either boys or girls, as Geoffrey's sisters play quite a part in the book.

The Publishers' Weekly.

FOUNDED BY F. LEYPOLDT.

NOVEMBER 15, 1890.

The editor does not hold himself responsible for the views expressed in contributed articles or communications.

All matter, whether for the reading-matter columns or our advertising pages, should reach this office not later than Wednesday noon, to insure insertion in the same week's issue.

In case of business changes, notification or card should be immediately sent to this office for entry under "Business Notes." New catalogues issued will also be mentioned when forwarded.

Publishers are requested to furnish title-page proofs and advance information of books forthcoming, both for entry in the lists and for descriptive mention. An early copy of each book published should be forwarded, to insure correctness in the final entry.

"Every man is a debtor to his profession, from the which, as men do of course seek to receive countenance and profit, so ought they of duty to endeavor themselves by way of amends to be a help therunto."—LORD BACON.

CANCELLATION OF ORDERS.

Few things are more annoying to the manufacturer than the much too frequent habit some customers have of cancelling orders, or refusing to receive the goods when sent. Often this is done for no apparent reason stronger than the one that the buyer has changed his mind.

In some cases the person directly responsible is the reckless traveller. There are a few travellers who lose sight of the fact that it is not the one who sells the most, but he who sells to the best advantage, who serves his employer best. Large orders from the men we have in mind are often only an evidence to the "gift of gab" (to use a homely expression) of the man who sends them home. A short time elapses, the goods are sent, and then the bubble bursts—the goods are returned by the customer, who, in the meantime, has regained his better judgment. It is understood that the traveller must create a want, because very often without his mediation the retail trade, with no pressure from the source of supply, would not spontaneously create one for years to come. But that salesman has failed to understand the possibilities of his vocation who is unable to measure the capacity of every man with whom he deals. A traveller should be able to know the faults and excellencies of every establishment on his route, and hence the extent to which every separate one ought to buy. If he forces them beyond their measure, the result will be a loss to his house, either by the refusal of the dealer to take the goods, or by his going under with the load put upon him. Even if the in-cautious or dishonest dealer wishes to overstock, none ought to be so capable of preventing this as the traveller—but, "that is another story."

Whatever the cause, the cancellation of orders is a nuisance, and, more than that, a wrong. The manufacturer has rendered a service and been at considerable expense, in the first place, by sending out his salesman and bringing to the notice of his constituency the result of months of his labor in their behalf. Then it has involved his time and more expense in putting up his goods to forward them to their destination. To refuse to accept them means a waste of energy and money which no man has a right to expect of another. The result is a loss of confidence that works harm in all directions. The retailer will observe his interests and those with whom he deals by ordering only what he wants and by taking all that he has ordered, without regard to any changes that may have taken place in his mind in the meantime. The exceptions to this rule are rare, and so self-evident that they need not be mentioned.

THE next issue of THE PUBLISHERS' WEEKLY will be the Christmas number, and will cover the two weeks ending November 22 and 29. Work on that issue is rapidly nearing completion, and we therefore caution those who wish to take space in its advertising pages to make application at once. Booksellers also who wish supplies of the editions of this number with their imprint will do well to place their order now, because in a week hence it may be too late. The issue this year will have an especially attractive cover, with a new design by G. R. Halm, and the reading-matter and contents generally will be fully up to the high standard of previous years. Those whose trade calls for a less costly medium through which to reach and attract holiday buyers will find the Christmas number of The Literary News a serviceable "salesman." Its reading-matter is fresh, and covers (as does the "Christmas Book-Shelf") new publications of every important publishing house in the country. A number of illustrations and a new cover add to its general attractiveness.

THE annual meeting of the American Copyright League was held at the Mott Memorial Hall, 64 Madison Ave., New York City, on the 11th inst. After the transaction of routine business, the election of the Council took place, which resulted in the choice of the members of the old Council, with the addition thereto of Andrew Carnegie, Theodore Roosevelt and George Parsons Lathrop. The Council will meet on the 17th to choose the officers of the League, which consist of President, three Vice-Presidents, Secretary, Treasurer, and an Executive Committee of five.

THE VALUE OF CLASSIFICATION.*

BY GEORGE ILES.

LIBRARIES have come to have a new value in our day, and while within recent years this value was being conferred, a distinctly new conception of library management has been steadily dawning. It used to be thought enough that a librarian should be able to get books, guard them trustily, and give them out as desired. He was gatherer and custodian. The new idea is, that he shall so vitalize his library that to make his books attractive and useful shall be his chiefest care. To that end he must know how to order them and indicate their contents, that the whole capital entrusted to him shall be instantly available for any inquirer's purpose. He must be able to give seekers guidance, have the tact and sympathy to stimulate research, the kindly enthusiasm which promotes study by inviting it to helpful stepping-stones. Such men are animating souls, with an influence which stretches far beyond their shelves and cases. With an enlightened demand and appropriate special courses of instruction, a race of librarians is springing up in America and Europe—a race as different from the old-time jailers of books as the banker welcoming his customer differs from the miser defending his hoard.

One of the leading spirits in bringing about modern reforms in library administration is Melvil Dewey, now Secretary to the Board of Regents of the University of New York, at Albany, N. Y. Until 1888, Mr. Dewey was librarian at Columbia College, New York. His predecessor had been the college janitor. When Mr. Dewey's five years of service came to an end, he left the library more than doubled in extent, and in arrangement and management the best in the world. From occupying several inadequate rooms scattered about the building, accessible only a few hours in the week, the books now fill the handsomest hall in New York—a hall perfectly ventilated, sumptuously furnished, lighted by electricity, and open fourteen hours a day. Mr. Dewey, whose organizing mind has in effect created this superb library, is the author of what is known as the "decimal classification" for libraries. According to this ingenious system, literature is divided into ten great departments, each of which is given its numeral. This numeral, which, for example, is 7 for fine arts, is always the first figure in a book's number. The second denotes a subdivision; books on music have numbers, beginning 7, 8; a further subdivision decides the third figure; volumes of vocal music, and works relating thereto, have numbers commencing with 7, 8, 4. These numbers, which can be extended to express any decided minuteness of classification, readily lend themselves to a shelf arrangement, which, while self-explanatory, is the simplest conceivable. At Columbia and the other numerous libraries where the decimal system is adopted, card catalogues of the ordinary alphabetical kind are used in a supplementary way. When one is hunting down a subject at Columbia, the cross-references given under a special heading name not only books wherein a relevant chapter may be found, but also make mention of helpful pamphlets and available newspaper cuttings. A beginning has been made in another most important direction, that of weighing and assessing the comparative values of books. When a reader can ascertain which authors are most trustworthy, which best for introductory or for advanced study, an economy of effort must result which will double the library's worth. By co-operation between the world's great libraries there is promise that before many years elapse this appraisal of literature will be complete and universal.

Under Mr. Dewey's hand nothing about even the make-up of a book was allowed to remain accidental. At Columbia the colors* of the bindings are significant, not as in the British Museum of special subjects, but to declare the language in which a book is written. In the departments of art and science a chronological order is observed in the disposal of books, so that a reader sees at a glance the historical development of navigation or horticulture. As befits a time when so much of the best literature comes out as magazine and review, there is an extensive department of serials, accompanied by sets of indexes complete to their latest issues. Throughout the library the intent pursued seems to be the perfecting of arrangement and indication, so that whatsoever a librarian can put into fact or place on record is so put or placed. Cases, however, often arise when one fairly conversant with his books requires to consult a librarian. The result is always most satisfactory. He proves courteous, obliging, and thoroughly informed. At Mr. Dewey's instance Columbia College established a department of Library economy; under his instruction, classes, constantly increasing in extent, were prepared for library management according to the newest and best methods. His class, now expanded into a school, has followed him to Albany, where the course annually grows in scope and usefulness. When in New York his off-hand addresses to the college students on the art of reading, the art of remembering and recording, and how to get most out of a library, were attended with an interest rarely won in a class-room or laboratory. In New York, Boston, Philadelphia, Providence, and other American cities, it is now common to find reference lists prepared at the public libraries, for the assistance of students and others attending lectures, or for ordinary readers who have taken up some special branch of history, art or political economy.

Mr. W. E. Foster, of the Providence Library, has in this way written a complete and most suggestive little pamphlet, which the Society for Political Education, New York, recently published. It gives references to the whole literature of the United States Constitution, its sources, its commentaries and interpretations. Mr. Foster is one of the new generation of librarians, and his pamphlet, while a most notable labor-saver to the student, is a striking object-lesson in the art of reading with a purpose. When Mr. Dewey went to Albany to enter the service of the State, a good many of his friends in New York feared that his usefulness would be sadly diminished. They were mistaken. He has infused new life into the University of New York. That university, it may be needful to say, dates from the foundation of the American Union, and conforms to the same idea of federation. What the Government of the United States is to the individual States which compose it, is the University of New York to the colleges and high schools within the borders of the Empire State. Witbout being a teaching body, its purpose is to supervise teaching, maintain high and uniform standards of education, and serve as a means of helpful co-operation between all the institutions under its care. In his new and larger field Mr. Dewey finds the amplest opportunity for his organizing genius and splendid executive ability. It will be sufficient here to set forth his programme, as far as it is in line with his former activities. He finds on the shelves of the State Library 150,000 volumes, and two-thirds as many duplicates. These latter, with the duplicates which have accumulated in other libraries of New York, he is to make useful by a well-devised plan of exchange and sale. Hereafter any school officer in the State can receive by post or express from Albany any book on the shelves of the State Library. Any extract from a legal or other tome will be made for small cost, and, if desired, will be notarially attested as correct before transmission; often saving an expensive journey to a student, author, or lawyer. For villages and small towns he will put into effect an idea which originated in Australia, and which, applied to museum collections as well as to books, has been most satisfactorily tested in Great Britain. This is the selecting of two or three hundred volumes and sending them to a settlement too small to have a local library; there a school-house gives the books shelter, and a teacher gives them distribution. At a year's end they are to be gathered in, and sent to Albany for necessary renewal and repair, when the process will be repeated. In this way even the poorest hamlets will have their schools united to libraries—a union which in every field of education is acknowledged to be vital.

MEN WHO FREQUENT BOOKSTORES.

THERE is no question as to the fact that men are much the same the world over in their vanities and peculiarities, and their weaknesses are always under the lens of some specially critical observer. We doubt, says the editor of the Washington Book Chronicle, published by W. H. Lowdermilk & Co., if a bookstore is not the best possible place in which to witness the varieties of human nature, and a bookseller certainly has made slight use of his opportunities if he has not cultivated that additional sense which enables him intuitively to measure in a few moments the average visitor who questions him as to the books he has to offer. He must exercise much patience when he finds his rare and delicate volumes handled as though they were dime novels, the leaves thumbed and turned with moist fingers, and irreverently tossed back on the shelves; but he finds his recompense in the pleasure experienced when a lover of books takes these same volumes as tenderly as rose-leaves, lovingly handling them as things to be cherished, and manifesting an appreciation of their worth both by reason of their rarity and their money value. Doubtless every dealer can fix in his own mind the identity of a limited number of patrons (?) whose purchases foot up a dollar or two a year, yet who occasionally strut into the establishment and loudly declaim, "Ah, you have a great collection of books here—a fine collection—but it's dangerous for me; I never can get out of a bookstore without buying." Yes, we know several such, who seldom fail to make this stereotyped expression, but never buy a book; and they are silly enough to think they are deceiving us. But, bless you, they only make us smile. There is another specimen who walks in in a lazy sort of way amongst the shelves, occasionally punching a book with his walking-stick as though it was a ham, and expressing his admiration for it because his father had one in his library when he was a boy. He does not know just what is inside of it, but he recognizes "the binding and a picture of a bird on the back."

In contrast with some of those above referred to, we have the real book-lovers who linger for hours at a time with their favorite authors, cultivating their friendship to a still greater degree, and learning to know them better than ever. Such men are welcome visitors, be they buyers or not. For one old friend we have always a welcome; he is versed in all the mysteries of book-lore; familiar with languages, and at seventy years blessed with a good memory. Often he will take one of the old classics from the shelf, become immersed in its contents, insensible to all his surroundings, and stand almost immovable for three or four hours at a time, until something occurs to recall him to a sense of time, and then with a sigh he breaks away from his pleasant occupation. Another visitor we know and admire is a high government official, a man of vast learning, thorough cultivation, extended reading, fine memory, and a cheerful enjoyment of everything he reads. Every book he finds is but the continuation of a subject he has before pursued; in every page he is reminded of other pages he has scanned, perhaps years ago, and he is master of all the matters he has taken in hand. He has a fine library at home, and in his head a store of knowledge equal to that contained in his collection of books. This venerable gentleman is en rapport with the best books, and they and he are at home together.

There are occasionally cranky callers, but usually they are harmless; once in awhile comes one who cannot resist the temptation to surreptitiously carry away a book or two; his first offence usually betrays him, and he is looked after when he comes again.

THE AMERICAN NEWS CO. AND ITS BRANCHES.

FROM the last report filed by the American News Co. with the Secretary of State at Albany, N. Y., it is said to appear that the name of said Association is "The American News Company," but that said Association also transacts business under the following names at the places set opposite thereto respectively:

The New York News Company, 20 Beekman Street, N. Y.

The National News Company, 119 Nassau Street, N. Y.

The International News Company, 29 and 31 Beekman Street, N. Y.

A RECENT PARAGRAPH IN THE LONDON "ATHENÆUM."

From Harper's Weekly, November 15.

AT a moment when the old difficulty arising from the want of international copyright seems likely to be adjusted by a friendly understanding between authors and publishers in England and America, acrimonious misrepresentation is peculiarly unfortunate. The statement in the London Athenæum of October 4, regarding certain transactions between Mr. Rudyard Kipling and the Messrs. Harper was inaccurate in fact and wholly unjust in tone and insinuation, and the letter of the New York publishers was a distinct and satisfactory explanation. Mr. Kipling was courteously received when he called upon the Messrs. Harper last year; and the stories which he offered were examined and courteously declined. Subsequently the house published in their Weekly from advance sheets some other stories of Mr. Kipling's which he offered to them by his business agent, and they paid the price for them which was asked.

When these tales were issued in a volume, one story was added, and for this they paid £10, in accordance with their rule of publishing no non-copyright work without payment. It was this £10 which Mr. Kipling returned, and which the Athenæum represents as the sum offered for the whole volume of tales "picked out of magazines," and published without Mr. Kipling's consent. The facts which we have mentioned show how far from the truth is this statement. The Athenæum also says that upon his call in Franklin Square Mr. Kipling "was speedily shown the door," and was told that a firm which published "literature of a high class could not trouble itself about such writings as his." This, of course, is wholly a ludicrous invention. Publishers are seldom wanting in personal courtesy, and the declination of a work by a publisher is not a verdict upon its merits. Papers are constantly declined by magazines, not because they are not as good as many that are accepted, but for reasons wholly unconnected with their intrinsic excellence. No editor can publish all that he would like to publish.

In the same way other considerations than those of the merit of the work influence the decisions of publishers. A proposed work, however good, may not promise to be a profitable venture; it may cover ground already occupied; it may involve undesirable disputes, and even litigation; it may treat subjects remote from popular interest. A thousand reasons independent of essential merit may affect what is, after all, largely a commercial judgment. In the case of Mr. Kipling's stories, their previous publication abroad, and the consequent uncertainty of even a semblance of priority in this country, may have been most properly considered. Certainly the implication that they were declined because of want of merit is wholly gratuitous. In regard to the collection of tales in question, it was not an unfair assumption of the publishers that an author whose terms for certain stories had been fixed by himself and accepted by them would be satisfied with the honorarium offered for another story of the same kind which had already been republished in this country by several daily papers. Undoubtedly, however, even in the absence of an international copyright, it is better not to proceed upon such an assumption, although it may be perfectly reasonable and apparently of advantage to an author who has not aranged for American reprint. For it must be borne in mind that if the Copyright Bill now before Congress were passed, reprinting or manufacture in the United States would be a condition of protection by copyright. Mr. Kipling having returned the honorarium tendered him the story for which it was given will be omitted from subsequent editions of the volume in question, and there will be substituted for it the story begun in this number of the Weekly from advance sheets purchased last week from Mr. Kipling's agent. It is certain, however, that a total perversion of facts, which in this case injures a young English author, apparently with the purpose of exciting international jealousy and ill-feeling between English and American authors and publishers, is unworthy of the Athenæum and greatly to be deprecated.

A FORGOTTEN AUTHOR'S GRAVE.

From Bok's Literary Leaves.

LITERARY fame seems very hollow and short-lived at times. I thought of this as last week I stood at the grave of Seba Smith, the once famous "Major Jack Downing." Forty years ago and he was the most noted political satirist of his day. What he wrote was quoted everywhere, and at great dinners he was the wittiest guest. Abraham Lincoln was his warm friend, and so were Presidents Jackson, Buchanan and Johnson. His intense hatred of political shams and his keen and facile pen made his name renowned. Longfellow was his classmate; William Pitt Fessenden, the "incorruptible statesman," his college chum; Epes Sargent, "the dreamer," his friend. When his volume of "letters," entitled "Way Down East; or, portraiture of Yankee life," appeared, it not only immediately attracted national attention, but Artemus Ward declared him to be the American humorist. He had imitators everywhere. His book sold like wildfire. Everybody knew his name. And now? Away back of the quaint and ancient village of Patchogue (Long Island), N. Y., a few miles from "The Willows," the homestead wherein he so hospitably entertained his many distinguished friends—there, in the abandoned, yet picturesque Willow Cemetery, is his grave, forgotten, neglected, and visited by not one person in a year. It is a lonely bed, indeed, where "Major Jack Downing, of the Downingville militia," awaits the resurrection. . . .

It is just such instances as these which now and then give rise to the question, Why should not America have a literary pantheon? Objections, and plausible ones, can doubtless be raised against such an idea, yet it seems as if some national provision could be made for the care and better preservation of many of our literary graves. Men and women who furnish the literary thought for a nation and mould its intellectual bent, certainly deserve a better tribute to their services than that their graves should not even be given decent care. An author, as a rule, leaves but little behind him to his family, and what he does leave is needed for the living of the survivors. The families of many of our dead writers cannot afford proper recognition of the deceased, or by distance, care is impossible. It is here that the government should step in, not in the light of charity, but in recognition of merit and good services. With proper restrictions and wise management, a literary pantheon might not be such an impractical thing—for the future dead, if not for the past.

DANIEL SIDNEY APPLETON.

As we go to press the sad news reaches us of the death of Daniel Sidney Appleton, of the firm of D. Appleton & Co. Mr. Appleton retired on Saturday night last in good spirits, apparently as well as usual. Sunday noon he had not arisen, and his daughter, becoming alarmed, went to his door and called him. He answered feebly that he could not get up. Thoroughly alarmed, Miss Appleton despatched servants for Dr. H. Holbrook Curtis and Dr. Nelson H. Henry. When the physicians arrived they at once saw that Mr. Appleton was suffering from a stroke of apoplexy. Dr. Janeway was also called in consultation. After the attack Mr. Appleton was for the most part in a comatose condition. He rallied a little on Wednesday night, and was roused to consciousness for a time, but on Thursday forenoon (the 13th) he breathed his last.

Daniel Sidney Appleton, the son of Daniel Appleton, founder of the publication house of D. Appleton & Co., and the brother of William H. Appleton, the present head of the house, was born in Boston, April 9, 1824. He was graduated from Yale College in the class of 1843, and his popularity among his fellow-students was shown by the fact that he was "minor bully" of his class, an office corresponding to that of vice-president, which Mr. Appleton was the last to fill.

After leaving college he studied law at the Yale Law School for a year, and soon entered upon a business life in the house of D. Appleton & Co. His first important duty was the charge of the London office of the house, in which position he gave much satisfaction to the firm by his intelligent management of its interests abroad for several years. He resided in London two years, returning in 1849 on account of his father's ill-health. On his return to New York he took charge of the manufacturing department after the Appletons established their own printing house and bindery. His thorough knowledge of the business details of bookmaking, and his quickness and acuteness in making estimates and deciding difficult questions, imparted a peculiar value to advice never volunteered, but always cheerfully given. After the death of his father in 1849 he became a member of the firm. The senior member was Mr. William H. Appleton, who remains the head of the house, and the other members were John Adams Appleton, George Swett Appleton and Samuel Francis Appleton. The business was removed from No. 200 Broadway to the old Society Library building, corner Leonard Street and Broadway, and subsequently there were several removals. Of recent years Mr. Appleton's health has not permitted him to take a very active part in the affairs of the house, although he was constantly at his office, even as late as last Saturday.

Personally, Mr. Appleton was singularly unassuming, modest, and most unselfish. His interest in the welfare of others, especially those younger than himself, was a marked feature of his character, which perhaps can be best summed up in the statement that he was truly a gentleman, in the older meaning of that so often misused word.

Mr. Appleton was a member of the Century, Union and University Clubs, and a life member of the New York Yacht Club. He was a director of the Continental Bank and other institutions. On March 25, 1858, he was married to Malvina W. Marshall, daughter of Charles H. Marshall, who was chief owner of the famous Black Ball line of packets. Mrs. Appleton died on November 3, 1873. On September 8, 1875, Mr. Appleton was married to Sophia W. Lincoln, of Providence, R. I., who died on December 5, 1889. Mr. Appleton leaves a daughter, Malvina, and a son, Daniel Sidney Appleton, Jr., both the children of his first wife. His funeral takes place to-day (the 15th) at the Church of the Annunciation, No. 144 West 14th Street, New York. The interment will be at Greenwood Cemetery.

The members of the house of D. Appleton & Co. at present are Messrs. William H. Appleton, William W. Appleton, Daniel Appleton, and Edward Dale Appleton.

NOTES ON AUTHORS.

MARK TWAIN, it is reported, will for some time to come pay more attention to the development of a type-setting machine in which he is financially interested than to furnishing "copy" for the printer.

DR. GRENFELL BAKER, who was physician to Sir Richard Burton, the translator of "The Arabian Nights," etc., whose death was recently announced, is engaged on a biography of the distinguished traveller.

MR. BLACKMORE has written a special preface for the Harper edition of his "Lorna Doone." It is in verse, and the final lines are these:

"The piper shall be paid! And who shall carp
If harpers let him tap their golden harp?"

THE silly story going the rounds of the English and American press, that Sir Edwin Arnold has fallen in love with a Japanese maiden and is about to marry her, is authoritatively denied. There is no truth whatever in the story.

MRS. JOHN B. SHIPLEY (Marie A. Brown) during her coming trip to the United States, will give a series of three lectures upon socialism: 1. "No Socialism in Christianity; No Christianity in Socialism." 2. "The Absence of Money." 3. "The Effects of Socialism upon Individuality."

THERE are more people to-day, writes Edward Bok, who believe Herman Melville dead than there are those who know he is living. And yet if one choose to walk along East Eighteenth Street, New York City, any morning about 9 o'clock, he would see the famous writer of sea stories—stories which have never been equalled perhaps in their special line. Mr. Melville is now an old man, but still vigorous. He is an employé of the Customs Revenue Service, and thus still lingers around the atmosphere which permeated his books. Forty-four years ago, when his most famous tale, "Typee," appeared, there was not a better known author than he, and he commanded his own prices. Publishers sought him, and editors considered themselves fortunate to secure his name as a literary star. And to-day? Busy New York has no idea he is even alive, and one of the best-informed literary men in this country laughed recently at my statement that Herman Melville was his neighbor by only two city blocks. "Nonsense," said he. "Why, Melville is dead these many years!" Talk about literary fame? There's a sample of it!

LITERARY AND TRADE NOTES.

EDWARD BELLAMY contemplates starting a weekly in New York to make propaganda for the Nationalists.

CHARLES SCRIBNER'S SONS have under way the second volume of H. Morse Stephens' "History of the French Revolution." One more volume will complete the work.

WALBRIDGE & CO., New York, have published "The Story of the Passaic" [N. J.], by John Alleyne Macknab. It is illustrated with a map and several photographic views.

D. VAN NOSTRAND CO. supply the trade with Bicknell's The Architectural and Building Monthly, the first bound volume of which was noticed in a recent number of the PUBLISHERS' WEEKLY.

THE TRUTH-SEEKER CO., N. Y., will publish next month "Liberty in Literature," the address by Robert G. Ingersoll on the occasion of the testimonial to Walt Whitman at Philadelphia, October 21.

THE SEEGER & GUERNSEY CO., of New York, have in press a Spanish edition of their "Cyclopædia of the Manufactures and Products of the United States," for circulation in Mexico, Central and South America.

THE WORTHINGTON COMPANY will publish at once "A Boy's History of the United States, from the discovery of America to the election of Harrison." It will contain a number of portraits, and form the second volume of Our Boy's Library. They have also just issued "A Sister's Love," by Heimburg, translated by Margaret P. Waterman, with several illustrations.

ESTES & LAURIAT have now in press, in connection with the Browning Society of London, "Robert Browning's Prose Life of Strafford," with an introduction by J. B. Frith, and preface by F. J. Furnivall. It will contain two appendices giving interesting documents concerning the life of Thomas Wentworth, Earl of Strafford, most of which will be new to the public.

B. WESTERMANN & CO. will publish shortly the first part of the second volume of Karl Brugmann's "Elements of a Comparative Grammar of the Indo-Germanic Languages," treating of word-formation, root-formation and inflection, with additions by the author since the German edition appeared, and with elucidations from the Anglo-Saxon, contributed by the translator, Dr. Conway, of Cambridge, England.

L. R. HAMERSLY & CO., Philadelphia, will publish, on the 20th inst., a volume of stories of military adventure, entitled "The Colonel's Christmas Dinner." The volume contains stories, supposed to be told over the walnuts and wine at a dinner given by the Colonel of a regiment at Christmas, by Capt. Chas. King, Edward Field, H. Romeyn, W. C. Bartlett, Col. H. W. Closson, Maj. W. H. Powell, Lieut. Thos. H. Wilson, Mr. E. L. Keyes, Miss Caroline F. Little and Alice King Livingston. The volume has been edited by Capt. King, and is daintily gotten up.

N. P. GILMAN, the editor of the Literary World, has in preparation a volume entitled "Socialism and the American Spirit." This volume will comprise chapters on The Reaction Against Individualism; Recent American Socialism; The American Social Idea in Practice, as distinguished from Individualism and Socialism; The Field for Social Reform in America; Arbitration, Industrial Partnership, and Co-operative Production, considered as steps out of labor troubles; Recent Progress in Profit Sharing; The First Duty of the Educated Classes; The Way to Utopia, etc.

W. W. HOWE, 157 East 37th Street, N. Y., will publish early in December an account of the battles of Kinston, Whitehall and Goldsboro, North Carolina, in December, 1862. The basis of the volume is the contemporary description in Harper's Weekly, with illustrations and portraits, and the New York Herald report of the eleven days' expedition. Mr. Howe, who is an old bookseller and well known to a wide circle in the trade, has made arrangements with Messrs. Harper & Brothers to use the illustrations, and has compiled the other matter, including also a sketch of General Foster's life. Altogether the book will make a neat souvenir, and to those who participated in the campaign cannot but prove a volume of great interest.

THE late Alphonse Karr was a stickler for the recognition of proprietary rights in literature, only asking, he said, for a law of one sentence, "La propriété littéraire est une propriété."—Tre-launy.

THE ACADEMIE FRANÇAISE is about to abandon its "Dictionnaire Historique." This is not to be confounded with the celebrated "Dictionnaire de l'Académie," one of the chief tasks of the Académie, and probably the only reason for its existence.

MACMILLAN & CO. announce an account of the rise and progress of Mahdism and of subsequent events in the Soudan down to the present time, by Major F. R. Wingate, of the Royal Artillery, now serving with the Egyptian army. The book will be illustrated with ten maps.

JAMES R. OSGOOD, McILVAINE & CO. have just opened luxurious offices at 45 Albemarle Street, London. One feature of their new establishment is a big reception and reading room where authors, artists and others visiting London will be invited to make themselves at home. It is interesting to know that Osgood & McIlvaine's first contract in London is the publication of Eugene Field's books for English readers. These include all of Field's works, with the exception of "Culture's Garland." Mr. Field, according to the London correspondent, has purchased the electroplates of this book and smashed them with a sledge-hammer, and desires to buy up the edition and burn it. Holders of the book of course will part with it—by and by.

MR. BERNARD QUARITCH has issued the prospectus of a "Dictionary of English Book-Collectors," from the earliest recorded examples to the present time, somewhat after the scheme of Guigard's "Armorial du Bibliophile." Recognizing the impossibility of completing such a work in a satisfactory manner by individual effort, he makes an appeal to all those interested in the subject to afford him their co-operation, by supplying him with materials that may be within their knowledge. For his part, he undertakes to have the auctioneers' catalogues searched for all the information they contain, and to obtain from sources at his own disposal all the book-plates which may be needed for reproduction. The details required in each case are: the chief dates and facts of the man's life; some specification of the more important and remarkable works which he collected; and a brief account of the fate of his library, tracing the devolution of some of its items through later hands. Illustrations will be given of such tokens of ownership as escutcheons, mottoes, book-plates, or modes of binding peculiar to certain libraries. The work will be arranged in alphabetical order, under the names of collectors; and it is proposed to print off each article on a separate leaf as soon as it is ready, leaving the collection into volumes to come later.

NOTES ON CATALOGUES.

OTTO HARRASSOWITZ Leipzig, has published a catalogue entitled "Orientalia: Aryan and Semitic languages," comprising a rich collection of Oriental impressions of the presses at Bombay, Calcutta, Benares Madras, Alexandria, Bulak, Beyruth, Constantinople and other Eastern cities. Like all of Mr. Harrassowitz's catalogues, this is put together scientifically and with great care. It is almost a library in itself. (No. 168, 78 p. 12°.)

GUSTAV FOCK, Leipzig, has published a catalogue which promises to have a permanent value, entitled "Bibliotheca historica." It is a list of 9307 works in the field of history and kindred subjects. Of course it is not a complete bibliography of the subject, in fact it does not aspire to be more than a sales catalogue of the books kept in stock by Mr. Fock but, being an extensive collection, the list in many cases will be a practical substitute for a bibliography. It will be found a valuable handbook for students of history. (292 p. 12°, pap., 1 mark 50 pf.)

A. TWISTMEYER, Leipzig, has issued an important antiquarian catalogue of his extensive collection of works on art in all its branches. It comprises a list of 1910 volumes in the following departments. Works on art in general, archaeology; architecture and sculpture; painting; wood-cutting; engraving on steel, including a collection of incunabula and of books on the ancient art of wood-engraving; and art manufactures, including rare works on textile arts, and a collection of old artistic pressed book covers. What has been said of Mr. Fock's catalogue applies also to this. (No. 101, 114 p. 12°.)

LOGARITHMIC, TRIGONOMETRIC and Other Mathematical Tables. By Lieut. H. H. LUDLOW and Prof. E. W. BASS. 8vo, cloth, $2.00.

METALLURGY OF SILVER, GOLD AND MERCURY IN UNITED STATES. By Prof. THOMAS EGGLESTON. Vol. 2, Gold and Mercury. 140 illustrations, 900 pages. 8vo, cloth, $7.50.

"WRINKLES" IN PRACTICAL NAVIGATION. By S. T. S. LECKY, Master Mariner, Commander R. N. R. Second edition. 80 illustrations. Royal 8vo, cloth, $6.00.

"This work has now become a standard authority in the matters maritime of which it treats."—Marine Record.

PRACTICAL SEAMANSHIP. By JOHN TODD, Master Mariner, and W. B. WHALL, Extra Master, Younger Brother Trinity House. This book is the first work exclusively on Merchant Seamanship ever published, and no pains have been spared to make it a complete and reliable guide to the profession. With 243 illustrations and diagrams. Royal 8vo, full cloth, $7.50.

"Every Shipmaster would do well to have a copy of this valuable work in his library for reference in cases of emergency."—Marine Record, Cleveland, O.

SIMPLE ELEMENTS OF NAVIGATION. By LUCIEN YOUNG, U. S. Navy. Pocket-book form, $2.00.

This is a treatise on Navigation free from abstruse mathematical calculations, yet comprehensive enough to teach how to navigate a ship from any part of the globe to another.

It can be understood by any one having a common-school education, and its instructions as to the means of finding latitude, longitude, courses and bearings, and solving other navigation problems, are both simple and accurate.

"Without giving formulæ, it supplies all the rules and tables necessary for working out a ship's position, and it also contains a large amount of information concerning charts, buoys, lights and other aids to navigation."—N. Y. Herald.

SUGAR ANALYSIS. By Dr. F. G. WIECHMANN, School of Mines, Columbia College. 8vo, cloth, $2.50; interleaved, $3.50.

"Within the past few years many changes have been introduced in the methods of Sugar Analysis, and new methods have been devised, and, as is usual with such matters, the literature is scattered through numerous foreign journals. It has been Dr. Wiechmann's purpose to bring this new matter together into such shape as to make it available for those directly interested. The methods of analysis which he has selected from the vast wealth of material available have been chosen after long trial and practice under the supervision of the author."—Science.

HANDBOOK OF PROBLEMS IN DIRECT FIRE. By JAMES M. INGALLS, Captain First Artillery, U.S.A. 8vo, cloth, $4.00.

In this book, which it is believed is the first of its kind published in any language, the object has been to give practical solutions of all the important problems of Gunnery relating to Direct Fire; and to illustrate the solutions by numerous examples, fully worked out in the manner which a considerable experience has shown to be the most simple and concise.

NOTES ON MILITARY HYGIENE. By ALFRED A. WOODHULL, Surgeon U. S. Army. 12mo, morocco, $2.50.

T. Y. CROWELL & CO.'S NEW BOOKS.

The Founding of the German Empire by William I.

Translated from the German of HEINRICH VON SYBEL, by Professor MARSHALL LIVINGSTON PERRIN, of the Boston University. 5 volumes, 8vo, cloth, per vol., $2.00; $10.00 per set; half morocco, $15.00. Vol. I. is now ready. Vol. II. will be ready January 1, and the other three volumes will be issued during the spring of 1891.

The welding together into a mighty united nation of the petty dukedoms and principalities which fifty years ago made up the heterogeneity of Germany, was the greatest political feat of this century. Dr. von Sybel, pre-eminently fitted by nature and training to be the historian of this tremendous creation, had the additional advantage of access to original sources of information in the archives of Prussia, Hanover, Hesse Cassel and Nassau and the State papers and diplomatic correspondence, preserved in the foreign office at Berlin. His history, therefore, may be accepted as absolutely authentic, and that it has been so accepted is shown by the universal chorus of praise from German critics which greeted its first appearance, and by the fact that within two months of publication fifty thousand copies were sold.

ten in 1890.

FROM THE PREFACE.

"As the book is likely to have more readers in the country of its adoption than in the country of its birth, I have persuaded my friend Dr. William T. Harris, the United States Commissioner of Education, to put it into the International Education Series which he edits; so the only authorized editions of the book are the English edition and the American edition published by Messrs. D.
Appleton & Co.

CHARLES SCRIBNER'S SONS

HAVE JUST PUBLISHED:

Life of John Ericsson.

By Col. William C. Church. With 50 illustrations. 2 vols., 8vo, $6.00.

The career of Ericsson is of most romantic interest. The competitor with Stephenson in 1829 for the first locomotive engine, his varied activity extended over sixty eventful years during the wonderful development of steam power in modern life. The narrative of his life, as told by his intimate friend, Col. Church, who has had access to all of the family correspondence and documents, forms a notable biography.

How the Other Half Lives.

Studies Among the Tenements of New York.

By Jacob A. Riis. Illustrated from photographs taken by the author. 8vo, $2.50.

The reader is here taken through the byways and alleys of nether New York by an experienced guide, who describes what is both picturesque and significant. The book is from first to last an indictment of the tenement-house system, and will attract wide attention by reason of its suggestions for practical reforms.

Famous Women of the French Court.

Translated from the French of "Imbert de Saint-Amand," by T. S. Perry. 6 volumes now ready. Others in preparation. Each 12mo, with portrait, $1.25.

The Court of the Empress Josephine.

The events which took place between the assumption by Napoleon of the imperial title and the end of 1807 are here described, as well as the daily life and surroundings of Josephine at the summit of her career.

ALREADY ISSUED:

Marie Antoinette and the End of the Old Regime.

Citizeness Bonaparte.

SALE EXTRAORDINARY.

Relics of Gen. George Washington.

Estate of Major Lawrence Lewis, last surviving Executor of the Estate of Gen. Washington (and his Nephew); also the Estate of his Son, Lorenzo Lewis, of Clark Co., Virginia. By order of H. L. D. Lewis, Administrator of the Estate of Mrs. Lorenzo Lewis, deceased. To be sold, Wednesday, Thursday and Friday, Dec. 10, 11 and 12, commencing at 8 o'clock each evening, at the Auction-Rooms of THOS. BIRCH'S SONS, 1110 Chestnut St., Philadelphia, Pa.

This is the most important sale of the belongings of Gen. George Washington ever held in this country, and we may say the last that will ever be held, as it includes all the relics kept by the family, the balance having been sold to the Mount Vernon Society some years ago. In this collection will be found Washington's personal account-books, wherein he has enumerated with his own hands the various items of money expended from time to time, and for what purpose; his original autographic survey-books; and his original ledger of Mount Vernon Distillery and Fishery, with his vouchers throughout of his Secretary's (Tobias Lear) correctness of the accounts. The collection of documents and letters is extraordinary as well as of the greatest interest, containing his autograph list of slaves on eight folio sheets; his list of United States Loan Certificates; his prophetic letter in relation to the abolition of slavery; his letter to Lawrence Lewis, mentioning what he has left him in his will, and numerous autograph letters, deeds, releases, surveys, plans of towns, estimates, and in fact all his private papers which were kept by his executors in settling his estate, together with their original letters testamentary. The personal belongings consist of his punch-bowl of rose china and silver ladle; his secretary candlesticks, which shed the light to write his letters; his mantel clock, music-books (the score of which he drew and words in his handwriting); about 75 pieces of elegant cut glass, china cups and saucers, Indian pipes presented to him by Indian Chiefs; his books, and a great variety of other articles.

The sale will also embrace the library of Lawrence Lewis and of Eleanor Parke Custis, Washington's adopted daughter, also Martha Washington's family Bible with her autograph in three places through the book, and Nellie Custis' piano and piano stool, both masterpieces of carving in mahogany. Catalogues mailed on application after Nov. 20, when they will be ready for distribution.

Parties residing out of the city desiring to inspect the collection before they are opened to the view of the general public can do so by addressing the manager of our book department, appointing a day for that purpose.

AUTHORIZED EDITION.

In Darkest England, AND THE WAY OUT.

By GEN. BOOTH, of the Salvation Army.

This book, in which is announced and described a marvellous undertaking of the Salvation Army, involving an outlay of $5,000,000, and towards which amount, it is reported, subscriptions are pouring in from all parts of Great Britain, "sounds a note," says The Review of Reviews, "that will reverberate round the world." It has everywhere created a profound sensation and enlisted the deepest interest. Illustrated. Large demy 8vo, about 300 pp., cloth, $1.50. Post free.

The Review of Reviews, London, says: "It will be the most epoch-making book that the world has seen for many a long day. Our children and our children's children will not see the end of the chain of transforming influences that will be set in motion this month. . . . No one who reads General Booth's book can venture to assert that the Age of Faith has passed; and while the Age of Faith remains, the Age of Miracles is still with us."

THE Colonel's Christmas Dinner.

EDITED BY

Capt. CHAS. KING, U. S. A.

Paper, 200 pages, 12mo.

Price, 50 Cents.

These stories are all of military adventure, and having some reference to the Holiday season. They are supposed to be told over the walnuts and the wine at a dinner given by the Colonel of the regiment.

The publishers venture the assertion that no Christmas book published here or abroad will excel in literary merit or exceed in typographical beauty this dainty volume.

A. C. Armstrong & Son's New Books.

History of Art in Sardinia, Judea, Syria and Asia Minor.

BY GEORGES PERROTT AND CHARLES CHIPIEZ.

Edited by W. ARMSTRONG, B.A., Oxon., with 400 illustrations. Two vols., imperial 8vo, uniform with "History of Art in Ancient Egypt," "History of Art in Chaldea and Assyria," "History of Art in Phœnicia," etc. Handsomely bound in cloth, $14.50; half levant morocco, $22.50.

This New Work is the fourth in the Series by these distinguished writers on the "History of Ancient Art," the three previous works having achieved remarkable success and being accepted by the Highest Authorities as the Standard Works on the Subjects.

THIRD SERIES OF

The Book-Worm.

An Illustrated Treasury of Old-Time Literature. Tastefully printed in old style, on antique paper, with numerous illustrations and ornamental embellishments. Octavo, cloth, $3.00.

It is a treasury of knowledge on old-time literature, and presents its readers with stores of wisdom on subjects which are attractive to the book-lover, giving him in a readable form much out-of-the-way and little-known information on the literature of the past. In its pages will be found chapters on Scarce Books, the works of Special Presses, First Editions, and Unique Copies and their former and present value; Remarkable Dedications, Bookselling Reminiscences, Americana, Elizabethan Literature, Great Libraries, Collectors, Whims, etc., and nearly every other conceivable topic relating to books and their surroundings, Early Book Auctions and old Catalogues, Ancient Bookbinding and old Printing Presses, etc.

NEW VOL. (12TH) OF THE BOOK-LOVERS' LIBRARY.

Studies in Jocular Literature.

A Popular Subject more Closely Considered. By W. C. Hazlitt. 12mo, cloth, uncut edges, $1.25. Being the 12th volume of this Library.

In this new volume of the Book-Lovers' Library, Mr. Hazlitt has treated Jocular Literature from the point of view of the philosopher and the student. He points out the real use of the Jest, and traces the origin of the literature of humor from the earliest of times, showing its dependence on the varying conditions of society in which it was originated. The various forms of epigram, skit, pun, retort, ballads, nursery rhymes, etc., are all noted and commented upon in their places more or less fully.

Alexander Mackay of Uganda.

With portrait and colored map. Cr. 8vo, cloth, $1.50.

Much as we value Alexander Mackay we were quite unprepared for the burst of admiration and sympathy evoked by his death. We confess frankly, that we had not at all realized the position he had gained in the public mind. No doubt, Mr. Stanley's recent praise of him has helped to make him known; but that evidently only clinched an impression that was already abroad.

REV. DR. WM. M. TAYLOR'S NEW WORK ON THE MIRACLES.

The Miracles of Our Saviour.

Expounded and illustrated. Uniform with the same author's "Parables of Our Saviour." One vol., crown 8vo, cloth, about 500 pages, $1.75.

The success of Dr. Taylor's work on the Parables, now in its Fourth Thousand, has led him to accede to the publishers' request to prepare this companion volume.

ROMOLA.

By GEORGE ELIOT.

From entirely new plates. Beautifully illustrated with 60 photogravures of views in Florence, sculpture, paintings, etc., with a portrait of George Eliot. In two volumes, small 8vo, cloth, gilt top. With slip covers in the Italian style, in cloth box, $6.00; also in three-quarter crushed levant, gilt top, $12.00.

The large-paper edition of "Romola" is all sold, having received orders for the entire edition before publication.

QUEENS OF SOCIETY.

By GRACE AND PHILIP WHARTON.

New Library Edition. Beautifully illustrated with 18 photogravures. Tastefully bound in two volumes, cloth extra, $5.00; also in three-quarter calf, gilt top, $8.00.

This entertaining volume presents a gossiping biography of several of the celebrated women who have held a conspicuous place in society, either on account of intellectual endowments, personal attractions, peculiar culture and accomplishments, political connections or force of character. Among the distinguished names which are thus brought into fresh notice are those of the Duchess of Marlborough, Lady Mary Wortley Montagu, Lady Morgan, Lady Caroline Lamb, Miss Landon (the unfortunate L. E. L.), Madame de Staël, Madame Roland, Madame Récamier, and others, both of England and France.

WITS AND BEAUX OF SOCIETY.

By GRACE AND PHILIP WHARTON.

New Library Edition. Beautifully illustrated with 20 photogravures. Tastefully bound in two volumes. Small 8vo, cloth extra, $5.00; also in three-quarter calf, gilt top, $8.00.

This gossip and pleasant book gives sketches of such men as George Villiers, the second Duke of Buckingham, with numerous anecdotes of his adventures; the celebrated Grammont and Rochester, wherein the author introduces some incidents in the lives of such people as Hortense Mancini, the little Jermyn, La Belle Hamilton, and other noted beauties of France and England; Beau Nash; Lord Hervey; Scarron, and here again of his wife; and so on of numerous worthies or unworthies, each and all of whom are more or less known to fame. The authors have a happy faculty of making their sketches light and pleasant, interspersing history and anecdote, personalities and public events; so that the book is much more interesting than a novel, and much better worth reading than any fiction.

Large-paper edition of "Wits and Beaux" and "Queens," limited to 250 copies, in sets of 4 vols., $20.00. Printed from entirely new plates, on paper made expressly for this book. Illustrations on India paper, mounted.

CASSELL PUBLISHING COMPANY'S

NEW AND RECENT PUBLICATIONS.

THE CHOUANS.

By HONORE DE BALZAC. With 100 engravings on wood by L veill  from drawings by Julien Le Blant. Newly translated into English by George Saintsbury. 1 vol., large 8vo, extra cloth, $7.50.

There are more of the elements of a wide popularity in "The Chouans" than in any story that Balzac ever wrote. It is, as the title indicates, a tale of the troublous times in France when the Republicans and the Imperialists stood ready to fly at each other's throats. M. Le Blant's illustrations are in perfect keeping with the spirit of the story.

The Rivers of Great Britain.

Descriptive, historical, pictorial. With numerous highly finished engravings. Engraved from the original drawings. Quarto, cloth, gilt, etc., $15.00.

Curious Creatures in Zoology,

By JOHN ASHTON. 130 illustrations. 1 vol., 8vo, $3.50.

Curious creatures these are indeed that Mr. Ashton describes. They include all sorts of singular formations, from centaurs to bearded women. The subject is treated from a scientific standpoint, and the pencil has done as much as the pen to make it graphic.

The International Shakspeare.

Consisting of an Edition de Luxe of the principal plays of Shakspeare, with original drawings by the leading artists of the world, reproduced in the highest style of photogravure. (New ready) OTHELLO. Illustrated by Frank Dicksee, A.R.A. $25.00.

"Messrs. Cassell's new Shakspeare promises to be the most superb edition ever published."—London Chronicle.

London Street Arabs.

By Mrs. H. M. STANLEY (Dorothy Tennant). 1 vol., 4to, extra cloth, beautifully illustrated, $2.00.

"We have only one fault to find—it is all too short; we should like to have heard more."—London Daily Graphic.

A CHRONICLE OF THE REIGN OF CHARLES IX.

By PROSPER M RIM E. With 110 engravings on wood, from drawings by Edward Toudouze: newly translated into English by George Saintsbury. 1 vol., large 8vo, extra cloth, $7.50.

There will be no more beautiful book published this year. The text of M rim e is well known in the original. Mr. Saintsbury's translation is new, and so are the illustrations of Edward Toudouze. In presswork, paper and binding, this book is a model.

Society as I Have Found It.

A Volume of Anecdote and Reminiscence. By WARD McALLISTER. With portrait of the author. 1 volume, 8vo, cloth, unique binding, $2.00.

Christmas Greeting.

From "Wordsworth's Sonnets."—Illustrated by Parsons.—Copyright, 1890, by Harper & Brothers.

NOW OLD CHRISTMAS stands again on the threshold, and through the open door is heard upon the frosty air, in angel voices, that glorious song, "Peace on earth, good-will to men!" Though cares may press and troubles throng all the grim three hundred and sixty-four days that precede it, when once the chimes of Christmas Day ring out upon the air, the furrowed brows relax, the anxious eyes light up, and every one of us, however conditioned, and wherever placed, feels the glad thrill of the world's happiness touch both life and heart, as we too join in greetings to the happy day. Men who never give the origin of the world's great festival a thought, feel their best natures stirred to be in the good times they see and feel around them, and to do their share towards brightening and cheering the little corner of the earth for whose happiness they are responsible. The Christmas tree is now admitted into all homes and enjoyed alike by Christian and pagan. Even scoffers and such as have no distinct idea of religious belief cease from logical reasoning and historical refutation, and become as little children in Christmas entertainment.

A great longing to make others happy fills every heart; all harshness and injustice is put aside, and homes are opened wide to friends and strangers. The world keeps this holiest of holy days in this hearty, happy manner, led and guided only by human love and human kindness, and year after year rejoices in the bustle and cheer of Christmas Day, the reunion of families, the exchange of gifts, and all the gladness of holiday-making.

Now, if ever, the purse-strings are loosened; the giver is blessed in giving, the receiver happy in receiving; and the fair garland of Christmas gifts and Christmas greetings that links heart to heart vies in fragrance and beauty with the more perishable blossoms that deck the Christmas home.

And what gift at this season more acceptable than books?—books that are omnipotent; books that delight and entertain, that instruct and guide, that amuse and profit the countless thousands who read them, from the patriarch to the youngest of the family. To guide the puzzled searcher through the embarrassment of riches, that has again been prepared for him by the ever-busy author, artist and publisher—not to surfeit him, but rather to show him what there is and how to get it—the CHRISTMAS BOOKSHELF is presented, with its annual store of title, description and picture, and offers its aid to all who search for suitable Holiday gifts. For such we open our pages, and, as we bid them choose, we mingle with our Christmas greetings the heartiest wish of Tiny Tim: "God bless us, every one!"

To those that love us, joy and peace,
Whether afar or near:
To old and young, to rich and poor,
Be merry Christmas days in store,
And hope, in the New Year.

A Selection of Wordsworth's Sonnets.

WORDSWORTH is best known through some of his minor poems. Many of these are written with a beautiful and tender simplicity which we feel to be inimitable. He was pre-eminently the poet of nature, although his larger works appeal to the intellect as well as to the imagination and sensibility. His "Ode on the Intimations of Immortality" was said by Emerson to be the high-water mark of the intellect of our age. Emerson has also said that "great geniuses have the shortest biographies, they live in their writings," and in a special sense is it true of Wordsworth that he lives in his writings. He seldom went far afield for his subjects, and in almost all his aim was to give the charm of novelty to incidents of every-day life, to awaken the mind to the beauty and wondrousness of the world just around us. His greatest inspiration came to him when he was living that ideally quiet life with his sister Dorothy, stimulated by the visits of his younger fellow-poet Coleridge, whose greatest poetical production also dates to the period of his association with William Wordsworth.

The "wondering rapture at the heart" which nature evoked in Wordsworth is nowhere shown more delightfully than in his "Sonnets." For him Nature was no mere stretch of hill and dale, of lake and sky; for him Nature had a personality, character, moods and passions, which he never tired of studying and depicting in words selected with regard to subtlest lights and shades of meaning. This great artist of the pen has reduced work for an artist of the pencil almost to the work of a copyist; but to make a copy that shall have the spirit and tone of the original requires a high order of endowments.

Messrs. Harper & Brothers have this year given us an opportunity to see such work most satisfactorily accomplished. Eighty-eight of the familiar "Sonnets" have been selected with rare discrimination as regards their pictorial possibilities, and these have been illustrated by Alfred Parsons, whose name at once tells the quality of such illustration. In the variety of little head and tail pieces and initial letters the artist works guided by his own sweet will and sense of beauty, but in the full-page pictures facing special sonnets he shows a delicate comprehension and a subordination to his inspiring text that is thoroughly artistic. The picture we have chosen, in the hope and confidence of making our readers want this book at once, is the illustration for the sonnet

"BY DUDDON'S SIDE."

Whence that low voice?—A whisper from the heart,
That told of days long past, when here I roved
With friends and kindred tenderly beloved;
Some who had early mandates to depart,
Yet are allowed to steal my path athwart
By Duddon's side; once more do we unite,
Once more, beneath the kind Earth's tranquil light;
And smothered joys into new being start.

From her unworthy seat, the cloudy stall
Of Time, breaks forth triumphant Memory;
Her glistening tresses bound, yet light and free
As golden locks of birch, that rise and fall
On gales that breathe too gently to recall
Aught of the fading year's inclemency!

"A Selection of Wordsworth's Sonnets," with Alfred Parsons' bewitching illustrations, makes a sumptuous appearance in holiday dress. The publishers have been generous, and the book shows the thought and money spent upon it.

Holiday books of true literary and artistic merit are not so numerous that this book, combining a classic text, artistic illustrations and the best effects of modern book-making, can fail to be instantly recognized and much sought after.

Summerland.

NATURE in her sunniest mood woos us from out the pages of Mrs. Pullman's "Summerland." It is not a Southern summer, happily, with its torrid atmosphere that we are called upon to admire and sympathize with, but a bright New England summer, with its deep shadows and tempered heats and its occasional invigorating breezes, wafted down from its glorious mountain-tops. A "Summerland" of broad pasture-lands and deep valleys, graceful trees and rich foliage, and happy homesteads with their trim fences, and picturesque sheep and cows!

Messrs. Lee & Shepard are fortunate in the possession of this artistic volume of sketches. It is a worthy successor of others in the same line, and especially of "Days Serene," by the same artist. It was with this volume Mrs. Margaret MacDonald Pullman established her reputation as an unusually sympathetic delineator of nature. The same quality is seen in "Summerland," which abounds in graceful pictures of sky and land, water and woods. There are in all sixty-three full pages of landscapes, printed on one side only of rich paper; facing the pictures are graceful decorative pages, with the line or verse that suggested the facing design.

Mrs. Pullman best herself describes the leading idea of her beautiful collection of pictures: "I want them," she says, "to tell you of hills in sunshine; meadows with perfumed air; the brook fringed with flowering grasses, and cool, quiet reflections; the winding path that suggests the cottage life just over the hills, with its 'warm blue breathings of the hidden hearth;'

the healing breath of the pine woods ; music of quiet waters ; white sands washed by the waves of the sea, blue with heaven's own reflections ; lengthening shadows ; day done, and quiet over all. If I can touch the heart, and have it feel that life is sweet and a blessing of joy is ours in nature, then I can feel that 'Summerland' is yours as well as mine ; for

"The whole world is ringing
With laughter and singing ;
Why need he be clinging
To grief that is gone ?"

and so self is lost in the universal joy."

Our New England.

No matter in what quarter of the globe a New Englander may be wandering or resting, the title "Our New England" will attract his attention, and when he sees the handsome holiday book the Messrs. Roberts Brothers have brought out under that name he will long to share the possessive quality of the title. The text alone must warm his innermost Yankee heart, and the illustrations must recall many scenes and incidents of "the days that are no more." Mr. Mabie's delightful style is known to all readers of the Christian Union, and in his text to this series of pictures of New England life he has been specially happy in choice of thought and word. "In New England I have always thought," he says, "that intimacy of relation (with nature) was more difficult to establish than elsewhere; there is a touch of the recluse about Nature in New England which adds piquancy and charm to friendship when it is finally established. But to penetrate this reserve and reach the mellow spirit of the landscape, one must wander through the woods with the eager heart of a boy, or dream the dream of youth along the banks of the great brooks."

New England has been fortunate in her poets, who are always and everywhere the authoritative interpreters of nature; Bryant, Emerson, Longfellow, Whittier, Lowell, Miss Larcom, Mrs. Thaxter and kindred spirits, have kept the record of the New England year, not with the hard accuracy of science, but with the tender suggestiveness of poetry. She has also had such close and patient observers as Thoreau and Burroughs, who listened intently in the woods and walked with hushed steps across the meadows, eager to surprise Nature in some unguarded moment and to win some new and permanent addition to human knowledge. These writers have described the "out-of-doors" of New England, but have also dwelt tenderly upon the hearthstones of New England. The old house—simple in outline, substantial in structure, so delightfully unconscious of the subtleties of color that it combined white and green with uncompromising sincerity—has been the centre of associations that made the entire landscape a personal possession.

This New England of landscape, farm and home has been photographed from nature by A. W. Elson & Co., and the pictures are reproduced in photogravure in Messrs. Roberts Brothers' beautiful book. Most of the illustrations occupy full pages and their margins are illuminated with remarks drawn by Frank T. Merrill, which are full of imagination and tender sentiment. Opposite every picture is a quotation from some New England author. The pictures are classified by seasons. Mr. Mable explains: "The seasons do not form a procession there upon which one looks with a merely curious eye, entertained by the pomp and circumstance of the show of things, but are involved in the varied and sublime movement. On the New England farm the seasons are the four movements to which the outward activities and the inward impressions of life are set. They make the domestic calendar, with its successive works, pleasures and experiences."

The size of our page does not enable us to show the picture we have selected as it appears on the large oblong quarto page of "Our New England." The "loitering line of solemn-minded, melancholy kine" are unconsciously posing in the most graceful and natural manner to the artist, who has seized his fleeting opportunity with rare artistic skill.

The book is bound in boards and has an outside cover of paper on which are represented farm-houses, stables and outhouses, a flowing brook, a stony bridge and in the foreground the heavy loaded hay-wagon. The New England which is so rapidly vanishing from the neighborhood of the cities lives again in this book. So far from being a mere gift-book or a padded collection of engravings or paintings, the book is truly a photograph album of portraits of persons, places, habits and customs which are inexpressibly dear to many, many hearts. The descendants of the Pilgrims of the Mayflower should make it a point of seeing and coveting, and, if possible, gaining possession of, "Our New England."

Autobiography of Joseph Jefferson.

MR. JEFFERSON wittily quotes the Irishman, who said, "No man should write his autobiography but himself," as an excuse for his fancied literary shortcomings. But Mr. Jefferson needs neither excuses nor apologies for the manner or material of his book. On the contrary, the world—that is, the reading world—is deeply the debtor that the spirit moved him to be his own Boswell. While the incidents related could not fail, even in other hands, to interest, we doubt if they would have been invested with the same exquisite charm and fascination. Mr. Jefferson's personality pervades his story. His quaint humor, his simplicity and genuineness of character, are as telling qualities in his rôle of author as they are in his own proper person, in its contact with the world.

It would have been an irreparable loss to the history of the stage if Mr. Jefferson had not been persuaded to put into permanent form his fifty years of reminiscences as an actor in all parts of the world. Entering upon his profession when a mere child, and coming from a family of actors, there was no phase of stage life, either practical or otherwise, and no class of actor, either great or little, with which he did not come in contact. The "ups and downs" of the stage, its disappointments as well as its rewards, are all familiar to him. Though now one of the famous actors of the world, he went through his "stormy" period, like less successful men. But the dark side of life seems to have cast no shadow upon his sunny artistic temperament. Charity and forbearance are as conspicuous characteristics of his narrative as are his natural love of fun and adventure.

In the course of the "Autobiography" during the past year through the Century Magazine, it has been a source of intense delight to many readers. Its droll anecdotes of prominent actors, its reminiscences of interesting events in Mr. Jefferson's own career, and its pictures of the stage and the drama for a half century at least, lent it a special charm. The stage has always been and will always be a source of pleasure to the multitude. It supplies the sweetening to our cup of life. It throws the glamour of imagination over the commonplace of existence, and sets up an ideal in place of our earthly deities. "The poor players," whose business it is to enact these "ideals," often capture our hearts in a most unaccountable way. Perhaps it is because they are associated only with our pleasantest and happiest hours, that we give them such bountiful tribute of affection and kindly thoughts. Mr. Jefferson is an apt illustration of this; though why he occupies a place so deep down in the hearts of the American public is not at all unaccountable. His refined personality has been felt in all his work; and while his aim has been at all times to amuse, he has never lowered the standard of his profession.

The Century Co. offer this "Autobiography," in a beautiful white vellum cover and exquisitely printed, as a holiday gift-book. It is without doubt one of the most tempting and most lovely publications of the season. The same wealth of illustrations that embellished it in the Century is displayed in book form. Over seventy of the finest portraits, however, are printed separately from the text, on heavy paper, in place of being in the text, as they were in the magazine. This is a great addition to the artistic worth of the volume, the result being a series of exceptionally fine pictures. One of the handsomest—Jefferson in the character of "Dr. Pangloss" in "The Heir at Law"—we print on the preceding page. While a charming portrait, it is a representation of one of his best parts, and one in which the public just now are flocking to see him.

What delightful hours come again to the theatre-lover as the leaves of this delightful book are turned, and portrait after portrait, with its long train of remembrance, is brought before him! Here is Jefferson as "Rip Van Winkle" and as "Bob Acres;" John Drew the elder as "The Irish Emigrant;" genial and handsome John Brougham as "The O'Grady;" Sothorn as "Lord Dundreary;" Edwila Adams, Laura Keane, Chanfrau, Forrest, Charlotte Cushman—all gone but Jefferson—"players" that the world has been proud to honor, who have had "their exits and their entrances," and are heard no more.

Romola.

THE vast amount of solid, hard work that George Eliot put into her "Romola"—scene, Florence; period, close of the fifteenth century, which was marked by Savonarola's career and martyrdom—it is impossible to realize. It is her most elaborately executed book; the book which, as she said, "I began a young woman—I finished it an old woman." This study of conscience in an historical setting she planned in Florence, and in 1860 just mentioned her desire to write an Italian story. On October 7, 1861, she began to write, and the record of the books she read before and during her work on this great novel gives a slight insight into her profound learning and her almost morbid conscientiousness. In February, 1862, she was offered £10,000 for the entire copyright of her novel, which the publishers desired to issue in The Cornhill Magazine, beginning with an instalment in the month of May. But George Eliot was too true an artist to make a beginning before the public until she could see further towards the end of her work. On June 9, 1863, she finished "Romola," which she said "ploughed into her" more than any of her other books. For systematic analysis of motives, moral insight into the larger bearings of life, forcible delineation of the far-reaching results of an evil step, power of epigrammatic expression, unerring humor, masculine breadth and artistic finish, her work stands almost alone in fiction. Many writers excel in one or other of the great gifts she has shown herself possessed of, but a combination of all has only been seen in Shakespeare. Only Shakespeare is as catholic as George Eliot; only in Shakespeare is the line between the work and the worker so distinctly drawn.

STAIRCASE IN THE COURTYARD OF THE BAKEGELLO OR PALAZZO DEL PODESTÀ.

From Florentine Ed. of "Romola." (Copyright, 1890, by Porter & Coats.)

Her picture of the religious condition of Italy just before the Reformation has been quoted and accepted by the most profound students of the subject. However, it is through presentations of character that a novel attains or falls short of enduring fame, and in this direction also "Romola" is a masterpiece. The finely conceived, though almost too elaborated character of Tito Milema is an essay on selfishness that "must give us pause." In Savonarola she shows her faith that "men still yearn for the reign of peace and righteousness—still own that life to be the highest which is a conscious voluntary sacrifice." Romola's care of Tito's child is in itself a poem of justice to the innocent. Judged by the standard of "Romola," honest total condemnation could be most justly applied to nine-tenths of the novels of the day.

As sometimes happens, the same idea has come to two publishing houses, and the resulting conception has been carried out by both in a very similar and very satisfactory manner. Estes & Lauriat, of Boston, and Porter & Coates, of Philadelphia, have both seen the vast possibilities in "Romola," and have both utilized them in making their most important holiday book. Their editions of George Eliot's historical Florentine romance are very similar as to size of volumes, style of decorative binding and illustrations. The photogravures number sixty in each, and not a few are the same, or deal with the same subject. The Philadelphia series runs a little more to portraits and statuary, and has a design representing Romola and her father. The Boston series includes two modern etchings by William Unger of Macchiavelli and Savonarola. The frontispiece of the Philadelphia edition is a portrait of George Eliot taken in 1864, showing the remarkable likeness (so often pointed out) to the pictures of Dante, Savonarola and Cardinal Newman, which three great men she so strongly resembled in leading points of character. The Boston edition prints its illustrations in various tints, which perhaps helps to bring out some of the fine work of the well-known and world-renowned works of art represented. Both editions are well printed and gotten up in delicate binding of white and gold. Both are shielded by scarlet covers, and a scarlet box encases them both. There ought to be a sale for all the copies both publishers can furnish, for travelled and untravelled readers must be charmed with the sumptuous appearance of these books. Boston and Philadelphia unite in calling their big undertaking the Florentine Edition of George Eliot's "Romola," and both houses publish an édition de luxe, limited to 250 copies, which must satisfy the most exacting taste.

In Scripture Lands.

GOLD-FACED MUMMY-CASE OF QUEEN AHMES
NOFRETARI.

(Copyright, 1890, by Charles Scribner's Sons.)

Books of information about the corner of the earth known to the educated world as Scripture Lands are legion. Starting from every thought almost that can inspire a book, volumes and volumes have been written to describe, explain, prove, refute, teach and guide. The number of these books that are full of illustrations is also legion. Pictures of almost every place and every person mentioned in the Scriptures are scattered broadcast through every city, town and country-side where a book and picture can be sent, and almost as soon as they begin to see, little children are given pictures of Abraham, Isaac, David, Goliath, the Garden of Eden, Jerusalem, the Stable at Bethlehem, and form an idea of the appearance of Scripture lands and the characters associated with the sacred history of those lands which no amount of reading, thought or study in after life ever quite transforms. Little by little it becomes clear to the mind that the portraits of the old patriarchs and of the first followers of Christ must have been evolved solely from the imagination of the artists who have produced and are still producing such representations. But seldom, unless by a peculiar suggestion from some teacher or friend who has wandered through the Scripture lands as men and women wander through the Yosemite or among the Alps, is it realized that the scenes and places described in the dear old Bible text may still be searched for and found, and true and accurate pictures made of their geographical location and topographical appearance.

Edward L. Wilson, an earnest student of the Bible and an enterprising traveller, became possessed of the desire to see pictures of the places made sacred by Scriptural history which were not "idealized" by the pencils of artists to whom strict accuracy was less desirable than a beautiful picture. He also wanted to see such pictures accompanied by descriptions free from the shallow sentiment of the superficial tourist, the narrowness of the enthusiast, and the arbitrariness of the denominational expounder. He wanted them connected with data and textual references which should give helpful hints for the further study and enjoyment of events that have made Scripture lands of more universal interest than any other part of the earth.

With these wants—with the Bible as his guide-book, with ardent enthusiasm for the picturesque as well as the historical, with love for nature and comprehension of human nature, with perfect health and strength, with practical art-training and a perfect camera—he started out to supply his own demands. The result of his labors he now offers through Messrs. Charles Scribner's Sons in a handsome volume entitled "In Scripture Lands."

Mr. Wilson visited some places rarely seen by the foreigner, and has been able to glean new facts about them. He mixed constantly with the people and wandering tribes, and has gained much interesting information about the features of Oriental life, past and present. The specialty of the volume is the 150 illustrations from photographs taken by the author on the spot. These are made available by an alphabetical list with Scripture references, and there is also an exhaustive index, in which Scripture text, events, characters and illustrations are combined, thus making of this book a valuable work of reference. The publishers also have liberally done their share towards making the book at first glance give attractive promise of the important treasure it holds within its covers. At the Christmas season all books relating to the great Book from whose pages was first taught us the lesson of Bethlehem seem to have a first claim upon our attention. "In Scripture Lands," by intrinsic quality and exterior beauty, is well equipped to substantiate such claim.

Jane Eyre.

"THEN MR. ROCHESTER WAS AT HOME WHEN THE FIRE BROKE OUT?"

From "Jane Eyre." (Copyright, 1890, by Thomas Y. Crowell & Co.)

HAWORTH has become a shrine only less visited by the tourist than Shakespeare's early home at Stratford. Here, amid the bleak Yorkshire moors, is the sad little parsonage where Charlotte Brontë lived and wrote "Jane Eyre," one of the famous novels in English literature, marking as much as "Vanity Fair," with which it is contemporaneous, an epoch in fiction.

There is a tender interest that clings to the name of Charlotte Brontë, which scarcely can be measured. The gloom and tragedy which shadowed her brief career—the suffering, sadness and loneliness of her daily life, considered in connection with her brilliant genius and her brave, unconventional spirit—make her as distinct and pathetic and as immortal a figure in literary history as Shelley or Keats, or our own Margaret Fuller.

Charlotte Brontë's novels supplement in a remarkable degree the biographies of her that have been written. To "Shirley" and "Villette," which followed "Jane Eyre," she gave, as she did to "Jane Eyre," a large share of the innermost thoughts of a heart few biographers have fathomed. "Jane Eyre" was a confession and a revelation as much as "David Copperfield." Charlotte Brontë had herself drank deeply from "the cup of life as it is mixed for the class termed governesses," and in her creation of Jane, the intellectual but plain governess, she had no difficulty in drawing a life-like portrait. Jane's early training in the Lowood school reproduces an indelible experience in Charlotte's own youth. The characters in "Jane Eyre" are idealized—and sometimes quite graphic—pictures of people she had known. The scenery is such as her eye rested daily upon—the stony moors around Haworth, or some of the most beautiful spots in Yorkshire and Westmoreland.

In the late autumn of 1847, when "Jane Eyre by Currer Bell" was first issued in London, so bewildered and startled were the critics by its daring passion that all stereotyped methods of criticism failed in endeavoring to measure its worth. After an astonished pause came universal laudation, and "Currer Bell" was a name as famous as Thackeray.

The Messrs. T. Y. Crowell & Co. have issued this novel in a handsome two-volume edition for the holiday season. The volumes contain forty-eight full-page illustrations reproducing the scenes and characters of the story. They are beautifully bound in scarlet and white, and are enclosed in scarlet slip covers in the Italian style. The handsome shape in which "Jane Eyre" is offered—the clean page and clear type—will induce many into re-reading an old favorite and living over again the pleasant hours. Lovers of novels who have not read "Jane Eyre" have a great treat in store. Compared with the deluge of weak and purposeless novels with which we are nowadays afflicted, it is like a giant to a dwarf.

Our Old Home.

IN the summer of 1852 Nathaniel Hawthorne—genial, humane, recluse; a perpetual dweller among visions, a keen observer and restless recorder of the operations of the spiritual laws; a creative artist, whose field of study was the human heart—was reduced to the necessity of bartering his brain for the support of his family. The author of "The Scarlet Letter," "The House of the Seven Gables" and "The Blithedale Romance," whose place was acknowledged to be among writers of the first rank, was forced by the depressing state of his finances to undertake the lucrative task of writing a campaign biography of Franklin Pierce, then a candidate for the presidency. Very reluctantly Hawthorne undertook the task. He had an angry consciousness that he had been persuaded to descend from the sanctum of his genius. But he had made the discovery which all American authors before and since have made, that no family can be supported by authorship in a country where piracy on foreign authors is permitted. American authors who have neither inherited nor married wealth have invariably been compelled to sell their main time and strength to colleges, professions, journals, magazines or offices, or perhaps to reside abroad. In no case has literature, pure and simple, enabled an American author to support a home and family. Franklin Pierce, Hawthorne's lifetime friend, rewarded his biographer with the consulate at Liverpool. In 1853 Hawthorne sailed for England, and for six years did not publish any literary work. He however visited interesting places in England—the Lakes, Stratford-on-Avon, Old Boston, London, etc.—and, true to his habit, made copious notes on all he saw and learned about every person or locality.

The outcome of these English note-books was "Our Old Home," first published in 1863, and dedicated to Franklin Pierce. Its chapters are full of romantic interest, all the more entertaining by the interwoven sketches of reality, the best of these being that of poor Delia Bacon, the anti-Shakespearian apostle, who played so large a part in Hawthorne's English career. Encouraged by the success of his "Marble Faun," brought out last season as an illustrated commentary on nature and art in Italy, Messrs. Houghton, Mifflin & Co. have this year prepared "Our Old Home," annotated with passages from Hawthorne's "English Note-Books," with references to the page upon which they may be found in the Riverside Edition of his works, and illustrated with photogravures of English characters and scenery. These photographs, in almost all cases, are from photographs of the objects themselves, and regard has been had, whenever it was expedient, to the date of Hawthorne's own knowledge of England, so that the pictures might be true copies of the scenes which he described with marvellous fidelity.

The work is published in two volumes, bound in red or light green silk, with gilt cover design, making a beautiful holiday edition of a most valuable production. Any one so fortunate as to have become the possessor last season of "The Marble Faun" can be made supremely satisfied by having this edition of "Our Old Home" placed beside that classic on the special shelf of favorite books.

A DEVONSHIRE FARM-HOUSE.

From "Our Old Home" (Copyright, 1890, by Houghton, Mifflin & Co.)

The Song of Hiawatha.

IN "Hiawatha" Longfellow has written our American epic. All know how earnestly and lovingly the poet wrought this poem on the Indians, weaving their traditions into a series of idylls around the life of a semi-mythical brave, miraculously sent among the red men to clear their forests and teach them peaceful arts. His power to sing of the facts of ordinary homely life with a wealth of tender sentiment was already known on both sides of the Atlantic, when in "Hiawatha" he attempted a broader conception of manhood and humanity, and illustrated from the traditions and life of an aboriginal race that the qualities of love, devotion, fidelity and constancy are developed under the influence of nature as well as by training among fellowmen.

After nearly forty years it is useless to speak of the quality of this poem. Its peculiar music, its legendary glamour and fine sympathy with wild nature displayed brilliantly Longfellow's fund of miscellaneous culture, knowledge of nations and languages, wide command of rhythm and exquisite artistic sensibility.

In the edition of "The Song of Hiawatha" printed at the Riverside Press the holiday ideal has been skillfully met by Messrs. Houghton, Mifflin & Co. By writing this poem Longfellow joined his name inseparably to American history; by illustrating it as Frederic Remington has done, he has made a valuable and enduring contribution to Indian archæology.

No better qualified artist could possibly have been found for the work than Mr. Remington. He is thoroughly acquainted with Indian life, having lived among the Sioux and studied them in utmost minuteness of detail, while his spirit and vigor in drawing have been already shown in much good work. Mr. Remington's full-page sepia drawings are realistic, but beauty and sentiment not seldom assert themselves, and the general effect is undeniably pleasing. However, the Indian of the legend is depicted as the Indian of to-day, and his physiognomy drawn with almost photographic exactness. Hiawatha is not a red Apollo, but a thorough savage, gaunt of limb, thin of face, with ample mouth and high cheek-bones. Nor is the lovely Minnehaha anything but the typical Indian girl, whose charms would be insufficient to attract any one outside her own race. He has also been specially successful in giving the effect of the vast scenery of prairie and mountain.

Besides the twenty-two full-page plates there are upwards of four hundred pen-and-ink sketches inserted in the broad margins of the pages, and these give the book its remarkable historical and ethnological value. In the full-page drawings Mr. Remington is an artist conscientiously interpreting a poet's conception, and supplying only what is necessary to enforce them. In the text-drawings he is his own master, and he supplies a storehouse of information regarding Indian life in its varied details. He has gone into Indian costumes, implements, and the like, and has amassed a small museum of pen-drawings of pipes, snowshoes, targets, jars, hammers, quivers, spears, belts, arrows, head ornaments, etc., etc., with faces, animals and bits of scenery, which are scattered up and down the margin of the text in a thoroughly novel way. There is not an article of Indian dress, a weapon for war or for the hunt, an ornament for the person or a camp utensil, but is faithfully and singly represented in these marginal pictures.

Poet and artist are at their best in their distinctive contributions to "The Song of Hiawatha." Nothing could be in finer taste, handsomer or richer, than the setting the publishers have given their work. The poem has been furnished with a model table of contents, a vocabulary and notes. It is printed from large type on heavy paper. The reproductions in black and white by the photo-gravure process of the full-page drawings, and the delicate tracery of the marginal pen-and-ink work are brought out by perfect presswork. A fine portrait of Longfellow, engraved on steel, from Lawrence's picture, painted in 1854, serves as frontispiece to the volume. The binding is a tasteful revival of an older style. It is full buckskin, of russet color, with design in gilt, illustrating the ducks with charmed lives celebrated in the poem. All the appointments of this edition are of the first order, and it is one of the most artistically effective books produced for many seasons.

In the Footsteps of Charles Lamb.

A CORNER IN THE BLUE-COAT SCHOOL.

From "In the Footsteps of Charles Lamb," (Copyrighted, 1890, by Charles Scribner's Sons.)

THE author of this handsome volume, Dr. Benjamin Ellis Martin, is an ardent admirer of Charles Lamb, both as man and writer. His monograph, however, has little to do with Lamb's place in literature, or with the merits of his literary offsprings. The subjects he has chosen to illustrate with an unusually graphic pen and quite a wealth of pictures are the many houses in and around London which sheltered Charles Lamb and his sister in the several changes of their Bohemian life. He leads us literally "in the footsteps of Charles Lamb"—we tread the same stones his feet have often passed over in his dear London streets; we look into the same windows and see the same sights that his eyes so often dwelt upon; we live with him in his various lodgings, learn to know his quaint, lovable personality, his frailties and virtues, his friends and his friendships.

Dr. Martin's book fills a place hitherto unoccupied in Lamb literature. Its topographical data are not only of the deepest interest but interwoven with it is a tender, sympathetic portrait of one of the best loved figures in English literature.

Beginning with the first home of the Lambs on Inner Temple Lane we follow the family through various changes of fortune till Charles finds happiness as a Blue-Coat boy of Christ's Hospital. This is one of the brightest spots in Lamb's life. His heart in after days often went back to the time when he was a "Blue-Coat" boy. His writings are full of recollections of this period. In his walks to and from the East India House, during the next thirty-three years, he often found himself drawn to the neighborhood of Christ's Hospital. Peering through the iron railings with a sympathetic smile upon his face, he watched the boys at play with their long bare locks floating in the breeze, their flapping coats tucked up under their belts, and lived over again the hours of his youth.

The Lambs were indebted to Mr. Salt, one of the benchers of the Inner Temple, to whom John Lamb, Charles' father, filled the place of clerk, for obtaining a presentation to Christ's Hospital. Charles remained here from his eighth to his fifteenth year. He was fortunate enough to have for a school-fellow the afterwards famous Samuel Taylor Coleridge, his senior by rather more than two years, and a close and tender life-long friendship began which had a singularly great influence on the whole of his after career.

He commenced his career a few years later as clerk in the East India House, and possessed at first a poor home in lodgings at 7 Little Queen Street, Holborn. The terrible tragedy was enacted here which forever afterwards shadowed Mary Lamb's life, and cast a deeper gloom over poor Charles. In the neighborhood were "The Salutation and Cat" and "The Feathers," two dingy taverns, favorite resorts of Lamb, Coleridge and Southey. Many evenings were spent together, the friends trying, in Lamb's own words, with "Welsh rabbit, punch and poesy," to beguile the cares of life. It was at this dreary period Lamb first appeared in print.

The Inner Temple Lane in 1801 had again

Mary and Charles Lamb for residents, and in the small, scantily furnished rooms of two different lodging-houses were spent seventeen of the happiest years of their lives. The most pleasant reminiscences and the most amusing anecdotes cluster around these points. Tom Hood, De Quincey, Barry Cornwall, Leigh Hunt, Wordsworth and Crabb Robinson were a few of the curious group of which Lamb's childlike genius and dominating personality made him the centre. His puns and pranks, his "large sense of the ludicrous and his small sense of the decorous" find many happy illustrations. From Russell St., Covent Garden, to Islington, Enfield, and finally to Edmonton, we follow Lamb's last footsteps, far away from the beloved London he never ceased regretting to the last days of his life. At Edmonton his body lies alongside of his unfortunate sister, to whom his life was one long sacrifice.

All these places are vividly described—and many, we are told, are still to be seen as they were nearly one hundred years ago.

Messrs. Charles Scribner's Sons are the publishers of this volume. It is rich in illustrations that are particularly in harmony with the subject and spirit of the book, while its value is further enhanced by a Lamb bibliography by E. D. North, the most complete yet compiled.

Out-of-Doors with Tennyson.

THE title at once suggests the sea and shore, the fens and moors, the trees and grasses, the birds and humming insects of "Merrie England." With nice hand Mr. E. S. Brooks has turned the pages of his Tennyson, and here and there pointed out verses which although "known by heart" on two continents, are always fresh and breezy, always full of help and cheer to those who quote them, and which lend themselves so readily to pictured illustration.

The same experienced compiler has also written an introduction to the volume prepared by D. Lothrop Co. as one of their holiday gift-books, which is full of keen appreciation of nature, as well as of the Laureate's conception of the beauties of her highways and byways. He points out that Tennyson's poems having the pastoral element are many and inspiring, and that Tennyson's glimpses of nature are such as put the life and glory of all out-of-doors into the reader's heart and hope. A born observer of physical nature, Tennyson is almost infallibly correct in his choice of the adjective he applies to a special object, or of the words in which he passingly alludes to some phenomenon.

Born in Somerby, in Lincolnshire, "a drowsy little nook among the wolds, pastoral and remote," Tennyson's boyish days were passed amid the Lincolnshire lanes and the Lincolnshire woods, while over the "long dun wolds" he could catch a glimpse of "crowded farms and lessening towers" and the distant heaving sea. In Lincolnshire he found many of the scenes and places made famous in his verse. Somerby Parish is the old-time village and estate

"Where Aylmer followed Aylmer at the Hall
And Averill Averill at the Rectory Thrice over,"

as we are told in "Aylmer's Field." Next to the Rectory, in which the poet was born more than eighty years ago, stood the old house familiar to us all as "The Moated Grange," and straight across Somerby Road cuts the very brook whose ripples are dear to thousands.

"I chatter, chatter as I flow,
To join the brimming river;
For men may come, and men may go,
But I go on forever."

"Maud" was evolved among the browns and greens of Holywell Glen; and the Maypole dancing regretted longingly by the dying "Queen of the May" was among the home sports near Somerby in the poet's youth. But not alone amid "the witch elms and towering sycamores" of quiet Somerby has Tennyson found inspiration. The happy villages of Kent, the crags of Cornwall, the Isle of Wight, and every spot he has visited live in his poems as well as the low dunes of Lincolnshire. It is this ability to make dear to others the hills, the woods, the streams and the fields among which his long life has been spent that places Alfred Tennyson in the first rank of English poets, and makes him loved by young and old men and women utterly incapable of understanding the fine mechanism of his versification.

From "Out-of-Doors with Trampers." (Copyright, 1890, by D. Locking Company.)

Extracts relating to "out-of-doors" have been made from thirty-three of Tennyson's best known poems, and these have been interspersed with many illustrations, making a large book bound in an original cover decorated in imitation of a church window. The frontispiece pictures the lines from "Enone :"

"On either hand

The lawns and meadow ledges mid-way down
Hang rich in flowers, and far below the warms
The long brook falling thro' the cloven ravine
In cataract after cataract to the sea."

Mr. Brooks' introduction, which is partly biographical, is interspersed with pictures of the birthplace of Tennyson, the old grammar school house at Louth, and several decorative bits of drawing. Specially pretty pictures are shown of "the mill pond" described in "The Miller's Daughter" of Maplethorpe, from "The Ode to Memory," of the May Queen, of the scene of "Tears, Idle Tears," that exquisite selection from "The Princess," and of the words that inspired "Maud."

The idea of the book is a very pretty one indeed, and should appeal to all lovers of Tennyson and of "out-of-doors."

Certain Sonnets by Sir Philip Sidney.

SIR PHILIP SIDNEY has left a name that will always be quoted when one desires an instance of that noble ideal, the English gentleman. Hero and idol of his day, "the jewel of the dominions" of Queen Elizabeth, "the greatest king that ever ruled in England," the nephew of the royal favorite, Earl of Leicester, he remained great and pure in his life, beautiful and elevated in his thoughts, with a reputation for learning, wisdom, valor and true knighthood that has remained untarnished through upwards of three centuries of discovery and investigation. He hated anything that was sordid and mean; his very faults we identify with the true, open sunshine character of the man. His brave father had taught two sons to love God and truth first, and then to be cheerful, saying to them, "You degenerate from your father if you find not yourself most able in wit and body to do anything when you be most merry."

For many years one of the most conspicuous figures at court, Sir Philip had but little time in his short life of thirty-two years to devote to literary work. His mind and heart were always full of poetic fancy. He wrote many occasional poems of great beauty, but the works by which he is best known were not published until after his death. He has added to English literature a large body of sonnets, and may almost be held the inventor of that form of poesy.

In 1580, when twenty-six years of age, he had the temerity to speak against the projected marriage of Queen Elizabeth with the Duke of Anjou, and retired from the court in consequence. During the next few years he executed most of his literary work, and left many writings that prove him one of the truest of English poets. His work has been neglected of late years, partly because his fame as statesman, soldier and courtier has appealed more strongly to the world than his merit as a singer.

Sir Philip Sidney and his much-loved sister, the Countess of Pembroke, spent the next few years on the countess' estate in Wilton. In the princely gardens they made a translation of the Psalms of David which has earned the praise of Ruskin; and here, after that work was finished, Sidney still lingered, and wrote for his sister the "Arcadia," on which his fame as writer chiefly rests. He wrote it on loose sheets, seldom stopping to review them. They were handed to his sister, who mislaid some and lost some, as neither brother nor sister ever planned to have them made into a book. It was four years after his death before the "Arcadia" was published; and some one has said that Sidney was not loved and admired for his "Arcadia" so much as the book was loved and admired for its author. It is a prose romance of high-flown sentiment and intricate adventure. The scene is laid in Greece. Innumerable characters act and speak in this great poetic land, but the buoyancy of freshness of Sidney's style give a certain air of reality even to its most artificial scenes. The prose is interlaced with many pretty songs full of the rhythm and music for which the young poet was so justly celebrated, even among the many sweet singers of his time.

A selection of these verses from the "Countess of Pembroke's Arcadia" has been made by the Burrows Brothers as the text for their holiday book this season. George Wharton Edwards has made an accompaniment of drawings which have been reproduced in colored and tinted photo-gravures, and has also supplied many decorative bits and pretty head and tail pieces as settings for Sir Philip Sidney's gems.

The portrait of Sir Philip which we reproduce forms the frontispiece to a sumptuous volume.

The publishers have been generous in all the details of bookmaking. Clear type, a large page, thick, rich paper, and a delicate cloth binding, with a pretty scroll-work design in gilt, have all been lavished upon the book they make attractive. The Messrs. Burrows must earn the thanks and deserve the practical recognition of many buyers of this volume, which we do not overrate in saying it is a worthy successor of their beautiful "Lorna Dorne" of last season.

Some Dainty Books

DAINTY editions of old literary favorites were found last year to be among the most popular souvenirs of the happy Christmas season. The refinement and elegance of their dress, the certainty of entertainment within their covers, and the moderate expenditure needed to become the possessor of any one of the pretty dainty volumes, made them eagerly sought for by cultured people. This season a new collection of classics, in prose and poetry, is claiming attention in many dainty variations of white and blue, and gray and gold and silver.

The Cameo Edition (Scribner), so much admired in its issues of "Ik Marvel's" works, has placed its stamp upon two classics in fiction—"Old Creole Days," by G. W. Cable, and "In Ole Virginia," by T. N. Page. Though lacking the endorsement of age, there is no uncertainty about the critic's verdict upon these fascinating collections of dialect tales. They both give entertaining and lasting shape to phases in American life now fast passing away, and move to tears as readily by their pathos as they excite mirth by their quaint humor. Percy Moran and W. L. Sheppard each furnish a small characteristic etching, as frontispieces. The wide margin and narrow page notable in the first volumes of the Cameo Edition are preserved.

Daintily delicate and artistic is a little com-

The successors to Oliver Wendell Holmes' "Autocrat of the Breakfast-Table," so warmly welcomed last year, are "The Professor at the Breakfast-Table" and "The Poet at the Breakfast-Table," each in two small volumes, uniform with the "Autocrat" (Houghton). These new volumes of the Birthday Edition complete the famous breakfast-table series, and offer to the thousand admirers of Dr. Holmes, in the most charmingly readable form one could imagine, the best things he has ever written. His sunny philosophy and keen wit brighten every page of these pretty books. Mrs. Henry Whitman again furnishes graceful decorative title-pages.

compilation of bright, pithy sayings from the literary fields of the past and present, which comes to us under the name of "In and Out of Book and Journal." It is difficult to decide which to admire the most, the cleverness with which Dr. Roberts has culled his aphorisms, or the skill with which Mr. S. W. Van Schaick has illustrated them. The designs, run in with the text in the French style, are unusually spirited and strongly individual. (Lippincott.)

The blue and gold uniform of that established favorite, The Knickerbocker Nuggets Series (Putnam), is displayed on several new volumes. "Love Poems of Three Centuries" (2 v.), compiled by Jessie F. O'Donnell, and covering the period from 1590 to 1890, comprises specimens of the love poetry of all nations, and is especially rich in exquisitely tender sonnets the early English poets knew so well how to write. "Representative Irish Stories" (2 v.) is a selection of the prose tales of modern Irish life. W. B. Yeats, who is the editor and also the writer of the interesting introductions and notes which accompany each tale, says, "If you would know Ireland, body and soul, you must read its poems and stories." A part of this literature is offered in these two little books. "French Ballads," printed in the original text, and edited by Prof. T. F. Crane, furnishes many piquant specimens of the much-admired Chansons Populaires de la France. The second series of Literary Gems (Putnam)—tiny books bound in flexible covers of full morocco, and each with a tiny photogravure frontispiece—embraces a half-dozen brief literary classics, namely: "The Nibelungen Lied," by Thomas Carlyle; "The King of the Golden River," by John Ruskin; "The Science of History," by James Anthony Froude; "Sonnets from the Portuguese," by Elizabeth B. Browning; "The School for Scandal," by Richard Brinsley Sheridan; and "Nothing to Wear," by William Allen Butler. In line with this collection, but in paper covers and of more modest pretensions, is a very tasteful series, Liliput Classics, (Houghton), ten little volumes, including the best and most widely popular stories, essays and poems of ten famous authors—as, for instance, Dickens' "Christmas Carol," Shakespeare's "Sonnets," Goldsmith's "Deserted Village," and so on.

The success won by "Lucie," the initial volume of the Vignette Series (Stokes), will not be forfeited by the additions to the series. Tennyson's "Princess," Goethe's "Faust," (in Anster's translation), and Moore's "Lalla Rookh," offer quite a latitude of choice. Any one of the beautiful little volumes ought to please the most fastidious taste, either from a literary or an artistic standpoint. The half-tone engravings which adorn them are after designs made expressly for the works by McIlvaine, Charles Howard Johnson and others. They are generally set in the text in French style, and are of various sizes and of many odd shapes. "Legends and Lyrics," from the poetic works of John Greenleaf Whittier, and "Pastorals, Lyrics and Sonnets," from Wordsworth, are new volumes in the White and Gold Series (Houghton). They are artistically printed, and delicately pretty in smooth cloth bindings. The popular style of the selection of the contents of the books of this series has found for them a wide appreciation as Christmas gifts.

Library Editions of Standard Fiction.

THACKERAY's well-known opinion of novels, that "all people with healthy literary appetites love them—almost all women, and a vast number of clever hard-headed men"—may be encouragingly recalled at the present time. When we have come to the end of our resources in gift-buying, and have culled the choicest of the regulation holiday books, and still remember many dear and valued friends unprovided with loving testimonies of our affection, let us turn to the novels, and see what may be done in that line. To many, fiction is still an unexplored country. Surely one cannot go far astray in buying one or the other of the new editions of Reade, Dickens and Scott, or some one favorite novel of George Sand, Dumas, Daudet or other of the best French writers. A specialty is now being made of good library editions of novels that one's education is scarcely completed without having read. No matter to which member of the family such books are given, all share in the pleasure alike, and they become an infallible antidote for many dark and unhappy hours.

For the first time a new uniform edition of Charles Reade's novels is offered in sixteen volumes (De Wolfe, F.). There were few social questions to which Reade's masterly art did not force the world to give its profoundest thoughts. In his death it mourned one of the greatest of the English novelists of the present generation. For the long winter evenings nothing more absorbing could be recommended than "Very Hard Cash," "Cloister and the Hearth," "Christie Johnstone" or "Peg Woffington." The edition of which we speak is from new electrotypes plates, and is printed with great care on fine English-finish linen paper, and is extremely handsome. Each volume contains a full-page etching, and the binding is substantial and tasteful.

The Tavistock Edition of Charles Dickens' works is now complete (Lippincott), making one of the best editions at a popular price ever offered. The volumes are "ramos," the type large and clear, and the illustrations the original ones of Cruikshank, "Phiz" and others, printed from the original steel plates. The thirty volumes embrace all the delightful stories and sketches that have enthralled the world. Dickens always seems an especially appropriate present for Christmas; he is so associated with this season through his stories, and through the warm human nature that pervades his writings. Another new set of Dickens (Brentano's), in fifteen volumes, also a duodecimo in size, and with excellent illustrations, is well worth examining. The Roslyn Edition of the Waverley novels (Brentano's) is printed from entirely new plates, showing clear, readable type, good paper and substantial bindings (25 v.).

"Lorna Doone," Blackmore's celebrated novel of the "Doones" of West Devonshire, appears in a new authorized American edition, with a preface written especially for it by the author, in which, among other good things, he says: "This Lorna visits you not thus by force of savage ravishers, but under escort of gentle men, fair knights of the Order of Copyright." The story is in three small volumes, and is to be known as the Exmoor Edition (Putnam). The work is a beautiful specimen of printing from the Knickerbocker Press, a narrow page on creamy-tinted paper, with uncut edges, and wide margins. Another edition of "Lorna Doone" in one volume (Harper) is very nicely illustrated, has a new preface in verse written for it by Mr. Blackmore, and an appendix describing "The Home of the Doones." The Special Limited Edition of "Lorna Doone" (Burrows Bros.) in 2 v. is described under "Holiday Gift-Books." The New Library Edition of Smollett's novels (Routledge) in six volumes is reasonable in price and most attractive in appearance.

The edition that is being printed of Dumas' novels has been enriched this year with the five works (in 12 v.) forming the Marie Antoinette romances (Little, B.). This is one of the most important as well as one of the most entertaining series of the famous romances of the elder Dumas. Beginning in "The Memoirs of a Physician," with the entrance of Marie Antoinette into France, the successive works trace her career through the last days of the reign of Louis XV.

and throughout the French Revolution, closing with her death. "The Queen's Necklace," "Ange Pitou," "Le Comtesse De Charny" and "Chevalier De Maison-Rouge" are the other volumes. For two seasons, heretofore, readers have rejoiced in a carefully edited and unabridged presentation of Dumas' thrilling stories. The offering for this season is the richest yet prepared. Fine historical portraits and pictures illustrate the volumes. The constantly increasing interest in the best French literature is further evidenced in a handsome new edition, newly translated (Dodd, M.), of George Sand's "Gallant Lords of Bois Doré" (2 v.), a delightful picture of the manners, ideas and mode of life of the French nobility resident upon their estates in the first half of the seventeenth century; and in "Nanon," a charming tale, also by George Sand, translated by Miss Elizabeth Wormeley Latimer, the translator of Balzac, and issued in the lovely half Russia red bindings so much admired in the Balzac (Roberts).

With "Kings in Exile" (Routledge) is completed one of the most beautiful editions of Daudet to be obtained in this country. The exquisite manner in which these volumes are printed and illustrated make it a positive pleasure just to handle them. "Romola" (Estes; Porter & C.) and "Jane Eyre" (Crowell), which come under the heading of this department are described at length in the front pages.

The series of old Spanish Romances, published by Worthington, may be mentioned here. It includes "Don Quixote," "Lazarillo de Tormes" by Mendoza, "Asmodeus," "Gil Blas," "The Bachelor of Salamanca" and "Vanillo Gonzales," all masterpieces of Le Sage.

Art-Works—Photogravures and Fine Color Printing.

THIS year, even more than last, are we confronted with the difficulty of adequately presenting the larger and more important art-works. While the size of many of these volumes seems to rule them out of our modest pages, it is the art methods used in their illustrations which are the unsurmountable obstacles. Photogravures and fine color plates, however beautiful and artistic, do not adapt themselves easily to reproduction. And as these processes, excepting in a very few important instances, have superseded wood-engraving our pages have been shorn necessarily of much of their old-time brilliancy in the way of an almost prodigal illustration of the leading Christmas gift-books. This department is designed to gather together and give prominence to just such works as we allude to. The fact that no specimen illustration is offered from any one of them does not mean that they are lacking in beautiful pictures. The truth is often just the contrary—some of the more artistic and more profusely illustrated works of the season finding place here.

The many elegant volumes of etchings so conspicuously abundant last season are notable this year through their absence. Photogravure has been used most extensively in reproducing etchings, water-colors, paintings in oil, pen-and-ink sketches and pencil drawings—colors and tints being employed almost universally in the printing. But there is not a single important collection of etchings.

"A Mosaic," photogravure reproductions of pictures painted by members of the Artists' Fund Society of Philadelphia, and edited by Harrison S. Morris, with appropriate text in poetry and prose (Lippincott), ranks easily among the very best books of the season. The extreme care shown in the selection of pictures, the fine literary taste characterizing the text, and the exquisite finish of paper, printing and binding, place the volume far above the mere ephemeral productions sent out to catch the eye of holiday buyers. The pictures represent the best work of each artist contributing, and are in their entirety most restful to mind and sight. The many charming pastoral and domestic views included betray the keen poetical instincts of the editor, Mr. Harrison S. Morris, one of the best-known and most warmly admired of our younger circle of poets.

A companion volume to that remarkably successful collection of last season, "Fac-similes of Aquarelles by American Artists," is offered in "Some American Painters in water-colors" (Stokes). It is a large folio, like the former work with eight wonderful pictures in imitation of water-colors. "A Late Arrival," by William T. Smedley, "Girl with Flowers," by Rosina Emmet Sherwood, "Margaret," by Leon Moran, "Newly Fallen Snow," by Walter L. Palmer, "A Yale-Harvard Race," by James M. Barnsley, "The Pet Gazelle," by J. L. Jerome Ferris, and "Little Wide-Awake," by Maud Humphrey, are their titles and subjects. In connection with each fac-simile is an interesting text by Ripley Hitchcock, illustrated with a portrait of the artist and reproduction of a black-and-white sketch by the artist—specimens of which we show at the beginning and end of this article. The brilliancy of this work, and the extreme elegance of it, mechanical details, lend it a special interest. "XXIV. Bits of Vers de Société" (Stokes), edited by Frederick A. Stokes, is, like the former, a representative American art-work. H. W. McVickar's designs in water-color appear in fac-simile. Dainty verses by Dobson, Praed and Suckling, with twelve plates of female figures in modern costumes are made to illustrate the months of the year.

"The Golden Flower" (Prang) is a most beautiful example of color-printing. It is a glorification of the largest and newest specimens of the chrysanthemum. As they are offsprings of a celebrated Japanese variety, the work is strongly Japanese in its minor art details.

The coloring deserves the highest praise. The studies rival nature in gracefulness, delicacy variety and richness of hues. A limited edition of "A Complete Collection of Randolph Caldecott's Contributions to the London Graphic" (Routledge), printed in colors by Edmund Evans, illustrates the best work of a favorite artist, and is also an example of English color-printing. Frank O. Small makes Robert Browning's "Saul" a subject for illustration (Prang). His designs, reproduced in photogravure, fill a large folio volume. "Recent European Art" is a selection of photo-etchings of the best paintings of Europe's noted modern artists (Estes). "Goupil's Gallery of Great War Paintings" embraces ten of Goupil et Cie's famous photogravures of recent Salon war pictures (Estes). An English text edition is in the market of "Goupil's Paris Salon of 1890" (Estes). Its beautiful predecessor of last year was so successful that the publishers have determined to offer this as an annual volume, illustrating year by year the best of contemporaneous French art. All the successful pictures of this year's Salon are reproduced in photogravure. "Gems of Art" is a miscellaneous collection of photogravures (Camell), and "Classical Picture Gallery" (Lippincott) gives, through the same medium, nearly a hundred and fifty of the choicest examples from the picture galleries and private collections of Europe. "Gems of Art from the Metropolitan Museum" (Nims & Knight) leads us into familiar scenes. Twelve original paintings by Jerome, Vibert, Dupré, Bougercau and others are artistically represented. "Gems of American Art" (Nims & Knight) is a companion volume of distinctively American paintings.

Other Holiday Gift-Books.

THE preceding pages describe and illustrate in detail several of the most notable of the holiday books. The following is a more complete descriptive summary, covering the general field, and noting the new books and some of the standards of the several publishers, arranged in their alphabetical order. To them we are indebted for the many illustrations which adorn these pages and suggest more fully the books of the year.

HENRY ALTEMUS, Philadelphia, has his usual endless variety of Family, Pulpit and Reference Bibles, both in the "Old" King James Version with Revised New Testament appended, and also in the new Parallel Edition with "Old" and "New" versions in parallel columns. They have also very reasonable editions of Bunyan's "Pilgrim's Progress;" Tennyson's "Idyls of the King;" Coleridge's "Rime of the Ancient Mariner;" Doré's "Bible Gallery;" and Milton and Dante, with the Doré illustrations. Photograph Albums of every size, style and price that can be imagined are also ready to tempt those looking for bargains in their Christmas shopping.

THE AMERICAN SUNDAY-SCHOOL UNION have a new edition of the late Rev. Dr. Richard Newton's "Illustrated Rambles in Bible Lands," which always makes a most appropriate Christmas gift for a Sunday-school teacher or scholar. It is printed on plate paper and bound in attractive style, and makes a pleasing appearance among Christmas gifts. Dr. Newton loved his subject, and will always make his readers love it too.

D. APPLETON & Co. have among their late publications several volumes from which a good selection can be made for holiday presents. Two notable books of travel by Frank Vincent are "Around and About South America," twenty months of quest and query, and "In and Out of Central America," sketches and studies of travel; and other books packed with information about certain parts of the world at certain times of its history are "A Naturalist's Voyage Around the World," a new illustrated edition of the journal of researches into the natural history and geology of the countries visited during the voyage round the world of H. M. S. Beagle, kept by Charles Darwin; and "The Ice Age of North America," by Prof. G. Frederick Wright, who treats of the bearings of the ice age upon the antiquity of man, and includes an appendix on the probable cause of glaciation, by Warren Upham. The last two volumes have just been issued of Lecky's "History of England in the Eighteenth Century," and this great work in eight volumes is a most valuable one. The third volume is also now ready of McMaster's "History of the People of the United States from the Revolution to the Civil War," a most important work, which will be completed in five volumes. Bancroft's "History of the United States," complete in six volumes, also makes a royal gift. Lovers of poetry can be delighted with "Fifty Perfect Poems," the collection of acknowledged English and American masterpieces, made by Charles A. Dana and Rosseter Johnson, handsomely illustrated and bound in silk, or with "English Odes" and "English Lyrics," selected by Edmund W. Gosse and made beautiful with innumerable head and tail pieces by Louis Rhead. The five volumes included in "The Music Series," consisting of biographical and anecdotal sketches of the great German, Italian and French composers, great violinists and pianists, and great singers also look very tempting in their neat white and red cloth or half-calf bindings; and "Jules Breton's Autobiography" cannot fail to interest all students of painting. A very pretty illustrated book is made of Richard Malcolm Johnstone's "Widow Guthrie," a charming picture of life in Georgia sixty years ago, full of delightful humor and clever character drawing.

A. C. ARMSTRONG & SON this year offer the fourth work in the very valuable "History of Ancient Art" they are bringing out in this country. This great history by George Perrot and Charles Chipiez is one of the most important contributions of modern times to the literature of art and archaeology. As it progresses its value becomes more and more apparent. In it we have, from scholars of the first rank, the results, in digested form, of the extensive contributions of knowledge made by Layard, Rawlinson, Loftus, George Smith, Lenormant, Maspero, Oppert, and a host of other distinguished laborers in that field. The new addition in two volumes covers "Art in Sardinia, Judea, Syria and Asia Minor." The former very successful volumes dealt respectively with "Ancient Egypt," "Chaldea and Assyria," and "Phoenicia." The third series of "The Bookworm" is also ready—an illustrated treasury of old-time literature tastefully printed in old style on antique paper, with numerous pictures, presenting stores of information to its readers on out-of-the-way literature, scarce books, first editions, unique copies and their present value, great libraries, and nearly every conceivable topic relating to books, and the twelfth volume of the Book-lovers' Library, in which Mr. Hazlitt offers "Studies in Jocular Literature," treating his subject from the point of view of a philosopher and student. The Cabinet Editions of "Wordsworth" and "Shakespeare" are also on hand in various styles of binding, and make acceptable Christmas presents of lasting value. Prof. J. H. Rein's valuable works on "Japan Travels and Researches" and "The Industries of Japan" in new editions, are among the most important publications of this house.

A. S. BARNES & Co. have in "Three Germanies," by ex-United States Minister Theodore S. Fay, a work which will make a most valuable gift for a friend's library. During the fourteen years of the author's residence abroad Germany changed from a confederation of little states to one of the great empires of Europe, and Mr. Fay has described the details of this political transformation very happily. The work is in two handsome volumes. Mrs. Lamb's "History of New York City" is always a gift of enduring value. James Monteith's "School and Family Atlas of the World" would also delight many people, with its 86 pages of illustrations, its splendid maps, printed from copper plates, beautifully colored, and its latest news about the newest States, whose history is still rather vague in the minds of most of the inhabitants of the other States.

THE BURROWS BROTHERS Co. have a holiday edition of "Certain Sonnets of Sir Philip Sidney," selected from his "Arcadia," a full description of which appears in our front pages. They also have a special limited edition in two volumes of Blackmore's "Lorna Doone," bound in levant morocco, with portfolio containing an extra proof set of all the full-page illustrations, mounted on card-board, and a photogravure reproduction of a picture of the heroine, painted for this edition only. This edition is limited to 250 sets. The regular edition has a new box specially made for the two volumes, with a new cover design and every attraction that can be imagined to make it taking at first sight. The sumptuous edition in one volume, issued last season, is also again to be had. The story has already made so secure a place for itself in our literature that words of praise for the author's work are unnecessary, and the publishers have put it into a shape in which it ought to be a favorite Christmas book.

THE CASSELL PUBLISHING COMPANY have made a handsome book of an historical and pictorial description of "The Rivers of Great Britain," illustrated with numerous highly finished engravings from original drawings. This large volume only includes the rivers of the east coast of England. They are described with enthusiasm, and the book gives beautiful pictures of beautiful England and the rivers which have been made celebrated by the songs of her sweetest singers. Their "Magazine of Art" for 1890 is the tenth volume of the New England series. It contains about 500 illustrations, introducing litho and tint plates and photogravures, the American "Art Notes" for the year, and many special papers devoted to the progress of American art and industries. As always, it can be had in its regular cloth dress and also in its full morocco holiday costume. Special attention has been given to the preparation of handsome editions of books which may now be said to rank as classics in almost all spoken languages, some of which were already on their list. Mr. Saintsbury has made new translations of Prosper Mérimée's "Chronicle of the Reign of Charles IX," and Balzac's "The Chouans." Mérimée's history of the French land and people from 1550 to 1574, although in the form of romance, gives a vivid and accurate picture of the times. It is illustrated with 110 engravings on wood, from drawings by Edouard Toudouze. "The Chouans" has 100 engravings on wood, by Léveillé, from drawings by Julien Le Blant. "Othello" is the volume ready in The International Shakespeare. This is illustrated by Frank Dicksee, and is a beautiful specimen of what promises to be the most superb edition of Shakespeare ever published. "Curious Creatures in Zoölogy," by John Ashton, shows 130 illustrations of all sorts of curious formations, from centaurs to bearded women. McAllister's "Society As I Have Found It," although ridiculed by many, is wanted by all, and can be had in the plain edition and also in the édition de luxe, in which some years hence it will remain a characteristic record of a special phase of life in 1890.

THE CENTURY CO. have in the imposing "Autobiography of Joseph Jefferson" one of the most valuable contributions to contemporary stage life, which during its serial course in the Century Magazine attracted enthusiastic admiration. We describe it in detail in our front pages, and feel confident that it will be one of the most popular holiday books, sure to delight those all over the world who for many years have loved the dear old actor, Joseph Jefferson. Bound volumes of the Century Magazine, and subscriptions for the coming year, always make rich and highly appreciated Christmas gifts.

T. Y. CROWELL & Co. have prepared a sumptuous two-volume edition of Charlotte Brontë's "Jane Eyre," illustrated with forty-eight engravings by Andrew, and printed on fine paper, of which we give a full description in our front pages. Another always welcome old friend, Thomas Hughes' "Tom Brown's School-Days," has also been embellished with fifty-three engravings by Andrew, some full-page, others scattered through the familiar text. Of this there will be various editions, including an édition de luxe, limited to 250 numbered copies, printed on large paper, with mounted Japan proofs of the illustrations. An interesting book, combining much well-given information with many amusing anecdotes, is Mrs. M. Carey's translation from the French of the "Narrative of Captain Coignet (soldier of the Empire), 1776-1850," edited from the original manuscript by Loredon Larchey, with illustrations by J. Le Blant. It is the record of the daily doings of a private soldier in the great campaigns of the great Napoleon, who by his graphic portraiture makes the Napoleonic days live again. This is brought out in two styles of binding, and cannot fail to interest all lovers of history and adventure. The same class of readers will learn with pleasure that an illustrated limited edition of Bourrienne's "Memoirs of Napoleon Bonaparte" can be had this year at a great reduction. This firm make a specialty of excellent translations of standard foreign fiction, which can be used to advantage as gift-books. A publication showing originality of plan is an autograph-book compiled by Elizabeth A. Allen, under the title "Gold Nails to Hang Memories On." From English Christian names, those in most common use have been selected, and under John, William, Margaret or Catherine are collected references to the life, work or influence of a few of the celebrated Johns, Williams, etc., of the world. The references are in rhyme, to aid memory, and are chiefly quotations from known authors, though the capable compiler has written many of them, when better material than her own was not available. Spaces are left for autographs under every name.

DE WOLFE, FISKE & Co. have had the happy idea of making a handsome uniform edition, in sixteen volumes, of the "Works of Charles Reade," printed from new type on fine paper, with a full-page etching in every volume by C. A. Walker. The binding is rich in design and durable in workmanship, and the set will make a very valuable addition to library shelves. They have also several new additions to the gems gift-book, "Longfellow Gems" and "Tennyson Gems" each consist of six reproductions of etchings by W. Goodrich Beal, illustrating extracts from the poets' works, and giving portraits of the authors; "Whittier Gems" are made up of extracts and twelve illustrations by L. K. Harlow; and in "Halcyon Days" they offer an original poem by Cymeon Tucker Clarke, illustrated by Lena J. Ringueberg and F. Schuyler Mathews. All these are gotten up in cloth bindings or in antique paper tied with ribbons. Dr. Newell's three ocean romances, "The Wreck of the Grayhound," "The Voyage of the Fleetwing," and "The Isle of Palms," which have met with hearty appreciation from lovers of strong, correctly written sea-stories, are again ready in bright covers for a new successful season. The author is an old sailor, and speaks as one who has seen of the trials and delights of an ill-used fore-castle boy, of the dare-devil harpooner, and also of the responsibilities of the captain of a large whaling ship. A thread of romance runs through these stories of healthy and exciting adventure, and makes them pleasing to stay-at-home women readers as well as to excitement-craving men.

DODD, MEAD & Co. always cater with success for a cultivated and literary taste in planning publications for the holiday season. "Halévy's "Abbé Constantin," with Madeleine Lemaire's illustrations, their artistic triumph of last year, has now a companion volume in the same author's "A Marriage for Love," with twenty-three full-page illustrations by Wilson de Meza, reproduced in photogravures of exquisite tone and finish. The édition de luxe is uniform with the quarto edition of last year's book, and in every detail worthy to be placed by its side. Austin Dobson has written a "Mémorial of Horace Walpole" specially for this house, which is now ready, in a limited édition de luxe printed at the De Vinne press from type, on handsome linen and Japan paper, and illustrated with eleven etchings by Percy Moran. Only 479 copies have been printed, and English as well as American connoisseurs must be on the alert to obtain one ere it is too late. The same talented writer has had his poem, "The Sun-Dial," chosen for illustration by George Wharton Edwards, who has decorated it with many sketches reproduced in photogravure, and also with many artistic pen-and-ink drawings showing poetic imagination and trained skill. It makes a handsome art-book in which both poet and artist teach valuable truth. The binding is appropriate and striking. An édition de luxe on Japan paper, limited to fifty copies, will have the additional value of a special design signed by the artist. Still another labor of Austin Dobson's, which appears in a dainty book, is entitled "Four Frenchwomen," and is composed of essays on Mademoiselle de Corday, Madame Roland, the Princess de Lamballe, and Madame de Genlis. It is dedicated to Brander Matthews. A book of great interest to collectors of curious information is ready in "The Devil's Picture-Books," in which Mrs. John King Van Rensselaer gives a history of playing-cards, called "devil's books" by the Puritans and other pious souls. Many learned men have written books and treatises on playing-cards, most of which are now out of print and difficult to obtain. Mrs. Rensselaer has brought into small compass the principal facts they contain, and her matter has been put into a handsome book with sixteen full-page plates in colors, and numerous illustrations in black and white. George Sand's delightful picture of the manners, ideas and mode of life of the French nobility resident on their estates in the first half of the seventeenth century, given in "The Gallant Lords of Bois Doré," has been put into English by Steven Clovis, and brought out in a neat two-volume library edition. A thread of thrilling personal adventure is interwoven with this historical web, and appeals to lovers of romance as well as of history; and her "Mare au Diable" (The Haunted Pool), translated by Frank Hunter Potter, has fourteen etchings by Rudaux, and is a work of which the publishers are justly proud.

E. P. DUTTON & Co. make a very fine showing in holiday publications this year. Almost all the ideas and most of the text for their new art-books were made ready on this side of the Atlantic, but the color printing, that makes their work specially noticeable, was done at the celebrated factory of E. Nister, of Nuremberg. The combinations of American plan and German execution has proved an artistic success in the Dutton publications. "The Golden Treasury of Art and Song," edited by R. E. Mack, is made up of a selection of verses from English poets, illustrated in color by R. A. Bell by eighteen large plates of figures and landscapes. "Familiar London," by C. J. L'Estrange, has sketches in color by Allan Barraud, showing St. Paul's and Blackfriars Bridge, the Houses of Parliament, Westminster Bridge, Westminster Abbey, Nelson's Column, Royal Exchange, the Horse Guards, the Thames Embankment and other familiar sights of London; "Shakespeare and His Birthplace," by Emma Marshall, whose twenty-two pages of type are ornamented with pen-and-ink sketches, is made valuable by the color sketches of the poet's home and surroundings; and the latter has a companion volume in "Bunyan's Home," with text by the Rev. Dr. John Brown, and light appropriate colored sketches. Some exceedingly pretty souvenirs and birthday-books are on the list of this house, the most important of which are "Time's Footsteps," a family record-book, with one color picture, twelve monotype pages and thirty-seven pages decorated with pen and ink drawings; "The King's Highway," composed of daily hymns and texts for a month, with twelve full-page color pictures by Fred Hines, and twenty-eight illustrated type pages; "Year In, Year Out," a book of the months, with twelve colored plates by Walter Paget, and twenty-four pages with pen-and-ink drawings, with reference to the twelve months in the year, confined in a charming cover; "A Pathway of Flowers," an album for autographs and original and selected verses in many styles of binding; and "Golden Links," a lengthy illustrated birthday-book, with twelve color pages and fifty-two pages of decoration, type and spaces for signatures. Other selections are "From Leaf to Leaf" and "The Beautiful World," and a very pleasing little book has been made of Phillips Brooks' "Christmas Carol," with six colored and ten decorated type pages, tied with gold cord, and delicate in all its appointments.

"I BEG PARDON, MONSIEUR, BUT WHAT IS THE HORSE'S NAME?" (Reduced) from "A Marriage for Love." (Copyright, 1890, by Dodd, Mead & Co.)

ESTES & LAURIAT's fine edition of "Romola" is fully described in our front pages. Drake's "Pine-Tree Coast" describes and illustrates the peerless scenery, quaint old sea-ports and romantic story of more than two thousand miles of Maine coast. Believing that this coast is the future sanitarium of the nation, the author has devoted himself heart and hand to the portrayal of its attractions. The handsome book has 250 illustrations. Victor Hugo's "Hans of Iceland" has been admirably translated by Miss Abby Langdon Ager, and is published in an edition limited to 500 numbered copies. The work has, singularly enough, been often neglected in summing up Victor Hugo's works. It is now brought out with seventy-five illustrations by A. Demarest, consisting of photo-etchings, half-tone plates and wood-cuts, which really interpret the scenes so powerfully depicted by the youthful author. Among their many illustrated art-books, gotten up with taste and judgment, is a song or poem by Charles Re nich, called "Night Song," in which the poet suggests pictures to the artists' mind in almost every line. Sixteen illustrations for this little gem of literary art have been produced by the publishers' celebrated photographing process from paintings by Henry Sandham, and there are an equal number of pen-and-ink sketches accompanying the text of the song. It is printed on fine linen vellum paper, and, with its cover design by Ipsen, makes an imposing show among the gift-books of the year. In "Dreams of the Sea" have been collected choice selections from poets of many lands referring to the ever restless sea, and these have been illustrated with appropriate pictures printed in delicate tints, forming a pretty novelty, combining literary and artistic merit, and made an appropriate holiday souvenir by its deep religious sentiment. "The Goupil Gallery of Great War Paintings" contains ten famous photogravures executed from the most recent Salon war pictures, accompanied by biographical and descriptive text. It shows the work of P. L. Jazet, Jules Girardet, Paul Joseph Blanc, Jean Paul Laurens, Moreau de Tours, E. Barrias, and other painters of distinction in this special field. Flammarion's astronomical romance of "Urania," of which 140,000 copies were sold in France, has been translated by Mrs. Augusta Rice Stetson, a daughter of ex-Governor Rice, and is issued with the illustrations of De Breter, Myrbach and Gambord, who have grasped the great idea embodied in the story of the heavenly muse guiding through the celestial regions and teaching their sentiments with delicate art. Worthy of note also are "Sea Fairies," poems by Alfred Tennyson, illustrated by Taylor, St. John Harper and Thomas Moran; "Our Great Actors," a series of six fine water-color portraits of Edwin Booth, Salvini, Jefferson, Coquelin, Laurence Barrett and Henry Irving; and "Goupil's Paris Salon of 1890," with French and English text.

THE EXCELSIOR PUBLISHING HOUSE has a good line of books calculated to make readers pleasant companions capable of joining in all kinds of social amusements and occupations. Very acceptable to young men would be one or more of their different manuals on calisthenics, boxing, etiquette, letter-writing, games, rules for meetings, etc.

FORDS, HOWARD & HULBERT have several books that can be used to advantage in choosing Christmas presents for friends of literary tastes. Among them are Tourgée's new and, of course, powerful novel, "Murvale Eastman, Christian Socialist"; "Life and Times of Sir Philip Sidney" and "Norway Nights and Russian Days," both by Mrs. S. M. H. Davis; Van Dyke's "Stories of Southern California"; and Gooch's "Face to Face with the Mexicans." Henry Ward Beecher's works are also on the list of this firm, and they have one perennially welcome gift-book in Bryant's "Library of Poetry and Song."

FUNK & WAGNALLS have a book which ought to be much sought after. Edwin Arnold's "The Light of the World" is published by them, with an introduction by Richard Henry Stoddard, and annotations which are the joint work of the author and an expert in Oriental literature. The book is illustrated with reproductions of Hoffman's celebrated paintings. An indication of the widespread interest awakened by the promise of this book is indicated by the fact that the publishers of a leading daily paper offered $5000 for the privilege of printing it from the original manuscript in the hands of the American publishers prior to its appearance in book form—an offer promptly refused. Another book at present absorbing attention is "In Darkest England and the Way Out," which is eagerly discussed by lovers of their fellowmen the world over. It discloses a scheme of General Booth's, of the Salvation Army, by which he thinks the lives of the poor throughout the world could be ameliorated. The scheme presupposes a capital of $5,000,000, but the author feels satisfied this can be raised, and subscriptions towards it are already flowing in on English soil. A new book by "Josiah Allen's Wife" is always sure to have a fund of earnest thought underlying its whole-souled humor. "Samantha Among the Brethren" is a protest against the decision of the General Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church in 1889 respecting the admission of women as delegates to that body.

L. R. HAMERSLY & Co. have a book that will be received with delight by any old soldier fortunate enough to get it into his possession in "The Colonel's Christmas Dinner," a collection of stories of military adventure, all having reference to the holiday season, which are supposed to be told over the walnuts and wine at a dinner given by the Colonel of the regiment. The stories are contributed by eleven different writers, but they have all received a final editorial touch from Captain Charles King.

GOOSE FALLS, CAPE ROGER.

From "The Pine Tree Coast." (Copyright, 1890, by Estes & Lauriat.)

HARPER & BROS. have been very fortunate in their selection of holiday matter, and have worked it into several volumes that promise to stand out prominently among the publications prepared for the Christmas market. "Christmas in Song, Sketch and Story," with selections from Beecher, Wallace, Auerbach, Abbott, Warren and Dickens, and illustrations from Raphael, Murillo, Bouguereau, Hoffman, Defregger, Story, Shepard, Darley, Meade Nast and others, all chosen and arranged by J. P. McCaskey, compiler of the "Franklin Square Song Collection," is edited with taste and judgment. A Selection from the Sonnets of William Wordsworth, with numerous illustrations by Alfred Parsons, is a gem of bookmaking to which we also have called special attention in the preceding pages. Another handsome royal octavo gift-book, bound ornamentally and appropriately, is the volume written and illustrated by Hamilton Gibson and published with the alluring title of "Strolls by Starlight and Sunshine." Of artistic interest also is Laurence Hutton's "Curiosities of the American Stage," with copious and characteristic illustrations—a volume that will certainly not go begging. "Port Tarascon: the last adventures of the illustrious Tartarin," Daudet's brilliant story, which has been eagerly watched for from month to month as it took its happy course through Harper's Magazine, is now ready in book form. Mr. James' perfect translation has made known to Americans the antics of the most amusing creature that modern French literature has produced. No man with sense of humor and insight into the little weaknesses of his fellowmen can fail to be pleased if given a copy of the pretty book which describes this simple, affable, imaginative, excitable, and, it must be admitted, amazingly ignorant lot of people in the south of France. Pictures abound, all from the pens of noted

French illustrators. The book is exquisitely printed and tastefully bound. It will take high stand among books peculiar to the holiday season. "The Tsar and His People" is a very handsomely gotten-up book describing the social life of Russia, written by the Vicomte Eugène Melchior de Vogüé. It is copiously illustrated and beautifully bound in a yellow cloth cover ornamented by the arms of Russia in their proper colors. "Modern Ghosts," the latest addition to the exquisite Odd Number Series, and the previous volumes one and all are just the thing to present to friends of cultured literary taste. As a present always welcome, no one can do better than to subscribe for a friend to a good magazine, and Harper's Magazine for 1891 will of course be fully up to its usual high standard.

HENRY HOLT & Co. have in Thomas Sergeant Perry's "History of Greek Literature" a work of great value to general readers, who have as yet no exhaustive knowledge of the literature which lies at the foundation of the literatures of all civilized countries. The shape in which Mr. Perry offers his diligent research and practical power of selection is very attractive, and the publishers have been generous in making a handsome book of his excellent material. The volume is fully illustrated with reproductions of classic pictures of the heroes and heroines of classic Greek literature and art. Lady Brassey's travels described in "Around the World in the Yacht Sunbeam," "Sunshine and Storm in the East," and "In the Trades, the Tropics and the Roaring Forties" are full of experience and anecdote interesting to those who have been or intend going over the parts of the earth's surface which she traversed by sea and land, and in the new editions make attractive-looking volumes. There is also a new edition of "Famous Single and Fugitive Pieces," edited by Rosseter Johnson.

"SIZ I, MARRIED LIFE IS THE HAPPIEST LIFE IN MY OPINION."

From "Samantha Among the Brethren." (Copyright, 1890, by Funk & Wagnalls.)

HOUGHTON, MIFFLIN & Co.'s principal holiday books, "The Song of Hiawatha" and Hawthorne's "Our Old Home," are fully described in our front pages. A pretty, simple edition of Lowell's beautiful poem, "The Vision of Sir Launfal," has been brought out with eight photogravure illustrations from designs by Edmund H. Garrett, and a portrait of Mr. Lowell representing him in middle life. The portrait is a beautiful one from a crayon by Page, and the illustrations have the rare excellence of being wholly in sympathy with the spirit of the poem. The new edition of Mr. Lowell's famous poem, "A Fable for Critics," ought also to attract attention, both for the form in which it has been brought out, and also on account of its containing outline portraits of the authors whom Mr. Lowell introduced and criticised with such wit and discrimination. Those who are so fortunate as to have the Birthday Edition of the "Autocrat of the Breakfast-Table," published last year, will be glad that they can now procure in the same tasteful and simple style both the "Professor" and the "Poet." The entire series of six volumes constitutes an unusually attractive gift, both in the external appearance and in the literary quality of the work. Dr. Holmes' contribution of essay, story, reflection and poetry, which has been delighting the readers of the Atlantic Monthly under the title of "Over the Tea-cups," is ready in book form, and will make a much appreciated addition to shelves already enriched by the volumes of the Autocrat, Professor and Poet, for it is virtually a sequel to the unique Breakfast-Table Series. It would be difficult to find a more valuable and satisfactory gift than the new Riverside Edition of the "Complete works of James Russell Lowell," to which we call special attention. New volumes of poetry deserving of mention are Stuart Sterne's Italian story-poem, "Piero da Castiglione;" Miss Edith Thomas' little book, "The Inverted Torch;" a touching volume, having the same theme as Tennyson's "In Memoriam;" a new volume of lyrical poems by Mrs. Mary E. Blake, entitled "Verses Along the Way;" and new editions, brought out in attractive form, of the Poems of Edna Dean Proctor, who has added to the poems previously published many not heretofore included; Nora Perry's handsome volume, comprising "After the Ball" and "Her Lover's Friend" (but not containing her "New Songs and Ballads"); Mr. Cranch's scholarly volume, "The Bird and the Bell, with other poems;" a new edition in a single volume of Mr. Lowell's famous "Biglow Papers;" a Family Edition of the world-famous story poem "Lucile;" two new volumes in the pretty White and Gold Series, containing "Legends and Lyrics" selected from Whittier's poems, and "Pastorals, Lyrics and Sonnets" selected from Wordsworth, and two books of sonnets, namely, "Representative Sonnets by American Authors," a library volume of excellent selections by Chas. H. Crandall, who has added some essays relating to the sonnet; and "American Sonnets," a smaller collection, admirably made by Col. Higginson and Mrs. E. H. Bigelow. Ten miniature volumes, called "Lilliput Classics," contain in attractive form complete poems, stories and sketches by the most famous authors. To the six Calendar Books published last year are now added bijou volumes containing selections from Browning and Mrs. Whitney.

W. R. JENKINS, who makes a specialty of carefully printed French novels, has this year holiday editions of Victor Hugo's great novels, "Les Misérables," "Notre Dame de Paris," "Les Travailleurs de la Mer" and "Quatre Vingt-Treize," very handsomely bound in calf, with many illustrations. Besides these there are ready such popular standards as Hector Malot's "Sans Famille," and About's "L'Homme à l'Oreille Cassée." This house is also the headquarters for veterinary text-books, which, to any one needing them, are always a very valuable gift.

LEE & SHEPARD's leading holiday book, "Summertime," with text and illustrations by Margaret MacDonald Pullman, is fully described in our front pages. The artist's former work, "Days Serene," has also again been made ready for a new lease of well-deserved popularity. Miss Jerome, whose name is identified with some of the most successful holiday books of the house, "In a Fair Country;" "One Year's Sketch Book;" "Nature's Hallelujah," etc., has this year designed and illuminated in missal style a little gem of dainty book-making called "From an Old Love Letter." In this work Miss Jerome tries a new style of art. Each page contains a quotation from the New Testament in ornamental setting, surrounded by an original design illuminated in colors and gold, the whole bound in the shape of a love-letter, with an ornamental seal on the cover. The Bible text makes it an especially appropriate Christmas gift. The ever-popular illustrated hymns are again ready to make it hard running for the newer favorites. As "Lovely Ivories;" "Royal Favorites;" "Dainty Miniatures;" or "Elegant Satin Florals," they show graceful, artistic exteriors, and their contents are of course some of the sweetest songs in the world. Text and covers are real, rich and satisfying. There are new editions of "The Wooing of Grandmother Grey," Kate Tannett Woods' success of last season; of "Baby's Kingdom," designed and illustrated by Annie F. Cox, in which may be chronicled, as memories for grown-up days, the mother's story of the progress of the baby, which has been made virtually a new book, by new additions of text and illustration; and of "The Guest-Book," by the same nice hand, in which may be recorded the coming and going of friends, and which contains pages for autographs, incidents and sketches pertaining to pleasant visits, social calls and other gatherings.

J. B. LIPPINCOTT Co. have at least six out-and-out new books which are of decidedly holiday appearance. "A Mosaic," a beautiful table-book prepared by the Artists' Fund Society of Philadelphia, and edited by Harrison P. Morris. Its twenty-two photogravure representations of pictures painted by the Society and its appropriate text in poetry and verse have already been mentioned elsewhere. Several of the poems of Mrs. M. B. M. Toland have already been published as illustrated gift books by this house. Her last poem, "Tisáyac of the Yosemite," is this year issued with illustrations by Boyle, Simon, Dielman, Sandham, and others, and an illustrated half-title by G. H. Low. Tisáyac is a spirit-maid, the guardian angel of a beautiful valley in the Yosemite. Another distinctively American book is Buchanan Read's "Sheridan's Ride," which has been illustrated with engravings on wood, from designs especially prepared for this edition. "English Poems," including such gems as Cooper's "Catharina" and "The Rural Walk," Scott's "The Last Minstrel," Brown's "The Lazy Mist," Crabbe's "A Sea Fog," Thompson's "Flocks and Herds," Shelley's "The Cloud," and many others selected with the same nice judgment, are issued in an oblong volume with etchings by M. M. Taylor; and there is an illustrated edition of "Ivanhoe" in colored ornamented covers, which will certainly tempt any one that sees it. One of the cutest publications of the season is "In and Out of Book and Journal," a little volume made up of an olla podrida gathered from every field of literature. They are mainly three and four line ingredients placed in the dainty dish without an effort at order or arrangement. A. Sidney Roberts, of the College of Physicians and Surgeons of Philadelphia, became inspired with the happy idea. Many pretty illustrations make the little book irresistible.

LITTLE, BROWN & Co. have this year added twelve new volumes to their handsome Library Edition of the world-famous romances of Alexander Dumas. These fascinating stories are in the present shape given unabridged, not one of the thrilling incidents of the original narratives being omitted, and careful comparison has been made of the translations with the original works. These twelve volumes cover the historical novels known as the "Marie Antoinette Romances," which begin with "The Memoirs of a Physician" and include "The Queen's Necklace," "Ange Pitou," "La Comtesse de Charny," and "Chevalier de Maison Rouge." They are famous as the most brilliant and impressive pictures of the life of French society before and during the revolution of 1789 that literature contains, whether they are studied by the critic for literary qualities or by the student for historical motives, expression and character. The neat get-up of this edition is now well known, and no one can go astray that buys a set of Dumas' romances for a friend. A musical friend will be made happy if a copy of the "Autobiography of Anton Rubinstein" is laid upon his Christmas table. This volume is translated from the Russian by Aline Delano, is terse and concise, and yet tells clearly the story of this great composer and piano virtuoso. "With Fire and Sword," the great Polish novel by Sienkiewicz, whose name is already famous, is now issued in a two-volume Library Edition which would delight the heart of a lover of history and literature. Jeremiah Curtin, who has accomplished the difficult task of translating this novel, has also prepared an original work on "Myths and Folk-Lore of Ireland," which would please the same class of friend beyond expectation.

LONGMANS, GREEN & Co. have several important books this season. William O'Brien's autograph edition of "When We Were Boys" gains added interest in view of the Irish statesman's coming visit to our shores. Theodore Roosevelt has written a vigorous and picturesque description of "New York" for the Historic Town Series, so ably edited by Edward A. Freeman and Rev. William Hunt. Entertaining views of English society are given in "Voces Populi," by F. Anstey, which is reprinted from Punch, and contains the original illustrations by J. Bernard Partridge; and Charles Ledyard Norton offers a suitable companion piece in "Political Americanisms," a distinctly novel study in the vocabulary of American politicians. Several excellent novels also deserve mention, among which the very best are "Micah Clarke" and "Captain of the Polestar," by A. Conan Doyle, "House of the Wolf," by Stanley J. Weyman, and "Snap: a legend of the Lone Mountain," by C. Phillipps Woolley, with illustrations by H. G. Willink.

D. LOTHROP & Co. have prepared several books for this holiday season of which they are justly proud. The illustrated selections from Tennyson's pastoral poems, edited by Elbridge S. Brooks and published under the title of "Out-of-Doors with Tennyson," has already been fully noticed in our front pages. "The Poet's Year," edited by Oscar Fay Adams, is a volume of selected poetry of the seasons, bound in gold cloth or in morocco bindings, illustrated with 150 engravings, twenty-five being full-page drawings by Chalonier. Mr. Adams has not confined himself to a ransacking of anthologies. He has made a close and clever search through contemporary and especially through periodical literature, and it is due to him to recognize that the originality of his idea has been equalled by the skill of its execution. The cream of English literature, past and present, has been skimmed with judicious and appreciative hand. "The Artist Gallery" gives in dainty form the portraits of Millet, Bouguereau, Landseer, Rosa Bonheur and Sir Frederick Leighton, and nine representative works of each artist. A short biographical sketch of each artist is also included, and the book, in its rich red cloth and morocco binding makes a decidedly pretty and artistic gift-book. The "Great Cities of the World," giving a descriptive panorama of all cities of over 200,000 population, is noticed specially under books for young people, but will also prove acceptable to older readers. It is carefully edited by Elbridge S. Brooks, who does so much careful work on the books of this house. "Our Early Presidents, their Wives and Children" by Mrs. Harriet Taylor Upton, is a work of historic interest which should find a place in every household library. It covers the most interesting and exciting period of our country's history, embracing the first six Presidents and their times, and has been carefully revised so as to make it strictly accurate. It is illustrated by one hundred and fifty portraits, pictures and autographs, many of which were obtained specially from private sources, and are both rare and interesting. New editions have also been prepared of the various books which proved so successful last season, among which were specially popular Warwick Brooke's "Pencil Pictures of Child

Was seen to pass as with eagle flight."

Life," Tennyson's "Holy Grail," Wordsworth's "Melodies from Nature," "Old Concord: her highways and byways," the Longfellow Remembrance Book, etc., etc.

A. C. McCLURG & Co. have no books that come specially under the head of holiday gift books, but they have several excellent works among their newest publications that may serve happily in making gifts. They bring out four volumes of "Laurel Crowned Letters," in which are included the most charming letters of the correspondence of Lord Chesterfield, Lady Montague, Horace Walpole and Madame Sévigné.

These have been selected and edited with introductions and notes by unusually competent hands, to make them intelligible to the men and women of to-day. "Savonarola," by William Clark, ought to find a sale during a season when "Romola" is brought into prominent notice once more. In popular style Mr. Clark explains clearly the intricate political system of Florence in his day, and gives a well-rounded picture of the man who is the real hero of George Eliot's greatest work of art. Another timely biography is "The Life of Henrik Ibsen," a critical estimate by Henry Jaeger, translated from the Norwegian by William M. Payne; and other volumes of literary value are "Essays of Francis Bacon," with notes and introduction by Prof. M. B. Anderson; "Masterpieces of Foreign Authors," presented in compact little books, which already embrace "Doctor Antonio," "William Meister," and "The Morals and Manners of the XVII. Century," the characters of La Bruyère, translated by Helen Scott; and "Odes from the Greek Dramatists," translated into lyric metres by English poets and scholars.

MACMILLAN & CO.'s illustrated books include much valuable information on the dear old British Isles, in whose happy homes Christmas fills so important a place. They have Mrs. Oliphant's new book on "Royal Edinburgh: her saints, kings and scholars," with illustrations by George Reid, which can be had in an American as well as an English edition, and also in a sumptuous édition de luxe; "Glimpses of Old English Homes," by Elizabeth Balch; "Relics of the Royal House of Stuart," with introduction and notes by John Shelton, illustrated by a series of forty plates in colors, drawn from relics of the Stuarts by William Gibb; and "Stratford on Avon," by Sidney Lee, giving an account of the old town from earliest times to the death of Shakespeare, illustrated by Edward Hull. "The Vicar of Wakefield" also appears uniform with Irving's "Bracebridge Hall," and "Old Christmas," with 150 illustrations by Hugh Thomson, of which a limited number of copies can be had in extra size; and there is a sequel to Mahaffy's "Greek Life and Thought," called "The Greek World." There is also a new edition of the magnificent volume with two hundred illustrations, "Pen Drawing and Pen Draughtsmen," a study of the art of to-day, with technical suggestions as to its work and workers, a most valuable addition to the library of working draughtsmen and book illustrators. "Wild Beasts and Their Ways," by Sir Samuel Baker, describes the animals of Europe, Asia and Africa, and is packed full of information for hunters and naturalists, conveyed in simple language lucid to much larger circles of intelligent readers.

G. & C. MERRIAM offer in their recently completed "Webster's International Dictionary of the English Language," one of the very best gifts to present to a friend who reads, writes and thinks, and keeps up to the hour in the progressive life of the world he lives in. In etymology, pronunciation, citation and pictorial illustrations it carries to greater perfection the merits of "Webster's Unabridged." It adequately represents the vast and various advances in all the departments of thought and knowledge in recent years. Editorial work has been in progress upon this revision for over ten years and over $300,000 was expended in its preparation before the first copy was printed. With a dictionary of this kind you can give a friend a pleasure that will last a lifetime.

THE METHODIST BOOK CONCERN (Hunt & Eaton) have a long line of books specially suitable as gifts for clerical friends or favorite Sunday-school teachers. They call special attention to "Supremacy of Law," Bishop Newman's latest book, in which he speaks of the perfect law of God, which is love; "Christian Missions in the Nineteenth Century," by Egbert S. Todd, a strong argument in favor of this great work of the Church; "Credentials of the Gospels," by Joseph Agar Beet; "Peter the Preacher," Carlisle B. Holding's helpful and inspiring story of a young clergyman's life-work among the rough classes of a Western town; and the always acceptable "Illustrative Notes on the Sunday-school Lessons" for the coming year, so ably edited by Jesse L. Hurlburt and Robert R. Doherty.

THOMAS NELSON & SONS this year have a long line of illustrated monotint and color gift-books, many of them in shapes, made up of selections from almost all the poets and decorated by some of the best-known designers of flowers and landscapes. These little things of beauty are known as "Christmas Gems." The separate jewels are wreaths of "Love," "Hope," and "Friendship," "Cross Bearers," "True Hearts," and "Lucy Grey," and under appropriately decorated covers "Sea Breezes," "Country Breezes," "Sweet Solitude," "Where Fancy Dwells," and "Nature's Whisperings." But it is in their long line of Oxford Bibles and Prayer Books and Hymn nals, that this house offers wonderful treasures to the Christmas buyer. Year after year we have described these treasures, making mention every new season of some really new and specially desirable addition to the enormous stock of the firm. This year dainty gifts are furnished in "The Wonderful Finger Prayer-Book," and "The Marvellous Finger New Testament." These remarkable specimens of printing exhibit the properties of the famous "Oxford India paper." Each weighs in limp binding about three-quarters of an ounce, is only one inch in width, three and a-half inches in length, and one-third of an inch in thickness; and yet they contain respectively the entire Prayer Book and the whole New Testament. Both the miniature volumettes are gotten up in fine styles, including Venetian morocco, Persian and German calf, genuine Russia, and divinity circuit Levant. There is also this year a new edition of the Jubilee Bible, first issued in 1885, of which a fac-simile was sent to Queen Victoria and accepted graciously on the fiftieth anniversary of her accession. The intrinsic value of the "Oxford" Bibles has been recommended by the most prominent and scholarly divines of the English and American Church, and the wealth of information contained between their covers acknowledged to take the place of a good-sized theological reference library. New designs of binding are constantly being devised for the Bibles and Prayer-Books, and they make an important display on the Christmas counter in their bewildering variety. When in doubt what a friend would like for Christmas, try an Oxford Bible or Prayer-Book, or both, if you have been favored with means to indulge such excellent choice.

NIMS & KNIGHT make a bewildering display of rich gift-books, souvenirs and other holiday publications. Chief among these is Gray's "Elegy in a Country Churchyard," with an introductory essay by Dr. J. L. Williams, illustrated by twenty-five photogravures and half-tone illustrations, reproductions of photographs made on the spot by Dr. Williams, aiming to give an artistic idea of the home and haunts of the poet; Hawthorne's "Legends of the Province House," giving the four stories told of the old Province House, for which Frank T. Merrill has made many full-page plates and also illustrations in the text; Mrs. Alexander's poem of "The Burial of Moses," illustrated by A. S. Cox, which makes a very handsome book, showing elaborate and careful work; Charles Dickens' "Christmas Carol," illustrated by P. M. Gauguier and T. V. Chominski; and Irving's "Rip Van Winkle," with forty or fifty illustrations by Frank T. Merrill. Slightly smaller in size, but equal in interest and beauty of exterior and interior, are "Song-Birds and Seasons," by André Theurlet, with Giacomelli's charming illustrations; "Gems from Emerson," with six full-page illustrations of landscape and flowers; "Her Garden," a memorial poem to Helen Jackson, illustrated by Alice Stewart Hill, who also illustrates "Rocky Mountain Wild Flowers" with dainty hand-painted flowers; "Camp Life," a series of scenes representing camp life in the Adirondacks, taken from original photographs by S. A. Stoddard; and the views of English rural life from original photographs, called "Bits of English Scenery." "Tenting on the Old Camp Ground" is a new volume in the Small Illustrated Gift-Books Series, which has proved a great success. Charles Copeland makes the illustrations from nature and Frank Myrich furnishes the ornaments, all drawn and printed under the supervision of A. V. S. Anthony. Photogravures from some of the most celebrated works of foreign and American artists are bound within the rich covers of "Gems of Art" from the Metropolitan Museum, and "Gems of American Art."

PORTER & COATES have a new illustrated edition of "Romola" in two volumes which is described in detail in our preceding pages. They should be given practical acknowledgment of the gratitude to which they are entitled for bringing out in a new library edition the celebrated collections of gossip by Grace and Philip Wharton, known as "The Queens of Society" and "Wits and Beaux of Society." The younger generation scarcely knows the fund of entertainment hidden away in these old books. For its benefit we may explain that gossipy biographies of celebrated women who have held a conspicuous place in society on account of intellectual endowments, personal attractions, peculiar culture and accomplishments, force of character, or political connections, make up "Queens of Society," and much the same kind of matter about men holding similar positions is incorporated in "Wits and Beaux." Of these two works each has two editions, one in plain cloth, and the other in three-quarters calf binding.

JAMES POTTS & CO. have a neat holiday edition of Henry Drummond's "The Greatest Thing in the World," which certainly is a most suitable gift for the day on which the Child was born who taught that love which is "the greatest thing." The little book has been embellished with artistic drawings, printed in two colors, and has a cheerful white-and-red cover with symbolical designs showing the leaves of good temper, kindness, patience, usefulness, humility, generosity, courtesy, guilelessness and sincerity springing from the productive soil of love. Nothing better could be selected for the older members of Sunday-schools or Bible-classes. There are several other books relating to the Bible and to preaching which would make welcome additions to a clerical library which our limited space prohibits our describing in detail. This house controls the Bagster Bibles on this side of the water, and offer a large variety of Bibles and Prayer-Books and Hymnals in every style of binding. The last importations are a new 16mo "Bible" in four volumes (the text printed across the page) which are encased in Persian morocco, French seal or limp Syrian Levant, and put up in a neat box, and a "Bourgeois Bible" in octavo size, printed from new plates on thin paper, and also bound in styles to suit every taste in color and material.

L. PRANG & CO. have a large selection of beautiful art-books that must be seen and handled to be appreciated in their fine color printing and dainty conceptions. "The Golden Flower—Chrysanthemum" and Robert Browning's "Saul" are fully described in our front pages. Among little works of art of less size but almost equal finish are "A Christmas Song," "Mary's Vision" and "Why," all pretty Christmas poems, illustrated by Elizabeth B. Comins; "A Christmas Morning" and "The Winds of the Season" by Frank T. Robinson, illustrated with colored landscapes in imitation of water-colors; "The Spirit of the Pine," a pretty Christmas masque by Esther B. Tiffany, with three full-page photogravures after drawings by W. S. Tiffany; "Summer Thoughts for Yule-Tide," by E. S. Benet, illustrated by L. K. Harlow; "A Driftwood Fire," a poem by G. A. Buffum, with illustrations by Schuyler Matthews; "The Halo," poetical selections illustrated in monochrome, and many, many others.

THE PRESBYTERIAN BOARD OF PUBLICATION have a large and varied list of excellent publications, varying in form and character to meet the needs of old and young. They have upwards of nine hundred volumes for Sunday-school libraries and many important works that would prove acceptable to friends interested to learn about baptism, temperance, missions, amusements, giving, prayer, Romanism and Presbyterianism. They have also ready their excellent helps for the Sunday-school lessons of 1891, both for teachers and scholars.

G. P. PUTNAM'S SONS have thoroughly revised their Van Dyke Edition of Amici's "Holland and Its People," and have manufactured a new set of plates for it, as was made necessary as much by the great wear and tear upon them in printing copies of this successful book as by the fact that many new and very clever illustrations have been scattered through the text, which were originally prepared by Mr. Hugh Thom.

son for the Pall Mall Budget. These brilliant and glowing pictures of a land rich, fertile and prosperous, which has been reclaimed from the all-devouring sea by staid, sober-minded Hollanders, make most interesting reading. They have made a handsome book of "Fra Lippo Lippi," a romance of Florence in the fifteenth century by Margaret Vere Farrington, which has been embellished with fourteen full-page illustrations in photogravure of well-known pictures of the artist hero and some other celebrated Italian masterpieces. A beautiful gift always is Blackmore's "Lorna Doone." It can be had in the Exmoor Edition in three volumes with a preface specially written by the author, in which he says: "This Lorna visits you not thus by force of savage ravishers, but under escort of gentle men, fair knights of the Order of Copyright. And if you ask her how it is, when so many better tales are told, and die upon the fitful wind, that her simple story still has life and buoyancy on the lips of men, she answers not, but drops her eyes and wonders more than you do. For neither has she skill of style, nor knowledge of the world, nor scheme of arduous humanity. Nothing but meek love of nature, and plain ungarnished words, and tongue that trembles when the heart is touched." To friends with a passion for natural sciences no more acceptable gift could be offered than "The Trees of North-eastern America," by Charles P. Newhall, with an introductory note by N. L. Britton of Columbia College, and illustrations made from tracings of the leaves of various trees, including all the native trees of Canada and the northern United States east of the Mississippi River, with descriptions by which any given specimen can be readily located and named. "Among Moths and Butterflies," by Julia P. Ballard, is a revised and enlarged edition of "Insect Lives," that exquisite little work for amateur scientists. More cunning little books than those included in the second series of Literary Gems it would be hard to find. Their peculiar charm and separate titles are put forth, under the appropriate heading of "Dainty Books," in our front pages. A very valuable publication is a limited letterpress edition of "The Venetian Printing-Press," an historical study based upon documents for the most part unpublished, by Horatio F. Brown.

ANSON D. F. RANDOLPH & CO. have their usual supply of books eminently suitable for gifts, if selected with judgment and offered to friends interested in their special contents and capable of appreciating the refined taste which directs the book-making of this house. A new devotional library is formed of six of Rose Porter's pretty books, entitled "Resting in His Love," "Looking Towards Sunrise," "In Quietness," "Open Windows," and "A Year of Blessings," bound in cardboard or ivory, and to be had separately or in a neat, tasteful box. "The Imitation of Christ," in rhythmic sentences, with introductory note by Canon Liddon, is very pretty in gilt edges and white labels, either in simple cloth or in every variety of richer binding to Persian morocco and imitation seal. Books of enduring theological value are a specialty with the Randolphs. Among the newer publications of this class are "The Ministry and Sacraments of the Church," by Rev. H. J. Van Dyke, a collection of his lectures delivered at the Princeton Theological Seminary this year; and Alfred Edersheim's "Life and Times of Jesus the Messiah," now made into a large-paper edition with twenty-four photo illustrations of scenes and incidents in the Holy Land. "Unknown Switzerland" is also issued in an édition de luxe illustrated with a number of fine photographs. A new series has been made of five important volumes already in the catalogue, which is called The Missionary Library, and includes Henry's "Cross and Dragon;" Cort's "Siam, or the Heart of Farther India;" Dawson's "Life of James Hannington;" Titus Coan's "Life in Hawali," and "The Autobiography of William G. Schauffer," edited by his sons. "The Baby's Journal" remains one of the prettiest gifts that can be found for a young and doting mother of the finest boy or cutest girl in the world.

FLEMING H. REVELL, Chicago and New York, has a seemingly inexhaustible list of booklets for all seasons and all occasions, illustrated in chromo-lithography, monotints and etchings, all bearing distinctive, attractive and self-explanatory titles, and ranging in price from 3 c. to $1.50. To the uninitiated it seems almost impossible that any one house can turn out so many books of this class, and quite impossible that such a raft of little booklets can be separate and distinct in the publishers' minds. But there must be the same law at work which enables every mother to pick out her own child, no matter how much to the uninitiated lookers-on it looks exactly like all the other children. The array of books in other departments is no less bewildering, and it is only fair to say that quantity does not get the better of quality, no matter at what rate it increases. Several books formerly issued by Messrs. Robert Carter & Brothers are now on the list of this firm. Among these are Spurgeon's "Sermon Notes" in four volumes; Matthew Henry's "Bible Commentary" in three, six or nine volumes; "Autobiography of John G. Paton," missionary to the New Hebrides; Rev. William Secker's "The Nonsuch Professor in His Meridian Splendor," with introduction by T. L. Cuyler; Dr. Richard Newton's "The Jewel Case," "The Wonder Case" and "The Bible Case," each in six volumes, etc. Books specially relating to Bible study are William C. Carr's "Scripture Outlines by Books and Themes;" "Hints on Bible Study," by Dr. Clifford, Professors Drummond and Elmslie and Rev. Moule, Meyer, Waller, Berry and Dawson; Trench's "Notes on the Parables and Miracles;" "Studies in the Books" for training classes; "The Times of Isaiah" in the By-Paths of Bible Knowledge, etc. Of biographical interest are "An Intense Life," in which George F. Herrick gives a sketch of the life and work of Rev. Andrew T. Pratt, missionary in Turkey; "James Calvert," the new volume in the Missionary Biographies, telling of good work done in Fiji; "David Livingstone," by Arthur Montefiore, and "Wicliffe and Luther," additions to The World's Benefactors Series. Excellent lessons for Christians are taught in "Moral Muscle and How to Use It," by Frederick A. Atkins; "Reformation Principles Stated and Applied," by Rev. J. M. Foster; "Ecce Venit," by Rev. A. J. Gordon; "Power From on High," by T. B. Meyer; "The Christian's Secret of a Happy Life;" "Lessons for Christian Workers," and Prof. Henry Drummond's "The Perfected Life," and "Love the Supreme Gift." Descriptive volumes of unusual interest are "The Swiss Guide," by Rev. C. H. Parkhurst, "Pictorial Africa," "London Pictures," by Rev. Richard Lovett, and "Greek Pictures," by Rev. J. P. Mahaffy, the two latter in the Pen and Pencil Series. Little volumes of hymns; little booklets of Bible texts; little souvenirs for birthdays and holidays, and little publications of every size, shape and style must end, as they began, this list.

ROBERTS BROTHERS' chief holiday book, "Our New England," has been fully described in our front pages. There ought to be a warm reception given the holiday edition of Edwin Arnold's "Light of Asia," that soul-stirring poem of the life and teaching of Gautama, Prince of India and founder of Buddhism, the religion of the great renunciation. The illustrations to the volume are taken for the most part from photographs of the Buddhist sculptures and frescoes found in ancient ruins of India, averaging 2000 years old, many of them being identified by authorities in archaeology, both in India and America, as actually illustrating scenes in the life of the hero of Mr. Arnold's flowing verse. The book is bound in Oriental colors, with a cover design illustrating the four principal events in the life of Buddha—the birth, the meditation, the preaching, and the Nirvana. A portrait of Arnold, by Damman, forms the frontispiece of the volume. F. A. Knight's pretty books, entitled "Idyls of the Field" and "By Leafy Ways," with E. T. Compton's delicate illustrations, are full of delightful reading about out-of-door life in beautiful England. Mr. Knight has a happy touch in describing the ways of the birds and the aspects of the fields, and these little dainty books must not be overlooked when choosing holiday attentions for lovers of rustic and rural pleasures. One of the rare creations of genius which make real to us the life and manners of the remote past of a primitive people is "The House of the Wolfings," by William Morris, written in prose and verse which are simply perfect, and show Mr. Morris at his highest excellence as the acknowledged virtuoso in English language. The tale has epic force and significance and a noble pathos. At Christmas time, and at all times, it is a book that any lover of true literature must covet and would be delighted to receive. The busy days of life generally leave one little unoccupied minute in which a wee sentence of wisdom or comfort or a little verse of true poetry can be crowded into the best corners of heart and mind, but do not leave much time to look about for these little words of inspiration. Susan Coolidge has made a selection of such prose and verse for untiring workers, and it is brought to their attention as "The Day's Message," in a pretty pure white and hopeful green binding, with a cover design by Mrs. Whitman.

GEORGE ROUTLEDGE & SONS have added "Kings in Exile" to their illustrated edition of Daudet, the beauties of which are pointed out under standard fiction in our front pages. Gon-court's "Sister Philomène" and Coppée's "Disillusion" are also gotten up in the Daudet style with the clever and artistic French illustrations. The great interest of the hour is Henry M. Stanley, and the two books describing the scene of his adventures issued by this house are timely and most attractive. By strange coincidence, although two distinct books written by two different authors, the two volumes appear under almost identical titles. "Great African Travellers from Mungo Park to Stanley" is written by W. H. Kingston and Lieutenant C. R. Low, while "Great African Travellers from Mungo Park to the Rescuing of Emin Pacha by Henry M. Stanley" is the work of Hugh Craig. Both books are lavishly illustrated. Randolph Caldecott, of whom art lovers never tire, is represented this year by a substantial oblong quarto, bound in cloth with gilt edges, containing a complete collection of his contributions to the London Graphic, printed by Edmund Evans, the prince of color printers, and only to be had in a limited quantity. This year also the "Savoy Ballads" promised for last season are really ready, and Gilbert's good work can be enjoyed in illustration as well as text. Frank Kirchbach and others contribute the illustrations to a new and fine edition of Bulwer's "Last Days of Pompeii," and R. A. Caton Woodville supplies those for another book by Lieut. Low on "Battles of the British Army." An ever-welcome gift is "Men and Women of the Time," which in its 13th edition is a standard authority on contemporaneous biography both in England and America. Another important reference-book is a greatly enlarged new edition of Nuttall's "Dictionary of Statistics." A six-volume handsome edition of "Smollett's Novels" takes rank with their recently issued Fielding. New editions of Kingston's "Shipwrecks and Disasters at Sea" and Colonel Routledge's "Discoveries and Inventions of the Nineteenth Century," though not strictly holiday books, would be much appreciated by interested parties. The latter has been fully revised, and contains descriptions of the Forth Bridge, the Eiffel Tower, and the Manchester Ship Canal. Both volumes are fully illustrated.

The

CHARLES SCRIBNER'S SONS offer a rich and varied selection of books with which friends can be made happy. Edward L. Wilson's "In Scripture Lands" and "In the Footprints of Charles Lamb," by Benjamin Ellis Martin, are fully noticed elsewhere in this issue. Few persons realize the character and accessibility of the natural grandeurs of the Pacific Slope, and to most readers "The Pacific Coast Scenic Tour," by Henry T. Finck, will prove a revelation in spite of books already written on the subject. Nothing so elaborate and comprehensive has before been attempted, and the book not only furnishes a complete guide to the tourist, but offers most interesting and instructive information to such as may never travel, in Mr. Finck's vivacious, delightful style. The text is accompanied by twenty-four full-page illustrations of the points of special interest and the wonderful scenery described. The third volume of the "Cyclopædia of Music and Musicians," edited by John Denison Champlin, Jr., completes an important work which founds its claim to a high place in the literature of its art upon the character and comprehensiveness of the information which, through its text and illustrations, it for the first time makes accessible, the new simplicity of its arrangement, and the bibliography of a kind hitherto unattempted, through which it furnishes a key and guide to the whole literature of music. The articles on electricity, which have attracted wide popular interest during their appearance in Scribner's Magazine, are now ready in a handsomely printed book under the title, "Electricity in Daily Life," illustrated with 120 pictures, making clear the science and application of electricity to everyday uses. Colonel Church's "Life of John Ericsson" is a very timely and decidedly valuable addition to the accumulating biographies of men of science and practical invention. The publishers deserve thanks for putting the late Eugene Schuyler's monumental work on "Peter the Great" in such form as to place it within the reach of buyers with purses of moderate length. The popular edition is inferior to the more luxurious original edition in hardly anything but the quality of the paper. The beauty of the hundreds of engravings is not impaired in the least, and these illustrations include much of the very finest work ever done for The Century. Two new volumes in the Cameo Edition are devoted to George W. Cable's

"Old Creole Days," with etching by Percy Moran, and T. N. Page's "In Ole Virginia" with etching by W. L. Sheppard. These two pretty volumes are printed from new plates with wide margins, and in their dainty covers and fine paper are prime holiday favorites. Two little books by Eugene Field have also dainty attractions in their exquisite print and artistic blue-and-gold binding. Mr. Field is well known through his witty contributions to the Chicago press. He has abundant wit and humor and a rare pathetic tenderness and graceful imagery. Some of his stories have a flavor of Bret Harte's best work. There is a new edition in two volumes, with eleven etchings by Ad. Lalanze, of E. T. W. Hoffmann's "Weird Tales," and besides a long array of books of historical and literary importance, upon which our limited space forbids us to dwell at a time when illustrated books have the right of way by common consent. Not strictly of holiday importance, but admitted gladly into prominence, is a book devoted to studies among the tenement-houses of the great City of New York, "How the Other Half Lives," by Jacob A. Riis, illustrated with forty illustrations from photographs taken by the author, who is Police Headquarters reporter for the Associated Press. It is perhaps in the sociological suggestions that the great value of this work lies, but it seems peculiarly appropriate at the Christmas season to have our thoughts called to the essential unity of the community in which we live, and the vital importance to the one half of knowing how the other half lives. At a time when all hearts are opened, this book should be read with grave attention; and, if it is presented as a gift to some rich friends, it may make them do a little towards making the next year happier than the last has been to some of the little ones "forgotten in the city."

SCRIBNER & WELFORD have published the eighth and concluding volume of the Henry Irving Shakespeare, which contains the valuable index to the works by Henry Irving, Frank A. Marshall, Arthur Symons, Joseph Knight, etc. The special features of this edition, which is admitted by competent judges to be one of the most thorough and careful, are: marked text for reading and acting; literary history, stage history, and time analysis of play; critical remarks and full explanatory notes on every play; biographical notices of the historical characters; meanings of obscure words; list of words used only once by Shakespeare; maps of localities of plays; and the aforesaid index to the scholarly notes. One of the most important contributions of late years to the study of folk-lore is ready in "Gypsy Sorcery and Fortune-Telling," by Charles Godfrey Leland, illustrated by numerous incantations, specimens of medical magic, anecdotes and tales. This work is drawn from the most quaint and curious sources and sets forth the magical practices of the Romany in different countries, and their strange beliefs. An authoritative work on the Aryans is "Prehistoric Antiquities of the Aryan Peoples," a manual of comparative philology and the earliest culture, by Dr. O. Schrader, translated from the second German edition, by F. B. Jevons. To those interested in the study of Ibsen it will be important to know that this house has an authorized translation of "Ibsen's Prose Dramas," thus far numbering five volumes, edited by William Archer. To students of Wagner it will give pleasure to hear of "Richard Wagner's Letters," written chiefly to his Dresden friends, Theodore Uhlig, Wilhelm Fischer, and Ferdinand Heine; and the "Correspondence between Wagner and Liszt (1841-1861)" in two volumes. Lovers of history will turn with thanks to Miss Pardoe's "Life of Marie de Medicis," the new companion volume to her works on "The Court and Reign of Francis the First;" and "Louis the XIVth and the Court of France in the XVIIth Century;" to Lady Jackson's "First of the Bourbons," Barry O'Meara's "Napoleon at St. Helena," and Prof. Pasquale Villari's "Life and Times of Savonarola." Many more books of value are on the list of this house, but space, unfortunately, is not available to make them known to our readers even by title and subject.

THE FREDERICK A. STOKES COMPANY, fabulous as it may appear, have a largely increased line of publications and manufactures, including an unusual variety, even for them, of handsome art-books. "Some American Painters in Water-Colors," a companion to the remarkably successful collection entitled "Fac-similes of Aquarelles of American Artists," is fully noticed in our front pages. "From Beginning to End" is made up of comments on the life of Christ, written by Dr. John Hall, David Swing, R. Heber Newton, Bishop Newman, George C. Lorimer, William W. Boyd, Arthur T. Pierson, Hiram W. Thomas, Joseph Cook and T. De Witt Talmage, illustrated by large photogravures after paintings by the great artists of the Christian era, including Gérôme, Doré, Da Vinci, Scheffer, Jalabert, Hunt, etc. This makes a fine book, 18x22 inches, in a heavy cover decorated with a reduced copy of one of the photogravures. "The Puckle Club, or, a gray cap for a green head," is a reprint interesting to all lovers of good books. It purports to be a dialogue between father and son on many topics, full of quaint humor, and was published in London in 1723. In antique binding of chamois, tied with ribbons, it makes an odd and attractive appearance. The seventh series of "The Good Things of Life" is ready, and no one knows how much amusement a copy of it will afford the family whose members love innocent fun artistically illustrated. "Thus Think and Smoke Tobacco," those quaint old verses illustrated by George Wharton Edwards, makes a pretty publication in its striking cover with curious figure of a smoker broadly shown in gilt, and is sure to please a smoking acquaintance fully as well as a pipe or a pair of slippers. There is too long a list to give in detail of art novelties. Among these are a series of artistic colored prints, fac-similes of water-color, which are enumerated and described in their advertising pages in this issue. The calendars, whose name is legion, are mentioned elsewhere. Of value during the holidays and throughout the year are the volumes of the Vignette Series, every one of which is a remarkably pretty 12mo volume, profusely illustrated by new half-tone engravings after original designs. "Lucile," "The Princess," "Lalla Rookh" and "Faust" are included thus far. These books are in every style of binding, and are little works of art in all.

THE UNITED STATES BOOK COMPANY (John W. Lovell) have illustrated editions of Charles Kingsley's "Hypatia;" Mrs. Muloch's "John Halifax," and Thackeray's "Vanity Fair," printed from electrotype plates specially made for this edition. The books are bound in English vellum cloth, and every volume is enclosed in a box. Acceptable gifts may also be made by selecting from their Library Editions of standard authors in literature, history, poetry and fiction. The greatest care has been taken with the binding and presswork. Thus far are included works of Browning, Carlyle, Dickens, Eliot, Fielding, Ruskin, Hume, Strickland, Swinburne, Scott, Thackeray, Cooper, etc. "Lux Mundi," the great theological sensation of the year, would certainly be an appropriate gift for a clergyman or Sunday-school teacher. This work has already reached the tenth edition in England, where it is looked upon by the dignitaries of the Church as an epoch-making book. Bound volumes of Rudyard Kipling's "Indian Tales" and "Departmental Ditties," "Barrack Room Ballads and Other Verses," are also most timely and interesting books to give friends at this season.

WARD, LOCK & Co. have a new and cheap edition of Malthus' world-renowned treatise on population, which is issued with an analysis and critical introduction supplied by the editor, and is a specially suitable gift for friends struggling with social theories and schemes for making the world better. A new and enlarged edition of "Every Man His Own Mechanic," and the second volume in the new series of "Amateur Work" illustrated, make handsome Christmas gifts. The latter book contains practical articles on several specially popular subjects, including photography, paper-hanging, electrical work, organ building, glass and china decoration, etc., etc. Another useful book for holiday times is "Short plays for Drawing-room Performance," written specially for amateurs by F. C. Burnand, R. André, F. C. Broughton, Sir Gilbert Campbell, etc, and illustrated by R. André, Matt Stretch and others.

FREDERICK WARNE & Co. expend the best part of their thoughts on their publications for the young. Among holiday gift-books their "Bedford" Shakespeare, issued last season, still holds its own. It is a dainty red-line edition in twelve little volumes, put up in boxes of every material, which takes its name from the location of the great London establishment of F. Warne & Co. These little books are issued in eight styles of binding, all perfectly finished by the best London binders. These bindings include cloth, French, Venetian, Turkey, and Persian moroccos, limp, genuine Russia, and a very attractive "cabinet" binding. The different bindings are put in cases to match, the "cabinet" being enclosed in a polished walnut cabinet with glass doors. One of these little boxes, resembling little jewel cases, would make as showy and satisfactory a present as can well be planned even for one to whom we wish to give of our best.

CHARLES L. WEBSTER & Co. have this year given their books to the bookstores instead of selling them by subscription, and in looking for books for patriotic American friends their list must be carefully consulted. On it are several of Mark Twain's volumes, containing noble lessons made palatable and never to be forgotten by his irresistible wit and humor. "A Connecticut Yankee in King Arthur's Court" is a satire on the aspirations and ideals of the sixth and nineteenth centuries. The American smartness and puppyism of the day is contrasted with the vague, unpractical knight errantry of the day of the Round Table, and a noble ideal pictured of what an American shall be after he has done bragging about his independence and his "free and equal" prerogatives and begins to see that these things have run into impertinence and forwardness instead of manly individuality and large-minded citizenship.

A NEAT SHOT.

From "The Flirt." (Copyright, 1890, by The Worthington Co.)

Much of it is written in the language of the "Morte d'Arthur" and other literature describing the dawn of chivalry in Englishmen. The illustrations are exquisitely funny. This house also offers Mark Twain's "Library of Humor," 700 pages of fun, illustrated by E. W. Kemble; "Life on the Mississippi;" "The Stolen White Elephant;" and "Prince and Pauper," which although written for children can only be truly appreciated by children of a larger growth. The books relating to the Civil War published by the Websters are "Personal Memoirs of U. S. Grant;" "McClellan's Own Story;" "Genesis of the Civil War," in which Maj.-Gen. Crawford tells the story of Sumter; and "Reminiscences of Winfield Scott Hancock." Mrs. Custer's "Tenting on the Plains," including a biography of General Custer and a steel portrait, makes a handsome book of great interest to students of American history.

WELCH, FRACKER CO. have some very prettily made books for the holidays. "Under Summer Skies," by Clinton Scollard, has scores of vignettes and full-page illustrations, and one etching by Margaret Landers Randolph, hand-painted by Moser. In its white and gold binding it is a decidedly pretty book. Three most interesting books of travel are written by Francis C. Sessions. "From the Land of the Midnight Sun to the Volga," illustrated by E. W. Deming, describes a trip through Sweden and Norway, and a short sojourn in Russia; "From Yellowstone Park to Alaska," illustrated by C. H. Warren, passes rapidly from California to Alaska, but stays in that peculiar country for some time, and offers a great deal of valuable information about it; and "In Western Levant," with vignette illustrations by Henry W. Hall, gives sketches of life and character as seen in Madrid, Toledo, Cordova, Seville, Granada, Morocco, Algeria and Tunis, and is very tastefully gotten up. "Into Morocco" by Pierre Loti, illustrated by Benjamin Constant and Aimé Morot, has reached its third edition, and is a thoroughly delightful book. "A History of the English Drama," by Echard Golden, is also a very suitable gift for a friend interested in the literary history of play-writing, from the old miracle plays to the present time.

THE WORTHINGTON CO.'s Christmas book is an édition de luxe of Paul Hervieu's successful novel, "Flirt," a story of Parisian life, which appears in Hugh Craig's translation. The pretty and self-satisfied wife who has wearied of her husband, who has no perceptible virtues, yet lacks courage to become vicious, is capitally sketched in the heroine, who has many admirers, some with common sense and some without, but who is fondest of an Italian who is all that his barber and tailor can make him. It is of the art qualities of the book that special mention is made, as they exhibit the finished work of Madeleine Lemaire. The edition of "Flirt" brought out by the Worthingtons is a facsimile of the best regular French edition, in which the head and tail pieces are printed in colors and the full-page plates in black and white. The volume is printed on finely coated paper and put up in a handsome square cover decorated with an open fan. In sets of books the firm this year offers a splendid field for selection. There are new editions of Thackeray's complete works, printed from new type in twenty handsome volumes, with upwards of 1500 illustrations which are printed on India paper in the édition de luxe; Wharton's "Wits and Beaux" and "Queens of Society," with prefaces by Justine McCarthy; Wilson's "Noctes Ambrosianæ"; "Works of Thomas Gray"; Napier's "Peninsular War"; Payne's "Arabian Nights," and many other dear old friends, all most welcome in the Christmas season of 1890.

E. & J. B. YOUNG offer a long line of books in chromo-lithography, monochrome and engraving, ingenious in plan and tasteful in execution. Their shape-books are very pretty, notably "Milestones," "Busybodies" and "Twigs." There is a long line of hymns, showing the great excellence of the modern arts of color printing; and new issues of some dear old English ballads, also illustrated in nineteen colors. Pretty souvenirs are called "At Home," illustrated in full color, with spaces for every day in the week for registering home matters, and "Our Birthdays," containing a poetical extract for every day in the year with plan for autographs; and "Sun and Star," a Scripture text-book. This house are the American agents for the Eyre & Spottiswoode "Bibles," and have three new grades this season to select from, all including the "Aids" compiled by eminent scholars recognized as the highest authorities in their lines. The difference in them lies merely in the quality of the paper or style of binding, and every grade has as many bindings as ingenuity could plan. Some important works in theology are also ready for the Christmas season, and according to taste every friend can find suitable gifts in this field.

Books for Young People.

UNDER this heading is given, in alphabetical order of their publishers, a descriptive summary of all the new books offered as specially suitable for young people.

THE AMERICAN SUNDAY-SCHOOL UNION have several books of a semi-religious character, suitable for teachers to distribute among their Sunday-school scholars. Readers from sixteen to eighteen may be suited either with "Aimée's Marriage," by P. H. C., a story of a young Protestant girl who married a Catholic, or with "Rudolph of Rosenfeldt," by John W. Spear, a story of the times of William the Silent, both being narratives of Catholic persecution. "The Poor Little Sweep," by M. Adelaide Atkinson, is for very little readers. It is a story of Philadelphia of the "Charley Rosa" order.

THE AMERICAN TRACT SOCIETY offer a companion volume to "The Bible in Picture and Story," by the same author, Mrs. L. S. Houghton. It is called "The Life of Christ in Picture and Story," and is well printed and generously illustrated. They have also a new quarto edition of "The Pilgrim's Progress," in large type, showing a profusion of cuts, and embracing a life of Bunyan. Mrs. M. D. Brine's "Sunny Hour Series" comprises four flat books of simple tales in large type, for the little ones beginning to read. The binding and pictures are very pretty. An older class of readers are provided for in "Winnie Lorimer's Visit," by Clara B. Conant, and "Beside Still Waters," by Ella Clifford, both with wholesome lessons on the influence of Christian character. A seasonable booklet is "The Angelus," producing in monotint a miniature copy of Millet's celebrated painting, and a poem illustrating the same. It is in the usual souvenir style of decorated covers with gilt edges, silken fastenings, etc.

D. APPLETON & Co. make a bid this year for the favor of the young folks. They have prepared two series of excellent reading-matter for them in the way of bright original stories, which are noticeable not only for their exceptionally clever text, but for the beauty of their illustrations, paper and binding. "Crowded Out o' Crofield," by William O. Stoddard, is the first issue of the series entitled Good Books for Young Readers. It is one of the most successful stories of its popular author, and is embellished by Mr. C. T. Hill's graphic designs. The hero of the book is a plucky country lad, who finds Crofield too dull and narrow for him, and gradually works his way to New York City, where his talents find appreciation and opportunities. "We All," by Octave Thanet, is the second issue of this series. It is a stirring tale, fully illustrated, of hunting and adventure in a wild country. "King Tom and the Runaways," by Louis Pendleton, and with E. W. Kemble's characteristic designs, finishes the list of those so far issued in this series. Two boys are the heroes of this volume—their strange experience in the forest and swamps of Georgia furnishing delightful reading. Young Heroes of Our Navy, as the second series is named, is so far represented by "Little Jarvis" by Molly Elliot Seawell—the story of the heroic midshipman of the frigate Constellation, and the second of the Youth's Companion's prize stories. Like the first-named series, this is elaborately illustrated and attractively bound.

BRENTANO's books for young people embrace a set known as the Young Hopeful Series, intended specially for boys. They are "The Slave Prince," by the Venerable Archdeacon Chiswell, a story of Madagascar, where the author has spent the greater portion of his life, with illustrations by A. W. Cooper; "In the Enemy's Country," by Anna H. Drury, a story of Germany in 1813, illustrated by Horace Petherick; and "Cutlass and Cudgel," by G. Manville Fenn, a tale of the south coast of England in the reign of George II., illustrated by H. Schonberg. They also have three volumes in the Girlhood Series, entitled "The Miller's Daughter," by Annie Beale, illustrated by Marcella Walker; "Crooked S," by Annie Clare, the story of a square peg in a round hole, illustrated by John Leighton; and "Poor and Plain," by the author of "Dethroned," illustrated by A. Hitchcock.

THE CASSELL PUBLISHING Co. make a specialty of illustrated quartos in large print and with easy reading-matter. Their list is so rich in these gayly bound books, mostly in characteristic holiday attire, that it is almost impossible to distinguish between them. "Bright Thoughts for Little Pets," "Christmas Day," "Delights of Childhood," "In Picture-Land for Our Little Pets," "Jungle, Peak and Plain," "Picture Natural History," and "Rhymes and Chimes for Christmas Times," by Mary D. Brine, are a few of the titles of those best adapted to the very youngest readers. "Polly, a New-Fashioned Girl," by L. T. Meade, appeals to the little misses in their first school-days. "Horse Stories and Stories of Other Animals," by Thomas W. Knox, and "Stories About Animals," by Thomas Jackson, belong to an order of "juvenile" literature that is always eagerly sought by children of all ages. In a pretty scarlet and gold cover is a most delightful story of wonderland, called "Wanted—A King." Its little heroine slips, like "Alice," quite unconsciously into Fairyland, and meets there all the old nursery rhymes.

THE CENTURY CO. have a treat for all who enjoy genuine humor in "Another Brownie Book," by Palmer Cox. The same little sprites appear again, industriously pursuing their midnight labors of love and mischief. They are to be seen in the orchard, at the yacht race, at the archery match, dancing, fishing, painting, and at a birthday dinner. Certain nationalities are quaintly reproduced in the little figures' faces. The Irish, French, German and Yankee types are laughably perfect—as are the policeman, the Chinaman, and the sailorman, who take part in the majority of the pictures. The verses accompanying the pictures have quite a ring, and are exceedingly amusing. "Santa Claus on a Lark" takes its name from the opening story. Eight tales of Christmas are embraced in the volume, each with appropriate Christmas pictures. It is a beautiful gift for a boy or a girl. The author, Mrs. Washington Gladden, is well known to the readers of St. Nicholas, where these stories first appeared.

THE CONGREGATIONAL SUNDAY-SCHOOL AND PUBLICATION SOCIETY have a most desirable collection of stories of a wholly unsectarian character for young readers. They are mostly duodecimo volumes, nicely illustrated and substantially bound. The girls have had several stories written expressly for them. "One Little Maid," by Elizabeth Preston Allen, charmingly describes the experience at an American boarding-school of a Japanese girl and the daughter of a missionary sent out from Japan to be educated. "Little Miss Boston," by Mrs. Harriet A. Cheever, is a pretty Christmas story, with a poor little girl heroine. Mrs. E. C. Wilson's "A Royal Hunt" carries the readers back to the France of two hundred years ago, and weaves in with historic details of the Huguenot emigration the life of a large French family, of which "Nannette" is the flower. The stories in which boys are the principal actors are "By a Strange Path," by Margaret H. Eckerson, the scene laid in Germany; Mary B. Sleight's "Knights of Sandy Hollow," giving some practical hints of the best methods of reclaiming vicious boys; "Falth on the Frontier," in which Edmund Marsh Vittum deals with the difficulties of a New England family that went West; "The Story of a Heathen," by H. L. Reade, is in the nature of a biography, telling of the conversion of a Japanese boy; "Asaph's Ten Thousand," by Mary E. Bennett, and "Knives and Forks," by Mrs. Frank Lee, are somewhat in line with their contrasts of two grades of society in manufacturing towns. "Little Pilgrims at Plymouth," by Frances A. Humphrey, and the "Bertha Gordon Series," by May Kingston, complete the list. The latter consists of ten pretty little stories, in large type, in a box.

the young are largely instructive, though they have one unmistakable story in "Half a Dozen Boys," by Annie Chapin Ray, that clever, healthy-minded boys will hugely enjoy. It is a genuine story of boy life, with six capital little heroes, with plenty of faults mixed with their many virtues to banish any suspicion of priggishness. "Famous European Artists" and "Famous English Authors of the Nineteenth Century" follow several popular predecessors in the biographical line by Mrs. Sarah K. Bolton. They are delightful books for the home bookshelves that old or young will enjoy dipping into. The first gives the salient points in the lives of Sir Joshua Reynolds, Turner, and other artists; the second gives personal sketches of Tennyson, Ruskin, Browning, Sir Walter Scott, Burns, Byron, Dickens and Shelley. In each are many charming anecdotes and vivid bits of description. "Gold Nails to Hang Memories On" is a novel kind of birthday-book, by Elizabeth A. Allen.

With spaces between for autographs, it gives a rhyming review, under their Christian names, of many old acquaintances in history and literature. It is handsomely issued in holiday style, with gilt edges, rich binding, etc. The new illustrated edition of "Tom Brown's School-Days" issued by this house will be found described under the "Holiday Gift-Books"—for this favorite of the young boys still remains a favorite of the old boys.

DE WOLFE, FISKE & Co. have two lovely books for the little maids of the nursery. "In Poppy Land" is a collection of fairy tales by Mabel Louise Fuller, with each story beginning with the magic words, "Once upon a time." The author revels in quaint and weird fancies, and in the knights and ladies, fairies and dwarfs, and other uncommon people of fairyland. "Miss Muff and Her Friends," by Lee Etheridge, chronicles the doings and sayings of a wise cat and her familiars among the domestic animals. It is an attractive quarto, with many full-page pictures. The older children may have presented to them a little book by George E. Merrill, called "Crusaders and Captives." That remarkable movement of the 13th century, known as the "Children's Crusade," is the central motive of an attractive tale.

DODD, MEAD & Co. have one of the most desirable series on the Civil War, written by Willis G. Abbot for the young people's pleasure and instruction. It opened last season with "Battlefields of '61," the story being carried forward in "Battlefields and Camp-Fires," issued for the present holiday time. No more thrilling and glorious story could be read than this history of the battlefields of Virginia from the time McClellan was deposed from the head of the army till the day General Grant took command. Although the South for a time seemed to be gaining ground, our men won many a hardly-fought battle. The details of these campaigns, with all their romantic accessories, ought to satisfy the most imaginative boy or girl. The volume is a quarto with many bold designs from W. C. Jackson. A new volume of the Elsie Series, by Martha Finley, "Elsie Yachting with the Raymonds," has, along with the usual details of home joys and sorrows, quite an amount of American history woven into the narrative. The characters visit West Point and Saratoga, Boston and Concord, and the historical events that occurred in these places are told succinctly.

E. P. DUTTON & Co.'s selection of fine art color-books, printed by Nister, of Nuremberg, is in exquisite taste. "Old Father Time and His Twelve Children," edited and arranged by Robert Ellice Mack, contains groups of the dearest little children, some watching the snow birds from snow-covered windows, others peeping out from under the sheaves of garnered corn, and others again smiling radiantly from out their refuge in the hollow of a giant tree. Harriet M. Bennett is the artist who has furnished the designs, the result being a most beautiful child's book, prodigal in pictures. "Jack Frost, and other stories," is very cheery and "Christmas," with its snow scenes and happy children in bright warm clothing, and a most taking double-page picture of Santa Claus in a sleigh filled with toys, its prancing reindeers dragging him merrily over the frozen ground. "Once Upon a Time" and "Granny's Story-Box" are pretty combinations of stories and colored pictures for children who can read, or like to be read to. Other books equally beautiful in the same line are "Bread and Honey," "Cherry Cheeks and Roses," "There was Once," famous fairy tales, etc., by John Lawson. "Dutton's Annual for 1890" is still one of the best annual volumes published for children. The pictures and the sketches and stories are far above the average. "When I'm a Man," by Alice Weber; "The Old Pincushion," by Mrs. Molesworth; and "Paul's Friend," by Stella Austin, are three handsome quartos containing three pure, beautiful, loving stories for boys or girls, just such as they are charmed to receive at Christmas time. "Wickey," a pathetic little tale in the style of the author of "Miss Toosey," is full of smiles and tears. This house has so many books for children of every age that it is impossible to mention them all. Their books in sets are very choice; they make a specialty of books cut in the shape of animals, houses, Santa Claus, etc. Nothing more suitable for the Christmas tree or stocking could be bought.

ESTES & LAURIAT have new volumes in all their popular series, rich in gay bindings and numerous illustrations. The Knockabout Club, the Vassar girls, and the "Zigzags," all sought new portions of the globe during the year, in pursuit of new adventures and new material with which to delight their thousand readers. "The Zigzag Journeys in the Great Northwest" is an enthusiastic description of "the American Switzerland." Its beautiful mountains and valleys, its fertile plains and growing cities, and marvellous development, are graphically set forth. And with the account are many adventures of travel and legendary tales of the early explorers. "The Knockabout Club in North Africa" records a series of adventures which rival Stanley's experiences and the wildly imaginative stories of Rider Haggard. They include a trip along the coast of the Dark Continent, caravan journeys, a visit to a pirate city, and thrilling stories of lion hunting and life among the Moors. "Three Vassar Girls in Switzerland" embraces a romantic story of real life, besides its incidents of travel and its bits of Swiss life, and historic narratives and accounts of happenings at Geneva, Lucerne, and the Great St. Bernard. As usual, "Champ" contributes many characteristic illustrations. A delightful story for boys is offered in a handsome quarto, edited by Laurence H. Francis, called "Through Thick and Thin." English school life is the subject, and the hero is a "plucky" little fellow who, as "the new boy," goes through many trials and tribulations. For either boys or girls is Laura E. Richards' pathetic little sketch of a wall saved from a wreck, contained in "Captain January." "Star," the bewitching little heroine, is a fresh, original creature, and the old lighthouse-keeper, "Captain January," is a clever, humorous characterization. The story altogether is delightful, offering as many attractions to older readers as to the younger ones. The tiny inhabitants of the nursery, with their unceasing cry of "more" pictures, have been generously considered by this house. The most prominent of their annuals is the "Chatterbox for 1890," "Little Ones' Annual, vol. 9," "Oliver Optic's Annual, 1890," and "The Nursery—S." Not one falls behind previous years in its special attractions.

HARPER & BROS. again make the boys happy with one of Mr. Thomas W. Knox's pleasant journeys. This time it is the British Isles that are visited, and though the ground has often been gone over and described by others, Mr. Knox has succeeded in making a fresh, attractive volume. "The Boy Travellers in Great Britain and Ireland" follows a long line of illustrious predecessors. There are few parts of Europe, Asia, Africa or America that Frank Bassett and Fred. Bronson, "the boy travellers," have not investigated. Naturally, in the many years they have occupied in these delightful wanderings, they have not remained as young as when we first made their acquaintance. Here they are old enough to tell their own stories, and have read and studied sufficiently to draw from their own inner consciousness the facts and fauces their wanderings suggest. Dr. Bronson consequently withdraws into the background, and the boys, through their letters, diaries and conversations, become the chroniclers of the tour. Mrs. Bassett and Mary Bassett for the first time join the party, and are decided acquisitions. The landing is made at Queenstown, and Ireland is "done" thoroughly before Scotland, Wales and England are visited. The Hebrides and the Isle of Man are also embraced in the tour. A wealth of illustrations and a beautiful bright cover render the work most attractive in appearance to young eyes. Largely autobiographic and entirely reminiscent is Mr. W. D. Howells' "A Boy's Town," first written for the delectation of the readers of Harper's Young People. The "boy" is without a name, but he is such a boy as we have all known and liked—full of fun and mischief and full of romance, too, under his uncouth exterior. The town in which he lives is claimed to be an idealized picture of Mr. Howells' birthplace, as the "boy" is said to offer a perhaps idealized picture of his own childhood. Be it fact or fiction, however, the book is a delightful one that not only the boys will want, but all the many admirers of Mr. Howells writings. In its simplicity and quaint humor and intense realism it reminds one strongly of Aldrich's famous "Story of a Bad Boy," one of the immortal specimens of boy literature. "Freedom Triumphant" is the fourth volume added to Carleton Coffin's History of the Civil War for the Young. It concludes his history of the Civil War, which, though written primarily for young people, is adapted to older readers as well. Its many pertinent anecdotes, its brilliant descriptions and its copious illustrations make it one of the most attractive histories written of the late war.

HENRY HOLT & Co.'s "Young Folks' Cyclopedia of Games and Sports," compiled by John D. Champlin, Jr., and Arthur E. Bostwick, forms the third volume of the well known and popular Young Folks' Cyclopedia series. It is a compendium of all kinds of recreations, including indoor and outdoor games, athletic sports, simple chemical and mechanical amusements, and every similar thing that can interest a wide-awake boy or girl. Many modern American publications on sports and games are merely reprints of English books. This work has been written from the American standpoint, even such a game as Cricket being treated as it is played in this country. The alphabetical arrangement, the profusion and the practical usefulness of the illustrations, and the standard rules, which are given wherever possible, make this handsome volume a perfect treasure-house of information for the young and old of the domestic circle.

HOUGHTON, MIFFLIN & Co. have a charming new story by Kate Douglas Wiggin, "Timothy's Quest," as full of wit and pathos as the "Birds' Christmas Carol" and "The Story of Patsy," and though intended for older readers, it is equally interesting. The "quest" of Timothy—a boy of ten or twelve years—is for a mother for a little girl who has been his companion in the establishment of a wretched baby-farmer. They run away with a dog, and this book tells the story of their experiences and success. In connection with her sister, Miss Nora A. Smith, Mrs. Wiggin has written a little book of stories for young children, bearing the name of "The Story Hour." This is intended for families and for kindergartens. A new edition, at less price, has been published of "A Summer in a Cañon."

LEE & SHEPARD'S "Little Giant Boab and His Talking Raven Tabib" is a companion volume by the same author to that amusing extravaganza of the last holiday season, "Little Baron Trump and His Wonderful Dog Bulger." The hero of the story is the grandson of Boabdil the Moor, and the book is an account of his marvelous adventures. A talking raven and a scolding parrot supply an amusing element of comedy in a story that sometimes verges on the pathetic, though taken in its entirety the humor predominates. Clifton Johnson's illustrations are in sympathy with the story, and are charmingly eccentric. The third volume of The Blue and the Gray Series is entitled "On the Blockade." "Oliver Optic" carries forward his old characters, the many adventures of Christie Passford and his friends supplying excellent reading. The same impartial dealing with the facts of the late war, that was so popular a feature of the previous volumes of the series, is shown here. "Pards," by Effie W. Merriman, tells the story of two street arabs who went west in search of fortune and adventure. "The Kelp-Gatherers" is also a bright story for boys by J. T. Trowbridge. Two Maine boys go to the coast for their annual supply of seaweed and have several adventures. Several other good stories for boys and girls are "A Lost Jewel," by Harriet Prescott Spofford, "The Log of the Maryland, or, adventures at sea," by Capt. Douglas Frazar, and "Dorothy's Experience," by Adeline Trafton Knox. A little volume that will give pleasure to the very little ones is Mrs. C. S. Guild's "Hymns and Rhymes for Home and School."

THE J. B. LIPPINCOTT CO. are rich in illustrated quarto books for children between the ages of seven and twelve. "Told by the Fireside" and "Over the Sea" are a collection of stories by E. Nesbit, Helen Millman, Mrs. Campbell Praed, Edward Garrett and other well-known English writers. They are bound in illuminated boards and adorned with many full-page colored pictures and a number of designs in black and white. "Hearts and Voices," which is similar in general appearance to the above, consists of eight well-known "Songs of the Better Land," dear and familiar to every English-speaking child, lavishly illustrated. "Treasury of Pleasure Books" is for the wee tots just learning to read. It gives, along with many brilliant pictures in colors, the old stories of "Mother Hubbard," "Cock Robin," "Dick Worthington and His Cat," etc. Henry Frith and Hector Malot have remembered the boys in two capital books, full of instruction and entertainment. The first, "Triumphs of Modern Engineering," is a record of the latest and most interesting feats of our own and foreign engineers, compiled from authentic records as well as from Mr. Frith's own experience. Malot's "Roland Kalbris" received the highest prize in a competition for the best boys' book offered by the French Society. It relates the adventures of a fisherman's son in his search for a ship. "The Promised King," the story of the children's Saviour, by Annie R. Butler, and Mrs. A. L. Wister's volume of "German Fairy Tales" are sure to find many appreciative admirers. The latter contains a number of the most charming fairy-tales of Hackländer, George Blun and Louis Wahl, rendered into English in Mrs. Wister's most delightful manner.

LITTLE, BROWN & Co. call attention to a very pretty quarto rich in pictures and a charming text by Norah Perry, "Another Flock of Girls." There are a number of stories all about girls, written in that natural sympathetic style which has always made Norah Perry such a favorite with the school-girls just budding into womanhood. They all contain a little love-making, and some scenes from school life, and the first trials in home life each young girl considers so hard to bear. The titles of the stories show, too, that humor is not absent altogether in their composition. They are "May Bartlett's Stepmother," "Ju-Ju's Christmas Party," "A New Year's Call," "Jenny's Lark," and "Sally Green's Clambake Party." Messrs. Reginald B. Birch and Charles Copeland furnish the illustrative designs, which are specially happy.

LONGMANS, GREEN & Co. have issued "The Red Fairy-Book," as a companion to "The Blue Fairy-Book" of last year. This lovely collection of old and new fairy tales is edited by Andrew Lang and generously illustrated by H. J. Ford and Lancelot Speed. The very attractive "get-up" of the volume, and the character of the reading-matter make it a leading holiday volume for young people. Besides this they have a number of extremely pretty English tales in "twelvemo" volumes. "Nigel Browning," by Agnes Giberne, is for older readers and tells of a marriage made to cover up a guardian's defalcations; "The Beresford Prize," by L. T. Meade, relates to a hardly won scholarship in an English school. Mrs. Molesworth's "Story of a Spring Morning" is intended for children from eight to fourteen years of age. It is the story of the adventures of a party of truants in search of primroses early one April morning. "Hursleigh Dene," by Mrs. O'Reilly, relates to the plays of a party of children; "Snap," a legend of the Lone Mountain, tells of some English lads who came to America and led an adventurous life as cowboys.

D. LOTHROP CO.'s largest book in the way of juvenile reading is E. S. Brooks' "Great Cities of the World," though they have innumerable others equally as beautiful and desirable. Indeed this firm's list is so long and rich in reading, for young folks that we can only find space to call attention to their more prominent books. "Great Cities of the World" is also notable for its wealth of pictures and amount of reading-matter. Nearly one hundred of the largest cities of the world are described with pen and pencil. "The Lion City of Africa," by Willis Boyd Allen, is a beautifully-made book having for its subject the fascinating theme of "Darkest Africa." The author's story antedates Stanley's narrative, and is a delightfully clever combination of fact and fiction. While a great many of the descriptions are authentic, others are but the creation of the wildest imagination, but no less readable, nevertheless. This house is rich in stories

"WE ARE SO SORRY."

From "Another Flock of Girls." (Copyright, 1890, by Little, Brown & Co.)

York boy—such a one as begins life as a boot-black or a newsboy—is depicted in W. O. Stoddard's "Chuck Purdy." His successful career illustrates all the sterling qualities of a "plucky" but uneducated boy. "An Adirondack Cabin," by Margaret Sidney, is a brilliant book of travel, in which a large party of old and young people have varied experiences in the wonderful Wilderness. "Finding Blodgett," by George W. Hamilton, tells of the adventures of a boy and his dog. One of the brightest of historical story-tellers, Frances A. Humphrey, relates for the young-of adventures for boys. "A Real Robinson Crusoe," edited by J. A. Wilkinson, claims to be an authentic record of the adventures of a party of five who were cast away on a desert island. The story ends with a tragedy so thrilling and weird, that the hero who escaped to tell the tale would never let his name be known, confiding to Mr. Wilkinson, under the pledge of secrecy as to names, this wonderful narrative. "Wednesday the Tenth," by Grant Allen, being also a tale of the South Pacific, revels in shipwrecks, desert islands and unusual episodes of travel. Lieut. H. E. Rhoades, U. S. N., has written, from his own observation as an officer on board the U. S. S. Iroquois, "Around the World with the Blue-Jackets." The charm of a life on board a first-class man-of-war is little known to the rising generation. All its romance and adventure, with a good share of information of other countries, are to be found in Lieut. Rhoades' book. A real New est readers "How New England Was Made." It covers the ground from the days of Myles Standish to those of Israel Putnam and Ethan Allen. Frances Eaton, the author of one of the most successful of last season's juveniles, "A Queer Little Princess," offers to the little girls a new book, "Dollikins and the Miser." Its impetuous original little heroine is a most charming creation. Her softening influence upon the old miser recalls little "Lord Fauntleroy." "Little He and She," by Grace Denio Litchfield, and "Aunt Hannah, and Martha and John," by "Pansy" and Mrs. C. M. Livingston, are for an older class of readers. The nursery inmates will find no dearth of the bright-colored books, with any amount of the big pictures they so love to look at again and again, and the pretty rhymes and stories they love to have read to them. A new candidate for favor is "Rhymes for Little Readers," a new color-book from original water-colors.

by Miss A. W. Adams. All the juvenile periodicals of this house for 1890 offer annuals—"Pansy," "Wide Awake," "Babyland." In line with these are "Sunday Album for Boys and Girls," the "Wide-Awake Pleasure Books," "Animal Stories," "Baby's Annual," and many, many more.

A. C. McCLEUNG & Co. have prepared for the boys and girls a prettily bound and illustrated tale of the old days of Normandy, called "Sweet William," by Marguerite Bouvet. The pictures by Helen and Margaret Armstrong assist a spirited text in telling of the sad adventures of the little boy "Sweet William," who is shut up by his cruel uncle, Duke William, in the gloomy tower of Mount St. Michael. There is a charming little girl heroine, Lady Constance, who divides the interest of the story, and brightens the narrative considerably with her pretty sunny ways. "Eric, or, little by little," a tale of Roslyn School, by Rev. Frederick W. Farrar, is again a claimant for attention in a new illustrated ed. with many artistic designs by Gordon Browne.

MACMILLAN & Co.'s "Children of the Castle," by Mrs. Molesworth, with Walter Crane's illustrations, is a choice and delicate offering. Ruby and Mavis, twin sisters, who lived in an old English castle, are the little heroines. They have occasionally a mysterious visitor, whom their playmate Winfield calls the "Princess with the Forget-me-not-Eyes." The story tells how she takes them to a land of her own name, or, literally speaking, how they were brought to realize and remember their faults. The moral is so smothered in beautiful fancies, that the little ones will not find it an obstacle to the enjoyment of the fairy tale. "More Bye-Words," by Charlotte M. Yonge, and "Stories from the Bible," by Prof. A. J. Church, are also desirable Christmas books to which this firm calls attention.

THE METHODIST BOOK CONCERN (Hunt & Eaton) have a long list of neatly gotten-up "juveniles," which are all of a semi-religious character, but entertaining as well as instructive. They make good presents for Sunday-school scholars and Sunday-school libraries. "A Piece of Kitty Hunter's Life," by Mary E. Bamford, is full of encouragement to young girls thrown on their own resources; Baynell's "Carl and Violet" and Sarah Bradford's "Dominie" record the romances of two pairs of young lovers, with their attending trials and tribulations; "One Little Life," by Mary Lowe Dickinson, records the heart sufferings of the oldest daughter of a selfish, irritable minister, whose wife has exhausted her health in saving him from trouble and care; "A Little Leaven," by Elizabeth E. Holding, tells of the successful missionary efforts of three young girls; "Memoranda the Nautchnee" illustrates life in India and the experience of a woman missionary; "Maidie's Problem," by Margaret E. Sangster, tells how Maidie tried to find active work in her dull little village as a "King's Daughter;" Price's "Epworth League Workers" is rich in practical suggestions as to the management of young people's societies in the Methodist Church. There are many more also worth mentioning, if we had the space.

THOMAS NELSON & SONS are fortunate in having an unusual number of readable volumes for the young. Historical tales, books of adventure and travel, sweet English tales of home life with dainty little heroines and brave, manly little heroes, may be found among their publications to suit all ages and tastes. "Dorothy Arden" and "The Lost Ring" will tempt the older readers. In the first we have a graphic story of the dragonnades in France in the time of Louis XIV., and of the persecutions in England under James II., the Monmouth Rebellion, the Bloody Assize, and the Revolution. In the second a romance of Scottish history in the days of King James and Andrew Melville. For the same class of readers is "The Land Where Jesus Christ Lived," giving a historical and geographical account of Palestine. Aesop's quaint wisdom will never cease to attract and instruct old and young. His best-known fables are offered in "The Favorite Book of Fables," illustrated and in a characteristic cover, on which may be discovered the familiar miller, his son and his ass; the monkey and the cats, and other friends of our childhood. "Dora's Dolls' House," by the Hon. Mrs. Greene, and "Madge Hilton," by Agnes C. Maitland, are just the sort of books girls like to read—the first is for very small girls. "Beyond the Black Waters," by A. L. O. E., is one of this fascinating writer's most thrilling stories of the Andaman Islands, the convict settlement of Hindostan. The boys will find a treat in any of the following books: "Follow the Right," by G. E. Wyatt; "Smitten and Slain," a 19th century romance of life in China; "Jack and His Ostrich," an African story, by Eleanor Stredder, and "Charlie to the Rescue," a tale of the sea and the Rockies, by R. M. Ballantyne. Added to all these are "Pictures of the Childhood of Jesus," "The Favorite Nursery Album," "Sunday Picture Album," and many others too numerous to mention.

PORTER & COATES offer, in their well-known series for boys, three new volumes. They are all substantially bound "twelvemos" with illustrations. "Rodney the Partisan" is one of "Harry Castlemon's War Series." Rodney leaves school for his Southern home just as Fort Sumter is fired upon. He naturally joins the Southern army, though in time he learns to regret his choice. The events are such as would be witnessed by a Southern spectator. "Struggling Upward," by Horatio Alger, Jr., takes up a boy's life 'at school and carries him through the trials and temptations he encounters in his contact with the world. The boy is poor, but bright and honest. This is in The Way to Success Series. "Cabra in the Clearing," by Edward S. Ellis, in his Log-Cabin Series, tells of encounters with Indians and wild animals, and gives scenes from pioneer life in the West.

JAMES POTT & Co.'s juvenile books consist chiefly of very readable English stories, the illustrations being subordinate to the story. "Roger Willoughby," by W. H. G. Kingston, is a tale of adventure of the times of the famous Admiral Benbow; "The White Kangaroo," by E. Davenport Cieland, is a tale of Australia, and a boy and girl's life there; "Five, Ten and Fifteen," by the author of "Miss Toosey's Mission," opens with the baptism of a little boy and girl of opposite stations in life, their stories being continued to their fifteenth year. "About Bees: their history, habits and instincts," by Rev. F. G. Jenyns;

"Capt. Christie's Grand-daughter," by Ruth Lamb; "Elwyn Lloyd, or, how we all got on," by Ellinor J. Kelly; "Quite Unexpected," by Ismay Thorne, are a few of the names of the many others on their list.

THE PRESBYTERIAN BOARD OF PUBLICATION have their usual supply of excellent semi-religious stories. "Elsie Gray," by Belle S. Cragin, is a story of every-day life, with many telling lessons deducted from its trials and disappointments. "Sara Jane," by Julia McNair Wright, depicts a girl with one talent—that of making the best of things under all conditions. Her life in her aunt's boarding-house affords her ample opportunity for exercising her cheerful, hopeful disposition. Annie Maria Barnes' "Children of the Kalahari" is devoted to an account of the journeyings of the family of a martyred missionary through the Kalahari desert of Africa. Life in a missionary family in India is the subject of Mrs. Mary E. Metheney's "Philip St. John." "The Hand with the Keys," by Kate W. Hamilton, is a story for girls, and is in a large measure a temperance story. "At Edgeware" deals with school life. These are but a few of the books on the list of this house. All their publications, however, are so well known, that it is not possible to go astray in choosing.

G. P. PUTNAM'S SONS add another of the Rev. Alfred J. Church's scholarly studies of the old Roman and Greek life to the many volumes of his that they have already published for young readers. The title is "A Young Macedonian in the Army of Alexander the Great," the volume being attractively printed and illustrated with a number of outline sketches in color. A vivid description of the Olympian games ushers in the story and introduces the heroes, a young Greek and a Macedonian who have been contesting the prize in the boys' foot-race. The Macedonian gains the prize, but his adversary, challenging his right to it as a "barbarian," is obliged to yield it. When, some years after, the Macedonian, at the destruction of Thebes, had his opportunity for revenge, he spares the Theban; the two young men become ardent friends and follow Alexander through his long series of conquests in Persia, Egypt and Palestine. The narrative abounds in local color, and the character of Alexander, in both its strength and weakness, is admirably portrayed. For readers of the same age to whom Prof. Church addresses his books is the popular Story of the Nations Series. The latest volumes issued are Mackintosh's "Story of Scotland," which gathers within its covers almost as much romance as may be found in all of Sir Walter Scott's novels, and which is no doubt one of the most attractive volumes in reading-matter and in pictures of the whole series; and "The Story of Switzerland," by R. Stead and Mrs. Arnold Hug, a subject that also appeals to the imagination—the story of these heroic, loyal mountaineers, having always been one of lofty courage and high endeavor. The Putnams have added a new biographical series to their list, which has received universal recognition. It is called The Heroes of the Nation Series, and the volumes are popular in treatment, like the preceding series. The only volume thus far issued is "Gustavus Adolphus," by C. R. L. Fletcher, which, besides giving a biography of one of the world's great men, makes clear to young minds the part Sweden played in the Reformation and the thirty years' war of Germany.

A. D. F. RANDOLPH & Co.'s efforts in behalf of the little ones' happiness are confined to three books, "Under the Nursery Lamp," a dainty volume of fugitive verses about the little ones, "Prince Dimple," a graceful fairy tale told by Mrs. Paull, and "Annet Dorothy," a story of old Virginia plantation life, by Mrs. Margaret J. Preston.

FLEMING H. REVELL has a novelty for children in the "Little Artist's Painting-Book," over which they may spend many happy winter evenings. It consists of colored studies of children at play, illustrative of sea-shore and country life, in simple colors, the whole repeated in outline for filling in from the paint-box. Mrs. Morton's "Story of Jesus" adapts the life of Christ to the comprehension of children of four years and under. It is a lovely book, printed in colors. "Our Little Dot's Picture Scrap-Books," first and second series, are handsome quartos, in illuminated covers. Each series is generously illustrated, there being just enough descriptive letterpress to suggest an interesting story with each picture. Stories of animals and birds, conveying some good lessons in an enticing manner, are offered in Mary E. Ropes' "Talkative Friends in Field, Farm and Forest;" "Home Handicrafts," by Charles Peters, the editor of "The Girl's Own Indoor Book," is a most useful and entertaining work for intelligent girls. It tells them about repoussé brass-work, tile-painting, bookbinding, glass-painting and staining, tapestry-painting and many other kinds of art-work with which to occupy their leisure hours. This firm has a number of excellent series in bright bindings and with many pictures, as The Young Folks Series, the A. L. O. E. Intermediate Library, and the A. L. O. E. Junior Library, and the Kingston Series, etc. The juvenile publications of the London Religious Tract Society, for which they are agents in this country, embrace many very desirable books at very reasonable prices. Among the later issues are "Peter's Sister," by Janet Eden; "The Hartley Brothers," by A. L. O. E.; "Alone in London," by Hesba Stretton; "Farmer Bluff's Dog Blazer," by Florence E. Burch; "Myrtle and Rue," by Margaret Scott Haycraft; "Not by Bread Alone," and Kingston's "Ronald Morton, or, the fire-ships," a story of the last naval war of England.

ROBERTS BROS.' books for the young people are as usual uniformly good. Lily F. Wesselhoeft, who in two previous years won young readers' hearts with "Sparrow, the Tramp" and "Flipping, the Spy," is represented by a charming production which she calls "The Winds, the Woods, and the Wanderer." It is in the nature of a fable—the winds and the trees taking part in the story, as the birds and animals do in the first-named stories. The little hero is a gifted boy with an artistic temperament, thrown among people who cannot appreciate him. In "Dear Daughter Dorothy," by Miss A. G. Plympton, is offered one of the quaintest and wisest of little heroines. Her pretty tender ways with her young father, her sympathy with him in his misfortunes, and her wise counsels at all times, inspire the deepest love and admiration. "Zoe" is one of the pathetic little tales the author of "Miss Toosey's Mission" knows so well how to write. It appeals equally to young and old, modestly suggesting its lessons of love and charity. Mrs.

Moulton's new volume, "Stories Told at Twilight," is in line with "Bedtime Stories" and "Twilight Stories." The stories are from every-day life, and are for either boys or girls. They are cleverly illustrated by H. Winthrop Pierce. "In My Nursery" is a delightful collection of new rhymes, chimes and jingles for children, by Laura E. Richards. Her fresh, original humor enlivens every page. "The Drifting Island" is a sequel to "Kibboo Ganey," published last year. Walter Wentworth introduces the same characters again, and carries them once more to the heart of Africa. There are enough hunting adventures and dangerous encounters with the natives to please the most exacting boy. "Thine, not Mine," by William Everett, was also written for boys, and there is a new edition of two of his previous stories, "Changing Base" and "Double Play." Anne Richardson Earle has written a story for girls, "Her Great Ambition," which is rich in sound advice. It illustrates the career of a young girl who, without any great talent, desired to be an artist. Her experience is very true to life and well worth young ambitious girls' attention.

GEORGE ROUTLEDGE & SONS' Christmas books come, as usual, in a bewildering variety. "Grand Army Picture-Book," by Hugh Craig, and "Great African Travellers, from Mungo Park to the Rescuing of Emin Pacha by Stanley," by the same writer, are fresh and instructive. The first gives an account of many of the chief events of the late war, illustrating them with full-page colored pictures. The second briefly epitomizes the story of African exploration. In "A Rough Shaking" George Macdonald has written a story which he dedicates to his great-nephew. In the opening chapter two old men meet in a beautiful English country lane and exchange thoughts about many things, and especially about the erroneous thoughts men and women have about animals, and how important it is for all men that animals should be kindly treated. One of the old men is named Clare Skymer, and from the facts told by him Macdonald constructs the story of his boyhood and youth, and tells a story calculated to inspire noble, manly thoughts in healthy boys. Clare Skymer is adopted by an English lady and gentleman travelling in the Riviera, Italy, who find him sitting by the body of his dead mother, who has been killed by an earthquake shock, from which the book takes its name, "A Rough Shaking." His kind friends die within a short time of each other and Clare is left in charge of their girl baby. His efforts to earn a living form the interest of a story bringing in all George Macdonald's peculiar views on immortality. The pictures in the book are by W. Parkinson, and are bright and pretty. Lynds E. Jones has collected, under the title of "Outdoor Sports for Boys and Girls," information about such games as have proved their popularity, and as seem especially adapted to the taste of young Americans. The less strong children have not been forgotten in this admirable collection of games, many being included as particularly sulted to their needs. "Swiss Family Robinson" and "Robinson Crusoe"—that many, many generations of children have read and enjoyed—are issued in beautiful new editions. They could not be in more attractive shape, and are certainly destined to delight many more young hearts this holiday season with their deeply romantic stories, their rich bindings and generous collection of colored pictures. "Little Great-Grandmother," by Mrs. Herbert Martin, and "Rosebud," by Jeanie Hermy, are excellent books for girls, and contain each a good story. "Little Wide-Awake for 1891," edited by Mrs. Sale Barker, will be hailed with many acclamations of admiration. Grace Aguilar's "Mother's Recompense"—that pathetic story of a most beautiful home life—is offered in a new shape. This house makes a specialty of colored toy-books cut into various odd shapes. Among their newest ones are "Old Mother Goose," "House that Jack Built," "Noah's Ark Painting-Book," "Frog Who Would a-Wooling Go."

CHARLES SCRIBNER'S SONS offer no new book in juvenile literature of a specially holiday character. "Against Heavy Odds," by Hjalmar Hjorth Boyesen, occupies a middle ground between reading for young people and for grown folks. A boy would enjoy it though. It relates the adventures of Ingomar Vang, a brave Norwegian lad, and his manly, courageous and successful fight against adverse fortune. The illustrations are in Mr. W. L. Taylor's best style. Several of their old books, however, that have proved their popularity are out in new dresses. Mrs. Burton Harrison's "Bric-à-Brac Stories," with Crane's illustrations, may be had in a cheaper edition. These delightful fairy tales are already known to a wide circle of little readers. No mistake can be made in purchasing the volume for the little ones still unacquainted with it. And those standard works for boys and girls, "The American Girl's Handy Book" and "The American Boy's Handy Book," are again candidates for favor. The first book has been reduced in price, and the second considerably enlarged, with accounts of new games, sports, etc.

SCRIBNER & WELFORD have not yet exhausted the "Henty" books, of which the boys are so fond, with their fascinating mixture of fact and fiction. The latest ones are "By England's Aid," a continuation of "By Pike and Dyke," showing how England helped, between the years 1585 and 1604, in the freeing of the Netherlands. The heroes are two English lads, who go out to the Netherlands under one of the "Fighting Veres." "By Right of Conquest" is a chronicle of adventure with Cortez in Mexico; "Maori and Settler" is a story of the New Zealand war; and "A Chapter of Adventures" carries the young reader through the bombardment of Alexandria. Other books that this firm offers for the holiday season are "Twixt School and College," a tale of self-reliance, by Gordon Stables; "Hussein the Hostage, or, a boy's adventures in Persia," by G. Norway; "The Secret of the Old House," by Evelyn Everett Green; "Hal Hungerford," being the strange adventures of a boy emigrant, by J. Hutchinson; and "The Golden Weathercock," by Julia Goddard.

FREDERICK A. STOKES CO. may always be depended upon for something artistic in children's color-books. Their leading book is "Baby Sweethearts." It is a large folio in size, bound in gray and having a lovely little yellow-haired "Sweetheart," dressed in blue, as a cover design. There are twelve full pages of illustrations in colors by Maud Humphrey, representing children in picturesque groups or scenes. Each of these pages is accompanied by a separate page, with original verses of child life by Helen Gray Cone, printed in connection with novel outline sketches of children, flowers, etc., also by Miss Humphrey. "Bonnie Little People" and "Tiny Toddlers" are two volumes made up from the same text and illustrations as "Baby Sweethearts." These are most attractive works, the little "sweethearts" being among the prettiest little "tots" recently celebrated in the Christmas fine art color-book. Anna M. Pratt's "Flower Folk" is a collection of favorite flowers represented as living people. The plates are in colors and in monotypes. "Two Little Tots on Their Way Through the Year" pictures two airy little creatures "that scarce had slipped their angel wings," through the colds of winter and the heats of summer. The designs are very pretty and graceful and the best yet seen from Pauline Suter. They are in imitation of water-colors. Josephine Pollard furnishes a dozen or more verses. "A Loyal Little Red-Coat," by Ruth Ogden, is a story for the older ones. New York a hundred years ago, and the life of a child, Hazel Boniface, a little Loyalist at that period, is graphically portrayed, the majority of the incidents being historical. The pictures are quite numer-ture their hearts both through their gay attire and the charming familiarity of their contents. "The Courtship and Marriage of Cock Robin and Jenny Wren" are described in a series of brilliantly colored pictures by Jessie Watkins; "Piggy Wiggy's Picture-Book" contains four familiar nursery rhymes charmingly materialized; "Monsieur Pouf," by E. L. Shute, a color-book ous and in black and white, being the work of H. A. Ogden. The second of a series of sequels to "The Bessie Books" may be found in Miss Mathews' "Maggie Bradford's School-Mates," which continues the stories of Grace Howard, Fanny Leroy and Maggie and Bessie Bradford, of whom we learned so much in "Maggie Bradford's Club."

MARCUS WARREN's color-books are the kind that the "tiny" ones perfectly revel in. They cap-of about the same size as the foregoing, narrates in a style to please the nursery the adventures of a poodle-dog and his children friends. Cut in the shape of the title are "This Little Pig," "The Old Woman and Her Pig," "This is the House that Jack Built," and "The Frog that Would a-Wooling Go." Their quaint shapes and merry contents of "doggerel" and pictures especially fit them for the Christmas stocking.

WARD & DRUMMOND's contribution to the young people's book shelf is a temperance tale by Thomas W. Knox, entitled "Teetotaler Dick." The scene is laid in Liberty, a New England town, and the story has both a bright and a sad side. While the horrors of intemperance are vividly depicted, the advantages of abstinence from alcoholic beverages are illustrated in the happy homes and contented lives of several of the characters.

WARD, LOCK & Co. include several volumes of adventures, especially adapted to the needs of boys, in their Christmas juveniles, edited by the famous English war correspondent, G. A. Henty — "Stories of Sea and Land," "Stories of History," "Stories of Peril and Adventure," "Stories of Brave Lads and Gallant Heroes," "The Adventures of Two Brave Lads," which includes the interesting story of "The Heir of Langridge Towers," by R. M. Fresman, dealing with the civil war of the time of Charles I., and "Stirring Adventures Afloat and Ashore." "Dicky Beaumont," also a new book of adventure for boys, describes the life of an English midshipman of to-day. It is from the pen of Arthur Lee Knight, the author of "The Mids of the Rattlesnake." "Half-Hours of Scientific Amusement," taken from the French of Gaston

Tissandler by Henry Frith, is rich in entertainment for the home circle. It is a collection of interesting scientific experiments, nearly all of which can be readily performed by an unskilled person who will carefully follow out the directions given. "How to Read Character in Handwriting," by Henry Frith, illustrates in a very Breton coast village, where he was washed ashore. The love of the little lads for each other, which finally brought together, is very pathetic, producing a story which may be ranked with some Mrs. Ewing's masterpieces. "Young English Nursery Tales," illustrated by Constance Hamwood, is a dainty, pretty offering in colors or clever and amusing way by a number of autographs and specimens of handwriting peculiarities of character which are shown by a person's penmanship. "Dolly's Home" is a colored toy-book.

FREDERICK WARNE & Co.'s "Little Sir Nicholas" is their leading "juvenile." It is a story of two boy claimants to a baronetcy, one of whom is believed to have been drowned at sea, but is discovered by a friend of the family in a number of the fairy tales known to the little children of many centuries. "Aunt Louisa's Fifth Book for Children," for mothers and nurses use, consists of alphabets, short and easy words, rhymes, tales, etc., easily progressive. "Doll Story-Book" is a doll's account of her travels in doll-land, and is illustrated with amusing pictures in colors of dolls in many funny situations. "Heart of Gold," by L. T. Meade, is a story for girls with a slight love-story, which is interesting because it involves the fate of one of and the honor of another; "Scout's Head," by Frederick Langbridge, and "By Land and Sea," by Dr. Gordon Stables, are, as their titles indicate, rich in thrilling adventures. This house makes a specialty of indestructible books and books in the shapes of animals, etc., as "A Day at the Zoo," a panorama of animals with movable cages and cut-out animals. "The Wild Beast Show," "The Railway Train," etc.

THOMAS WHITTAKER caters more to the reading children than to those who care chiefly for pretty pictures. One of Charlotte M. Yonge's stories, "The Slaves of Sabinus," opens A.D. '71 and gives a good picture of the Christian Church in the time of the Roman Emperor Vespasian. "Too Late for the Tide-Mill," by the Rev. E. A. Rand, is a pointed lesson at procrastination; "A Houseful of Girls," by Sarah Tytler, is a most attractive story of English middle-class life, with a half dozen lovely girls as heroines; "The Locked Desk," by Frances Mary Peard, is an historical tale; "The Young Castaways, or, the child-hunters of Patagonia," by Lady Florence Dixie, is rich in adventure, as is also "The Crew of the Water Wagtail," a tale of Newfoundland, by R. M. Ballantyne. "Peckover's Mill," by the author of "Starwood Hall," is a tale of the great frost of 1739. These are the more important stories on this publisher's list, though others could be named.

THE WORTHINGTON CO. have long been noted for their colored art-books for children. The new book this year in this line is "Wee Toys," by Ida Waugh. It consists of original designs most beautifully colored of children and babies. Miss Amy Blanchard supplies as text a number of "taking" rhymes. They have also a new series of colored picture-books, by Ida Waugh and Amy Blanchard, consisting of "Mamma's

United Tourist Club, conducted by T. Bromfield, made one of their "conversational tours" during the year through America. An account of the places visited are contained in "The Land We Live In." The Yosemite Valley, Niagara Falls, Baby," "The Butterfly," "Bless It," "Baby Blossom," "Tell Me a Story," and "Tangles and Curis." These are thinner books than "Wee Tots," but, like that pretty volume, a perfect picture-gallery of babies—white and colored, fat and thin, laughing babies, crying babies, quaint little tots at play with dogs and cats, and bright little maids just emerging from babyhood. The Junior the Yellowstone Park, Lake George, and many other noted places, are described and illustrated with many cuts. Under the National Series of Juveniles this house has grouped a number of their quarto juveniles of easy reading and abundant pictures. They are called "The White House Gift-Book," "Christopher Columbus Gift-Book," "George Washington Gift-Book," and

"Worthington's History of the United States," "Worthington's Annual for 1891," "Worthington's Sunday-Book," and "Worthington's Album," are as rich as usual in full-page pictures and amusing and instructive reading. Two books of sterling value for boys are G. A. Henty's "In the Reign of Terror" and "A Tale of Waterloo."

E. & J. B. Young & Co.'s publications are in the line of readable story-books—tales of adventures and of quiet English homes. The more important ones are "Dorothy the Dictator," by Annette Lyster, which relates the faults and trials of a young girl as housekeeper to her brother, the curate of St. Claudias. Helen Ship-ton's "Love and Justice" portrays the humanizing effects of a little child upon a deformed boy; "Mars' George" is another of G. Manville Fenn's lively stories of a boy's adventures in the old Savannahs. The time is in the days of King George II., after the settlement of Georgia by Oglethorpe. The young hero is supposed to be one of the small band of followers that cast its lot with the General. "Coral and Coconut" is the cruise of the yacht Firefly to Samoa, by F. Frankford Moore. Woven in with an interesting story are graphic descriptions of Apia before the last Samoan troubles, the customs of the natives, ways of living, etc. "Twelve Tiny Tales," by Mrs. Molesworth, is a charming little book in colors for the inmates of the nursery. Worth looking at also are "Home Life on an Ostrich Farm," by Annie Martin, "Cecily's Birds," by the author of "Our Valley," "Rocked in the Cradle of the Deep," by Dr. Gordon Stables, etc. The latter is a wonderful collection of adventures by sea and land. "Sunday for 1891" is full of excellent pictures and reading. The long line of juvenile publications of the Society for Promoting Christian Knowledge, which is included in this house's catalogue, offers unlimited opportunities for selection of low-priced first-class books.

Specialties.

W. E. CLARKE & Co., Boston, have a treat for devotees to whist in a "Whist Calendar," with selections pertinent to the game compiled by Robert Fuller.

E. P. DUTTON & Co. have never yet succeeded in supplying the demand for the remarkably pretty calendars and booklets which they always provide for the holidays. A special feature has this year been made of calendars, and the house shows forty new designs for these ever popular and useful souvenirs. We briefly mention "Through the Year," "The Shakespearian Year," "The Circling Year," "The Fan Calendar," and "Times and Seasons" as specially notable.

HOUGHTON, MIFFLIN & Co.'s Calendars, made up of selections from Emerson, Hawthorne, Holmes, Longfellow, Lowell and Whittier, have all grown a year older and changed their useful and often-consulted dates to the schedule of 1891. Two new calendars are added, made up from Robert Browning's and Mrs. Whitney's writings.

W. R. JENKINS has several little French calendars, with quotations from best authors, neatly gotten up and very useful as gifts to young ladies first beginning to be proud of their fluent French.

LEE & SHEPARD have this year a calendar made from entirely new designs, and in a new shape, which they think surpasses all the many, many favorites of years gone by in interest and beauty. It is called "All Around the Year for 1891," is designed in sepia tint and color by J. Pauline Sunter, and printed on heavy cardboard with gilt edges, chain, tassels and ring.

NIMS & KNIGHT have lithographed calendars entitled "The Cozy Corner Calendar," "The Calendar of the Months," "The Seasons Calendar," and "The Palette Calendar," a white palette, $9\frac{1}{4}$ by 13 inches, with male and female figures, and border in colors by French artists. In-etched calendars the most important are "Good Luck Calendar," "Ye Antique Almanac for 1891," and "The Races of 1891," a tiding calendar in which each month is represented by a sail-boat with dates printed on the flying canvas.

L. PRANG & Co. have as large a selection of calendars as ever, and their long line of shaped books again ready, to which have been added "A Christmas Plum Pudding," with twelve illustrations in monochrome, and "The Story of a Dory," told in verse by Edward Everett Hale, both picturesquely illustrated by F. Schnyder Mathews. Among their new fine art pictures are four sketches of negro character by J. H. Moser; "The Intruder," by A. F. Tait; "School In," by J. H. Dolph; "Right or Left," a lawn scene, "Playing School," by Ida Waugh, and "I'm a Daisy," the portrait of a very cunning prize baby.

FLEMING H. REVELL's calendars and booklets are so numerous as only to permit of the brief mention of one or two of the most notable of the newest publications. "The Blue Bell" and "The Mountain Daisy" are daily text-books for a year; the calendars for 1891 include "Our Onward Way," Scripture Texts and "All the Year Through," collections from Martin F. Tupper. This firm have long lines known as "Popular Enamel Texts," "Easel Texts," and other innumerable cards and booklets suitable for home, school or hospital. A "Colored Bible Picture-Roll" for nursery and school walls is made of a set of twelve colored pictures on paper with narratives in very large type under each picture.

THE FREDERICK A. STOKES Co. have several calendars, intended specially for children, which are noticed in the department of Books for the Young. Among books of this order prepared for older people are the "McVickar Calendar," twelve fac-similes of drawings of society life, by H. W. McVickar, printed in colors and tint; "Merry Months Calendar," six designs of cupids in colors by Mrs. J. Pauline Sunter, and the "New York Calendar," illustrated by E. G. Carrings, fastened with rings.

HAVE READY

A New Champlin Young Folks' Cyclopædia.

Young Folks' Cyclopædia of Games and Sports.

By JOHN D. CHAMPLIN, JR., and ARTHUR E. BOSTWICK. Illustrated. 12mo, $2.50.

This book, forming a third volume of the well-known "Young Folks' Cyclopædia" series, is intended to be a compendium of all kinds of recreations, including indoor and outdoor games, athletic sports, simple chemical and mechanical amusements, and every similar thing that can interest a wide-awake boy or girl. Where standard rules are accessible, they have been given word for word, thus making the book valuable as a work of reference for adults in case of dispute. Other features are the introduction of a brief historical sketch at the end of each article, the description of some foreign varieties of many of the games, and the attempt at a thorough system of etymology and derivation of all technical terms, as in the preceding volumes of the series.

This work has been written from the American standpoint, even such a game as Cricket being treated as it is played in this country.

Perry's History of Greek Literature.

By THOMAS SERGEANT PERRY, author of "English Literature in the XVIII. Century," etc.
Beautifully illustrated and elaborately bound.

A philosophical account of the growth of Greek literature, and of its relations to the physical surroundings and political and social history of the people. In this setting appear the outlines of the great masterpieces, with English translations of their more interesting or representative passages.

It is believed that the man who knows little or no Greek may by this book put himself in closer contact with the spirit of Greek literature than most students of the language have attained; and also that the college-bred man, who got from his study of these classics in the original but faint and distorted views of their beauties, will here find assistance in extending and organizing his knowledge.

The value of the work is greatly increased by the free use of elaborate and beautiful illustrations from ancient works and restorations.

THE RED FAIRY-BOOK.

Edited by ANDREW LANG. With 4 plates and 96 illustrations in the text by H. J. Ford and Lancelot Speed. Crown 8vo, cloth, gilt, 380 pages, $2.00.

. The great success of "The Blue Fairy-Book" last year has led Mr. Lang to make a second collection of tales and legends chosen from the less known fields of Fairy-lore.

CONTENTS: The Twelve Dancing Princesses—The Princess Mayblossom—Soria Moria Castle—The Death of Koschei the Deathless—The Black Thief and Knight of the Glen—The Master Thief—Brother and Sister—Princess Rosette—The Enchanted Pig—The Norka—The Wonderful Birch—Jack and the Beanstalk—The Good Little Mouse—Graciosa and Percinet—The Three Princesses of Whiteland—The Voice of Death—The Six Sillyies—Kari Woodengown—Drakestail—The Ratcatcher—The True History of Little Goldenhood—The Golden Branch—The Three Dwarfs—Dapplegrim—The Enchanted Canary—The Twelve Brothers—Rapunzel—The Nettle Spinner—Farmer Weatherbeard—Mother Holle—Minnikin—Bushy Bride—Snowdrop—The Golden Goose—The Seven Foals—The Marvellous Musician—The Story of Sigurd.

THE BLUE FAIRY-BOOK.

Edited by ANDREW LANG. With 136 illustrations by H. J. Ford and G. P. Jacomb-Hood. Crown 8vo, gilt edges, ornamental blue and gold cover, 390 pages, $2.00.

"There could hardly be a better collection of fairy stories. Mr. Lang has picked from every source, rewritten, condensed, and adapted them until each is perfect in itself, and all together form a model story-book."—Christian Union.

"No house where there are children should be without 'The Blue Fairy Book.'"—Albany Express.

VOCES POPULI. Reprinted from "Punch."

By F. ANSTEV, author of "Vice Versa," "The Pariah," etc. With illustrations by J. Bernard Partridge. Fcp. 4to, half cloth, $1.75.

. The author of the "Tinted Venus" and the illustrator of "Stage Land" have joined forces to make one of the most amusing books of the season. It gives a series of entertaining views of English society.

THE HOUSE OF THE WOLF: A Romance.

By STANLEY J. WEYMAN. Crown 8vo, cloth, $1.25.

"It is brief, vigorous, and exciting, and the characters, though very much the reverse of commonplace, seem literally to breathe and move."—JAMES PAYN, in "The Independent."

"From the purely artistic point of view as well as in regard to its genuine interest the book is almost without a flaw."—Boston Beacon.

THE PHILOSOPHY OF FICTION. An Essay.

By DANIEL GREENLEAF THOMPSON, author of "A System of Psychology," "The Problem of Evil," "The Religious Sentiments of the Human Mind," etc. 12mo, 240 pages, cloth, gilt top, $1.50.

. Most of the recent abundant discussion of the art of fiction has been about details. Mr. Thompson treats the subject with philosophic thoroughness, inquiring into the principles of the art and into its scientific, moral, and æsthetic value.

THE STORY OF MUSIC. (Second Edition Revised.) By WILLIAM J. HENDERSON. 12mo, ornamental cloth cover, gilt top, $1.25.

"Unique in its comprehensiveness and remarkable for the clear and concise way in which a great mass of material is treated in its pages. No one who is interested in the study of music will fail to read every chapter of 'The Story of Music' after beginning it."—New York Times.

POLITICAL AMERICANISMS. By CHARLES LEDYARD NORTON. 16mo, ornamental cloth cover, 240 pages. (Immediately.)

. Col. Chas. Ledyard Norton's "Political Americanisms," as originally published in the Magazine of American History, was a distinctly novel study in this department of words and phrases. It attracted favorable notice on both sides of the Atlantic, and has been extensively quoted in many of the large dictionaries since issued.

WHEN WE WERE BOYS.

By WILLIAM O'BRIEN, M.P. With portrait and autograph letter stating that this is the only edition authorized by Mr. O'Brien. Third and cheaper edition, crown 8vo, cloth, 556 pages, $1.00.

"So good an Irish tale has not appeared before in many years. . . . The descriptive passages are remarkably strong, and the action and conversation are alike lively."—N. Y. Herald.

"The novel is embellished with sparkling wit, breezy humor, historic reference, moving pathos, graceful fancy, keen logic and flowing diction. The book has all the dash and spirit of the man who wrote it. An author who is at once the first of Irish journalists, the best of Irish orators; . . . the typical Irishman of Ireland's dreams. . . . Such a man certainly could not write a book save one of boundless interest and lasting merit."—Buffalo Union and Times.

MICAH CLARKE: His Statement. By A. CONAN DOYLE. Crown 8vo, 421 pages, extra cloth, $1.50.

"'Micah Clarke' is a noticeable book, because it carries the reader out of the beaten track; it makes him now and then hold his breath with excitement; it presents a series of vivid pictures, and paints two capital portraits; and it leaves upon the mind the impression of well-rounded symmetry and completeness. . . . The novel with which 'Micah Clarke' challenges comparison is 'Lorna Doone'; and as a work of art we may well consider it to be superior."—R. E. PROTHERO, in "The Nineteenth Century" for August, 1889.

THE CAPTAIN OF THE "POLESTAR"; And Other Tales. By A. CONAN DOYLE, author of "Micah Clarke." Crown 8vo, $1.50.

"Lovers of wild adventure, of brilliant satire, of quiet pathos, will all find wherewith to be content in this book."—Athenæum.

SNAP: A Legend of the Lone Mountain. By C. PHILLIPPS WOLLEY, author of "Sport in the Crimea and Caucasus." With 13 full-page illustrations by H. G. WILLINK. Crown 8vo, $1.50.

"One of the best books that has been written for boys for a number of years."—Public Opinion.

POPULAR HOLIDAY BOOKS.

Gray's Elegy and Its Author.

The text of Gray's Elegy in a Country Churchyard, and an introductory essay by Dr. J. L. Williams, illustrated by twenty-five photogravures and half-tone illustrations. This immortal poem is now for the first time presented with illustrations in photogravure and half-tone, which are exact representations of the identical scenes so vividly and truthfully described by the poet. The original photographs from which the reproductions are made were taken by Dr. J. L. Williams, who has chosen with true artistic instinct the scenes best calculated to illustrate the poem as well as the home and haunts of the poet. 1 vol., oblong quarto, fancy cloth, gilt edges, $5.00; full flexible seal, gilt edges, $8.00.

Hawthorne's Legends of the Province House.

The four tales by Hawthorne, the scenes of which are laid in the famous old Province House, entitled Howe's Masquerade, Edward Randolph's Portrait, Lady Eleanor's Mantle, Old Esther Dudley, have been selected by Mr. Frank T. Merrill for his most ambitious illustrations. The work is thoroughly illustrated with full-page plates and illustrations in the text. 1 vol., quarto, cl., gilt edge, size 9 x 12, $6.00; full tree calf or morocco, $12.00.

The Christmas Carol.

By Charles Dickens. Illustrated by the celebrated artists, I. M. Gauguin and T. V. Chominski. This most popular of all of Dickens' Christmas stories, with the superb illustrations and the unique binding, makes the finest and most appropriate present obtainable. 1 vol., quarto, cloth, gilt top, size 9½ x 11½, $6.00; full morocco or tree calf, $12.00.

Rip Van Winkle.

By Washington Irving. Illustrated by Frank T. Merrill. This most popular story by Irving has been superbly illustrated by Mr. Merrill. The forty or fifty photogravures and other illustrations are printed in appropriate tints. 1 vol., quarto, cloth, gilt edges, size 9½ x 12, $6.00; full tree calf or morocco, $12.00.

Song Birds and Seasons.

By André Theuriet, with nearly 100 illustrations of bird life engraved on wood from originals by Hector Giacomelli. This book is a translation from the French of Theuriet's "Nos Oiseaux." The text is altogether charming in style, and the illustrations exquisite. 1 vol., octavo, with handsome surah sateen lithographed cover, $4.00.

Woffington. A Tribute to the Actress and the Woman.

By Augustin Daly. This memoir of the celebrated actress, Peg Woffington, was issued two years ago in a limited edition of 150 copies for private distribution by the author. A new edition, limited to 500 copies, is now offered to bookbuyers and the trade. It will be a handsome volume in every particular, carefully printed on the best paper, with many portraits and other illustrations in photogravure. 1 vol., quarto, bound in handsome cloth, gilt top, uncut edges, net, $5.00.

Her Garden.

A memorial poem to Helen Jackson (H. H.), and a brief introductory note, both by Susan Coolidge. Illustrated with 6 hand-painted flower designs from originals by Alice Stewart Hill. 1 vol., quarto, size 9½ x 11½, bound in handsome decorated boards, $3.00.

Rocky Mountain Wild Flowers.

Nine dainty hand-painted flower designs of Colorado wild flowers, from originals by Alice Stewart Hill. Brief descriptive text from Helen Jackson's "Procession of Flowers in Colorado," by permission of the publishers. 1 vol., quarto, size 9½ x 11½, bound in handsome decorated boards, $4.00.

Tenting on the Old Camp-Ground.

Words and music by Walter Kittredge. 29 illustrations by Charles Copeland. Drawn, engraved and printed under the supervision of A. V. S. Anthony at the University Press, Cambridge. LITTLE, BROWN & CO., Publishers,

NEW PUBLICATIONS.

A Great Novel—WITH FIRE AND SWORD.

THIS brilliant historical romance is attracting the widest attention, and is universally praised. The character of Zagloba is one of the raciest and most remarkable in the whole range of fiction. As an illustration of the great variety and scope of the author's genius, it may be mentioned that he has already been compared by American critics to Dumas, Walter Scott, Schiller, Cervantes and Shakespeare. A work which compels such comparisons is unquestionably a remarkable one, and a perusal of the story amply justifies the praise which has thus far been lavished upon it.

WITH FIRE AND SWORD. An Historical Novel of Extraordinary Interest and Power, now first translated into English from the Polish of Henryk Sienkiewicz, by Jeremiah Curtin, author of "Myths and Folk-Lore of Ireland," "Myths and Folk-Tales of the Russians, Western Slavs and Magyars," etc. Crown 8vo. cloth, 795 pages, $2.00.

Also a New Library Edition, printed on choice paper. Two vols., 12mo, cloth, gilt top, with portrait of the author, $3.00.

The Scene—Poland and Russia. The Time—1648–1651.

What is Said of "With Fire and Sword."

"A great book. . . . A dozen reviews could not do justice to this story unless they were columns in length."
—Pittsburg Bulletin

"One of the most brilliant historical novels ever written."
—Christian Union.

"A romance which once read is not easily forgotten."
—Literary World.

"There is an Homeric spirit in his descriptions."
—Providence Journal.

"The only modern romance with which it can be compared, for fire, sprightliness, rapidity of action, swift changes, and absorbing interest, is the 'Three Musketeers' of Dumas."
—New York Tribune.

"A great novel. He exhibits the sustained power and sweep of narrative of Walter Scott, and the humor of Cervantes."
—Philadelphia Inquirer.

"Altogether uncommon, . . . one of the noblest works of historical romance ever written in any language."
—The Pilot.

SOME AMERICAN PAINTERS IN WATER-COLORS.

A companion to the remarkably successful collection entitled, "Fac-similes of Aquarelles by American Artists."

Water-color paintings by various prominent artists have been reproduced in almost perfect fac-simile.

Each one of the reproductions is well worthy of framing, and when framed could hardly be distinguished from a water-color.

Text by RIPLEY HITCHCOCK, author of "Etching in America," "Madonnas by Old Masters," etc., etc.

Size of page, 15 x 20 inches.

The artists represented are:

WILLIAM T. SMEDLEY, ROSINA EMMET SHERWOOD, MRS. J. PAULINE SUNTER, LEON MORAN, WALTER L. PALMER, JAMES M. BARNESLEY, J. L. GEROME FERRIS, MAUD HUMPHREY.

The text accompanying each fac-simile is beautifully printed in connection with a portrait of the artist, and a reproduction of a black-and-white sketch by the artist in each case.

I. Edition de Luxe.

First impressions from the original stones, with remarque in colors, and the signature of the artist, in each case forming an artist-proof edition.

These proofs and the accompanying text are enclosed in a portfolio of a rich, embossed dark brown material, with wide back of levant.

In a panel on the front cover is a part of one of the fac-similes in colors.

The portfolio is tied with silk floss, and is in a box.

This edition is strictly limited to 250 copies, each of which is signed and numbered. Price, . . . $35.00

II. Regular Edition.

Regular impressions, without remarque or artist's signature, bound in cover of dark brown embossed material, and having wide, brown vellum-cloth strip at side and corners entirely covered with tracery in gold.

In a panel on the side is a part of one of the fac-similes. Each, in a box, $12.50

III.—The same as II., but placed loosely in portfolio, of the same materials and designs as those of the cover of II. and tied with ribbons. Each, in a box, . . . $15.00

ANSON D. F. RANDOLPH & CO.

NEW BOOKS AND NEW EDITIONS.

The new cabinet edition of Dr. Edersheim's JESUS THE MESSIAH is a condensation for the general reader of the author's larger work, which was especially designed for students. This condensation involves no omission that impairs the value of the original work, and it has been said by a critic that "this abridgement gives us one of the best, if not the best condensed, reliable, and graphically written lives of the Christ ever issued." A special large paper edition is now ready, illustrated with 24 photograph illustrations. While no light is thrown on the text by the illustrations, these reproductions of certain works of the Masters in Art will, it is believed, prove an attractive feature to many readers. It may be added, in this connection, that copies of the photographs used in this volume, if purchased separately, would cost, unmounted, Six Dollars, while the price of the whole work, comprising in addition nearly seven hundred printed pages, is but Seven and One-Half Dollars. Cheaper editions, without illustrations, may be obtained at $2.00.

The success, last year, of a small number of Tissot's UNKNOWN SWITZERLAND, with photograph illustrations, has led the publishers to issue a new edition of 250 copies, on larger paper, with 17 illustrations, bound in two-colored cloths, $4.50. A reviewer has said of this book, that "one need not wish for a more entertaining guide than this witty, chatty Frenchman, who alternates effective passages of description with scraps of history, local legends, and humorous sketches of the people he sees about him."

No anthology of the British poets has received higher praises from students and critics than the FIFTY YEARS OF ENGLISH SONG; selections from the poets of the reign of Victoria, with biographical and critical notes. For the scholar and the general reader it is invaluable. Two editions are published, in four vols., one at $5.00, the other, on large paper, limited to 250 copies, at $7.50. Also 50 copies only with 24 photograph portraits, in half leather, $15.00.

The volume entitled THE GREAT DISCOURSE, SPIRIT AND LIFE, is a notable compilation of all the words of Christ recorded in the New Testament, separated from the context; with a topical arrangement and analysis of all these words. This compilation is the result of an attempt to attain a more direct and personal contact with the Christ through his words than is afforded by a general reading of the Gospels, and to present the Divine philosophy in its integrity. It is believed that just such an arrangement has not before been made. The work is beautifully printed, 16mo., and bound in cloth, $1.50; ½ leather, $1.75. A large paper edition, limited to 120 numbered copies printed on hand-made paper, $4.50.

Of Mr. Berry's book, LEAH OF JERUSALEM, a story of the Time of Paul, 12mo, cl., $1.25, a literary lady who read the ms says, "The style is strong, the story of intense interest, the atmosphere of the period well caught. I like the book better than any of the kind I have read except 'Ben-Hur.'"

Mrs. Margaret J. Preston's HANDFUL OF MONOGRAPHS, Continental and English, is still issued in a large-paper copy, in ornamental binding, with 13 photograph illustrations, $3.00. The author's poetic insight and graphic style are well known, and this edition will be especially attractive to cultivated readers.

The same author, in AUNT DOROTHY, has told a story of old Virginia Plantation Life. As a bit of character sketching it is very charming, and presents a phase of American life quite unfamiliar to the younger generation of readers. The book is fully illustrated, and bound in Holland cloth, 60 cts.

New editions of Dean Stanley's WESTMINSTER ABBEY and MEMORIALS OF CANTERBURY are now ready. In mechanical execution these editions are superior to the English. The price is reasonable—4 vols. for $6.00, in a box.

New and cheaper editions are also ready of the new translation of THE IMITATION OF CHRIST. The book was not originally written in prose, but in a rhythm more or less exact. The present edition is the first attempt made in any living language to give a rhythmical form and a proper rendering to the Latin as Thomas Kempis left it. Canon Liddon well says, in his introduction to this translation, "that the mind is led by the poetical arrangement to dwell with a new intelligence and intensity upon clauses and words, and to discern with new eyes their deeper meanings, their relation to each other and to the whole of which they are part." The first edition issued in the United States, under arrangement with the English publisher, was a limited one of 750 numbered copies. Of this edition only 60 copies remain unsold. Price in cloth, $5.00; ½ cl., $10.00. A cheaper edition also ready: 16mo, cloth, $1.50; also in leather bindings, at $2.25, $3.00, and $5.50. Also 24mo, limp cloth, gilt edges, $1.00.

Concerning the OLD MISSIONARY, a narrative in four chapters, by Sir William Wilson Hunter (reprinted from the Contemporary Review), a writer says Sir William Hunter is probably the greatest living authority upon India. Long residence there and protracted historical studies put him in the front rank of the remarkable band of men who have done so much for this great empire in our century. But it was with fresh surprise at his skill as a writer that we followed him through this most pathetic story, told with a grace and truthfulness which leave nothing to be desired. The "Old Missionary," once conspicuous in widely different scenes, gives his life to the heathen, far from the reach of deputations or the demand for reports. His little girl is his sole companion while he preaches and illustrates by his life the gospel of Jesus. Nowhere else have we learned so much of the daily course of the missionary pioneer and of the calls upon his patience and his ability as statesman, scholar, preacher, doctor and friend. The author does not state whether his sketch is taken from life, but we presume it is. As a gem in missionary literature we know nothing at all comparable to this exquisite story. By all means get it and keep it. 16mo. cloth, 50 cents.

The MEN OF THE BIBLE SERIES. Four new volumes have been added to the present year: THE MINOR PROPHETS, by Canon Farrar; ISAAC AND JACOB, by Canon Rawlinson; GIDEON AND JUDGES, by Dr. Marshall Lang; ST. PAUL, by Prof. Iverach. 16mo, cloth, ea., $1.00. These are welcome additions to a series of books which has already won the approval alike of the scholar and the general reader.

The POEMS OF TWO WORLDS, by Rev. T. Hempstead, reveal a deeply poetic spirit in closest touch with nature, and finding in her a refuge from the impotency of the deepest problems with which the soul of man has to do. In form they belong to a past generation, but the thought and the feeling which animate them will never be out of date. 8vo, cloth, gilt top, $1.25.

Almost every year brings to us some new collection of songs or poems for or about the little ones. To this latter class the beautiful little volume, UNDER THE NURSERY LAMP, belongs. It is a compilation, but from fresh and rather unusual sources. The mechanical execution of the volume is beautiful, and no daintier gift of the kind could be found.

A new edition of the BABY'S JOURNAL has just been issued. The Journal consists of an ornamental page for the inscription of the Baby's name and date of birth, blank pages for the record of gifts and other events; several short lyrics and picture illustrations, of which baby-land and its belongings are the principal themes. The book is a happy conceit, and one that will give great pleasure to young mothers. Square 4mo, ornamental cloth, $1.50; or gilt cloth, $2.00.

Mr. Willis Boyd Allen, in naming his little volume of Poems IN THE MORNING, has chosen a title which in many ways suggests the brightness, freshness and sweetness of the morning hours. There are poems in the collection which are pretty, playful, or tinged in turn with a slight melancholy, but the prevailing tone is healthy and hopeful.

The above may be had of all publishers, or will be sent by mail by the publishers on receipt of the price.

The Laurel-Crowned Letters.

Finely printed and bound. 16mo, gilt tops. Per volume, cloth, $1.00; half calf or half morocco, $1.75.

This series is an effort to make the best letters of the four famous masters of epistolary style available for the men and women of to-day with such introductions and notes as may make them thoroughly intelligible. Many will be thankful to the competent scholars who have selected the most charming letters from the voluminous correspondences of these celebrated personages, and presented them with such comment as to make them easily understood and appreciated.

THE BEST LETTERS OF LORD CHESTERFIELD. Edited, with an introductory Essay, by Edward Glavin Johnson.

THE BEST LETTERS OF LADY MONTAGU. Edited, with a Critical and Biographical Introduction, by Octave Thanet.

THE BEST LETTERS OF HORACE WALPOLE. Edited, with an introductory Essay, by Anna B. McMahon.

THE BEST LETTERS OF MADAME DE SEVIGNÉ. Edited, with an introductory Essay, by Edward P. Anderson.

Henrik Ibsen, 1828-88.

A Critical Biography. By Henry Jaeger. Translated from the Norwegian by William M. Payne, translator of Bjornson's "Sigurd Stenbe." Portraits and illustrations. 16mo, $1.50.

"The book is by far the most complete and most edifying story of Ibsen's life that has yet appeared in English. It was needed, and can hardly fail of a wide reading."—Saturday Evening Gazette, Boston.

Education and the Higher Life.

By the Rt. Rev. J. L. Spaulding, Bishop of Peoria. 16mo, $1.00.

"The reader will seldom find a volume of 200 pages richer in great thought, made practical to life's every-day duties. The man who reads the book and enters into its spirit will not be asking the vain question, 'Is life worth living?'"—Chicago Inter-Ocean.

Savonarola.

His Life and Times. By William Clark, LL.D. $1.50.

Prof. Clark writes in popular style, thoroughly explains the intricate political system of Florence in its transition state, and succeeds in giving a well-rounded history of a man whose character will always be one of the most interesting in history to study.

Martha Corey.

A Tale of the Salem Witchcraft. By Constance Goddard Du Bois. 16mo, $1.75.

The same material drawn upon by Longfellow for his "New England Tragedies" is here used with greater fairness and with no less historical exactitude. The story has for its background the dark and gloomy pictures of witchcraft persecution, of which it furnishes a thrilling view. It is remarkable for bold imagination, wonderfully rapid action, and continued and absorbing interest.

Essays of Francis Bacon.

Edited, with a Biographical and Critical Introduction and New Notes, by Prof. M. B. Anderson. Tastefully printed and bound. 16mo, cloth, gilt top, $1.00; half calf or half morocco, $1.75.

The painstaking and conscientious efforts of the editor of this new edition of Bacon's Essays, together with his elegance of form, warrant its publishers in believing that it will win wide appreciation and popularity. In its preparation the previous editions and the commentaries upon Bacon have been carefully examined, errors discovered and corrected, and new notes added.

The Laurel-Crowned Tales.

16mo, gilt tops. Per volume, $1.00.

"The publishers have shown excellent discrimination in their choice of material for their library of choice fiction, and they have given the initial volumes a form that bespeaks the warmest praise."—Reveries, Boston.

Sweet William.

By Marguerite Bouvet. With illustrations by Helen and Margaret Armstrong. 4to, $1.50.

This attractive little volume is unlike any other book that can be called to mind. It takes us back to medieval times, and introduces us to the lords and ladies who then inhabited the splendid castle that still looks down from the heights of Mt. St. Michael on the coast of Normandy. It tells the pathetic story (with a happy ending) of a little boy, who, had he lived to-day, would have been a genuine Little Lord Fauntleroy, and introduces us also to a genuine Little Lady Fauntleroy, with whom we cannot help falling in love. The illustrations are singularly beautiful and appropriate, and make it altogether one of the most attractive juvenile books of the year.

The Bridge of the Gods.

A Romance of Indian Oregon. By J. H. Balch, M.A. 16mo, $1.25.

This is a masterly and original delineation of Indian life. It is a strong story, charged with the elemental forces of the human heart. The author portrays with unusual power the intense, stern piety of the ministers of colonial New England, and the strange mingling of dignity, superstition, ferocity, and stoicism that characterized the early Indian warriors.

Masterpieces of Foreign Authors.

This series will comprise translations of the best known European writers, presented in compact 16mo volumes, well printed on good paper, and prettily bound. Per volume, cloth, net, 75 cents; half vellum, net, $1.25.

DOCTOR ANTONIO. By Giovanni Ruffini.

THE MORALS AND MANNERS OF THE XVII. CENTURY. Being the characters of La Bruyere.

Translated by Helen Stott. Portrait.

WILHELM MEISTER. By Goethe. Carlyle's Translation, with an introduction and Notes, by Edward Dowden, LL.D., and C. L. Shorter. Portrait. 3 vols.

Other volumes to follow.

Odes from the Greek Dramatists.

Translated into Lyric Metres by English Poets and Scholars. Edited by Alfred W. Pollard. Uniform with "Sappho" and Sidney's "Astrophel and Stella." 16mo, gilt top, vellum, net, $1.75.

The success which attended the publication, in most dainty and most exquisite style, of Wharton's "Sappho" and Pollard's edition of Sir Philip Sidney's "Astrophel and Stella," has justified the preparation and publication of this volume as the third in this choice and beautiful series. The editing is of the same careful and scholarly character as that of the former volumes. The Greek text is given, together with the best translation which existed or could be procured.

The Beverlys.

A Story of Calcutta. By Mary Abbott, author of "Alexis." $1.25.

The uncommonly favorable reception of Mrs. Abbott's brilliant novelette, "Alexis," by the public, bespeaks in advance a lively interest in her forthcoming novel, "The Beverlys." It is a more extended and ambitious work than the former, but has the same grace of style and liveliness of treatment, together with a much more considerable plot and more subtle delineation of character and life.

PRESS NOTICES.

"Dr. Newell's ocean romances are crowded with stirring incidents and thrilling adventures, and are as vivid and true in their way as any of Clark Russell's or Herman Melville's."—Boston Transcript.

"The author is the most graceful writer of his class, and he has written nothing better than these sea stories of sailor-love and sailor-hardships."—Rochester Herald.

"From a literary standpoint, they are the best stories of life at sea ever published. There is a finish and smoothness which makes every chapter fascinating."—Chicago Inter-Ocean.

"Life on a whaler offers good material for a boy's story, and it is not too high praise to say that 'The Fleetwing' is far and away the best of the many that have been written."—Boston Com. Bulletin.

Beautifully illustrated, printed on fine paper, bound in cloth, with handsome dies in black and gold. For sale at all bookstores. Will be mailed on receipt of price by the publishers, Deeds Worth Telling. Logs for the Yuletide Fire. By EDWARD A. RAND. Profusely illustrated. 234 pp., square 8vo, cloth, $1.50.

Mr. Rand's books for boys are among the most popular on our list. In "Deeds Worth Telling" he turns his hand to something new. Instead of writing about imaginary boys and what they might do, he tells twenty-six true stories of what real boys (and girls, and men and women, as well) have actually done. For the holidays, for birthdays, or for any day in the year, "Deeds Worth Telling" will be a favorite with the young people.

Under the Lantern at Black Rock. By EDWARD A. RAND. 12mo, $1.25.

An ideal book for the thousands of boys who love the sea. There is plenty of life in the story of this group of lads in a small New England sea-port. It proves to any boy's satisfaction that the fellow who sticks to his business honestly comes out ahead of his brilliant rival, who blows a big trumpet, but neglects the plain duties of life.

Phebe; or, the Ewings of Killian Hook. By MARY HARRIS NORRIS. 12mo, $1.00.

Miss Norris' "Phebe" opens upon the reader at Newport when the fashionable season is just dawning, and we have a brilliant study of "high-life" at the great American resort. From Newport's display we turn to Killian Hook, where Phebe Ewing—young, brave, beautiful—carries on the old Ewing farm and waits for her brother, long absent in Australia. The characters are typical Americans, and are sketched with great clearness.

Maidie's Problem, and One of Them-selves. Two Stories of the King's Daughters. By MARGARET E. SANGSTER. Illustrated. 12mo, 75 cents.

"Maidie's Problem" lay in the South and in the country, and she was a poor girl with very little to do with. The girl of the other story lived in Brooklyn, belonged to a fashionable church, and had money and gowns in profusion. Yet both found ways of service for the King. This is one of the best girls' books of the year.

Peter the Preacher; or, Reaping a Hundred-fold. By CARLISLE B. HOLDING. 12mo, $1.25.

The author of this striking story tells us that it is improbable only in appearance; that of every incident in the book a counterpart may be cited in real life. It is a tale of the call to the ministry of a young man, and of his strange adventures in beginning his life-work among the rough men of a Western town. It is a sound, wholesome story, and may be an inspiration to some who are trying to make the best of both worlds.

Illustrative Notes on the Sunday-School Lessons for 1891. Including original and selected expositions, plans of instruction, illustrative anecdotes, practical applications, archaeological notes, maps, pictures, and diagrams. By JESSE L. HURLBURT, D.D., and ROBERT R. DOHERTY, Ph.D. Illustrated. 8vo, $1.25.

This volume is the best lesson-help ever issued. Intense practicality in its aim, and it is believed that every item in the 395 octavo pages will be directly useful to the teacher or pupil. In maps, diagrams, and pictorial illustrations the book ranks easily first. A feature which will commend the volume to the earnest teacher is its available teaching quality. It tells what to teach and how to teach, selects the valuable points of each lesson, and shows how best to enforce them.

One Little Life. By MARY LOWE DICKINSON. Small 16mo, 75 cents.

It is the sort of a story that girls love. It is the book of a girl's life—just an ordinary girl who has to do things—some things that are hard and unpleasant, just as duties are liable to be. The author, Mrs. Dickinson, is well known in the East as a leader in the King's Daughters, and in the West as an educator of girls. She knows girls through and through.

Credentials of the Gospels. By JOSEPH AGAR BERT. 8vo, cloth, $1.00.

The author's method is closely analytical and fearlessly orthodox. His defence of the credibility of the gospel records is convincing, and though he occupies but a small space in comparison with the larger works on theology, he does perfect service for the Master.

Supremacy of Law. By BISHOP JOHN P. NEWMAN. 12mo, cloth, $1.00.

There is life in every line of Bishop Newman's latest book. The law whose supremacy he teaches is the perfect law of the Lord. The pages are alive with vigorous thought and the words have the ring of the author's voice. This is a book for the home as well as for the study, and it will do good wherever it goes.

Christian Missions in the Nineteenth Century. By ELMER S. TOWN, D.D. 12mo, cloth, 75 cents.

This book is a strong argument in favor of Missionary enterprises. The author reviews the field from philosophic, historical and scientific standpoints. Those interested in the study of missions will find in this little book many suggestive thoughts and arguments, well adapted to inspire loftier views of the missionary enterprise.

AUTHORIZED EDITION.

The Light of the World.

By EDWIN ARNOLD.

Author of "The Light of Asia."

Illustrated. Cloth. Over 300 pages. Price, $1.75.

Mr. Arnold has been assisted in this work by an American poet, and the annotation is the joint work of Sir Edwin and an American expert in Oriental literature. The introduction to the volume is from the pen of Richard Henry Stoddard. The book will be illustrated with reproductions of Hoffman's celebrated paintings, arrangements for this purpose having been made with the holders of the foreign copyrights on Hoffman's paintings.

The reproductions are made in this country, and are covered by American copyright. Copyright for America will protect the entire work, including the poem itself; this being rendered possible by the collaboration of Sir Edwin with an American writer. The original manuscript is in the hands of the American publishers, Funk & Wagnalls.

As an indication of the widespread interest awakened by the announcement of the poem, the publishers of a leading daily offered $5000 for the privilege of printing it prior to its appearance in book form. The offer was refused.

This book is published first in America. Funk & Wagnalls, New York, exclusive publishers for America.

SPECIAL NOTICE.—This Edition of General Booth's book is the only authorized Edition in America—was printed from the plates received direct from London; it is the only Edition in this country on which royalty will be received by the Author.

A spurious Edition, imperfect and incomplete, of this book is already on the market, and against which we would caution the Public.

In Darkest England, and the Way Out.

By GENERAL BOOTH, of the Salvation Army.

Octavo. Illustrated with Colored Chart. 316 pages. Cloth. Price, $1.50.

This book, in which is announced and described a marvellous undertaking of the Salvation Army, involving an outlay of $5,000,000, and towards which amount, it is reported, subscriptions are pouring in from all parts of Great Britain, "sounds a note," says The Review of Reviews, "that will reverberate round the world." It has everywhere created a profound sensation, and enlisted the deepest interest.

Archdeacon Farrar, Rev. Dr. Joseph Parker, of London, and others, have preached sermons in favor of the scheme, and operations under its provisions have already begun.

The Review of Reviews, London, says: "No such book, so comprehensive in its scope, so daring in its audacity, and yet so simple and practical in its proposals, has appeared in these times. . . . It will be the most epoch-making book that the world has seen for many a long day."

The Daily Telegraph, London, says: "The General's firm faith in the possibility of his scheme carries the reader away. . . . The world has never yet been cured by pessimism."

The Daily News, London, says: "There is something captivating in the grandeur and completeness of the scheme. As an effective effort it is like the day-dream of a philanthropist revised by a practical man."

The Chronicle, London, says: "We are forced to the conclusion that, as far as the lapsed masses are concerned, the Gospel of Christianity has lost in our day its power and charm. When we consider its past resources, Booth's project puts the State Church in a very disagreeable position."

INDIAN TALES. By RUDYARD KIPLING. One volume, 12mo, cloth, gilt top; 771 pages, $1.50.

This is the only edition of "Plain Tales from the Hills," "Soldiers Three and Other Stories," "The Story of the Gadsbys," "Phantom Rickshaw," issued in America with the sanction of the author.

DEPARTMENTAL DITTIES, BARRACK ROOM BALLADS, AND OTHER VERSES. By RUDYARD KIPLING. One volume, 12mo, cloth, gilt, $1.25.

We have just put to press, under the authorization of Rudyard Kipling, a volume of poems which will contain "Departmental Ditties," "Barrack Room Ballads," and a collection of Kipling's fugitive verses, which he has recently arranged for this volume. This will be the first edition of Kipling's poetical writings issued in this country. The press universally praise his poetical work, the style of which is crisp, terse, witty and entertaining.

LUX MUNDI. Second American Edition. Ten Editions in England. Edited by Rev. CHARLES GORE, M.A. (Principal of Pusey House, and Fellow of Trinity College, Oxford). One volume, 12mo, cloth, gilt top, $1.75.

The great Theological sensation of the day in England. A series of studies in the religion of the Incarnation.

"We care now only to say so much as shall induce those who read this notice to go at once to the book, and to persuade them not to be deterred by what may seem a dry, theological title from the enjoyment of a work which we have read with an interest and absorption which few books indeed of the present day have been able to produce."
—The Churchman.

IT HAPPENED THIS WAY. By ROSE EYTINGE and S. ADA FISHER. American Authors' Series, No. 27. Cloth, $1.00; paper, 50 cents.

"A bright, interesting story, sure to please the most fastidious; one of those which after reading leaves only pleasant recollections.

HOLIDAY PUBLICATIONS.

IN SCRIPTURE LANDS.

New Views of Sacred Places. By EDWARD L. WILSON. With 150 illustrations engraved from photographs taken by the author. Large 8vo, $3.50.

DR. LYMAN ABBOTT WRITES:

"Mr. Wilson is an expert photographer. He has carried his camera with him, and reproduced in black and white the scenes of Scripture lands. If we say that Dr. Robinson's work is scholarly, Stanley's historical, Palmer's topographical, and Thomson's biographical, we may best differentiate Mr. Wilson's work from that of his predecessors by saying of it that it is pictorial.

"He does not discuss debated questions in either history or topography. But he gives the reader a view of the localities which previous students and explorers or traditions trustworthy or otherwise have identified. His pen seems to have caught something of the spirit of his art, and to be almost as photographic in its realistic portraiture as his camera.

"He who, without leaving his own home, wishes to make the journey across the desert, or to visit the Holy Land, taking, as the ordinary tourist must do, the traditions for what they are worth, neither believing nor disbelieving them, but looking on the sites pointed out to him as those which tradition has hit upon—sometimes with reason and sometimes without—cannot easily find a better guide than Mr. Wilson, or better pictures than those which Mr. Wilson's camera and pen afford."

THE LIFE OF JOHN ERICSSON.

By Col. WILLIAM C. CHURCH. With 50 illustrations. 2 vols., 8vo, $6.00.

PARTIAL LIST OF CONTENTS: EARLY YEARS IN SWEDEN—IN ENGLAND—OPENING OF THE ERA OF LOCOMOTIVE ENGINEERING—THE SCREW PROPELLER—THE SCREW IN WAR VESSELS—SUCCESSSES AND FAILURES—PERSONAL HISTORY—INCEPTION AND BUILDING THE FIRST MONITOR—ITS BATTLE WITH THE MERRIMAC AND RESULTS—FOREIGN RECOGNITION—HARBOR DEFENCE—ERICSSON'S SON AND BROTHER—FRIENDSHIP AND CHARACTERISTICS—RELIGIOUS BELIEFS—THE SCREW MOTOR—SCIENTIFIC INVESTIGATIONS AND INVENTIONS.

The story of the life of the famous engineer and inventor is one of great vicissitudes of fortune, of immense and unconquerable energy, and of very wide relations with the foremost men and with many of the chief events of his time. No man was better qualified to tell this story than Colonel Church, who was for many years intimately acquainted with Ericsson, and into whose custody the executors of the inventor entrusted all his correspondence and other papers. The two volumes in which the story is told will take their place among the most notable of recent biographies. Fifty illustrations supplement and interpret the text.

THE PACIFIC COAST SCENIC TOUR, BY HENRY T. FINCK.

Southern California to Alaska. The Yosemite. The Canadian Pacific Railway. Yellowstone Park and the Grand Cañon. With 20 full-page illustrations. 8vo, $2.50.

FROM THE PREFACE: "I have seen parts of four continents, but am still looking for a tour equal to the one outlined in this volume with the addition just named. It includes the grandest waterfalls, the largest lakes, the finest river scenery and geysers, the most stupendous glaciers, and some of the most superb snow peaks and ranges in the whole world; while the Yosemite and the Grand Cañon are absolutely unique and without rivals anywhere."

LIST OF ILLUSTRATIONS: MT. HOOD—OSTRICH FARM—FRUIT FARM—ORANGE GROVE—NORTH DOME, YOSEMITE VALLEY—BIG TREE, YOSEMITE VALLEY—SEAL ROCKS—LAKE TAHOE—MT. SHASTA—CRATER LAKE—CASTLE ROCK—COLUMBIA RIVER—SITKA—FRASER CAÑON—THE SELKIRK GLACIER—HOTEL AT BANFF—DEVIL'S HEAD LAKE—MINERVA TERRACE—FALLS OF THE YELLOWSTONE—THE GRAND CAÑON OF THE COLORADO.

IN THE FOOTPRINTS OF CHARLES LAMB.

By BENJAMIN ELLIS MARTIN. Beautifully illustrated. With bibliography by E. D. NORTH. 8vo, $2.50.

Mr. Martin's book may be called a topographical biography of Lamb, and as such fills a vacant place in the literature pertaining to the famous essayist. He has found and described the houses that harbored him, and has followed his footsteps from his cradle close by the Thames to his grave near the Lea. To this he adds a study of the man himself, "showing," says Mr. Martin, "exactly what he was rather than what he did."

ELECTRICITY IN DAILY LIFE.

A Popular Account of the Application of Electricity to Every-day Uses. With 120 illustrations. 8vo, $3.00.

A work similar in scope, form, and importance to the "American Railway," published last year. It is a handsome volume of popular papers from the hands of eminent experts, treating of the electric railway, motors, lighting, telegraphs, cables and their laying under sea, electricity in the household and in warfare on land and sea, and as applied to the human body.

HOW THE OTHER HALF LIVES, BY JACOB A. RISS.

Studies among the Tenements of New York. With 40 illustrations from photographs. 8vo, $2.50.

The reader of this book feels that he is being guided through the by-ways and alleys of nether New York by an experienced cicerone, who has an eye for the picturesque as well as the significant. The book is from first to last an indictment of the tenement-house system, and will attract wide attention among philanthropists by reason of its suggestions for practical reforms.

THE VIKING AGE, BY PAUL B. DU CHAILLU

The Early History, Manners, and Customs of the Ancestors of the English-speaking Nations. By PAUL B. DU CHAILLU. With 1400 illustrations. 2 vols., 8vo, $7.50.

"The 'Land of the Midnight Sun,' important and entertaining as it was, turns out to have been a mere popular forerunner to this monument of scholarlike study and indefatigable observation. The 'Viking Age' represents the result of enthusiastic toil, prolonged over eight years. No one who examines the volumes can doubt that the result justifies the sacrifice."—London Standard.

CHARLES SCRIBNER'S SONS' HOLIDAY BOOKS.

HANDSOME ILLUSTRATED HOLIDAY BOOKS.

PETER THE GREAT, EMPEROR OF RUSSIA.

By EUGENE SCHUYLER.

2 vols., 8vo, $6.00.

"Mr. Schuyler attempts no elaborate analysis of character, but leaves the reader to construct the portrait for himself out of the abundant and skilfully disposed material. The work is peculiar for its cool, judicial tone. The book is a real and solid contribution to historic literature, and is profusely and well illustrated."—The Critic.

With 200 beautiful illustrations.

ASPECTS OF THE EARTH.

By N. S. SHALER.

8vo, $2.50.

"A volume certain to be received with wide and popular interest. The idea of the book is to present in a popular way all the methods by which nature influences the earth as a foothold for man, through its earthquakes, its river currents, its cyclones, and its various methods of production."—New York Sun.

With 100 rich illustrations.

THE AMERICAN RAILWAY.

By MANY EMINENT AUTHORITIES.

Large 8vo, net, $6.00.

"Certainly one of the most interesting and valuable gift books of the season. The nearness of the theme, the authority of the writers, and the scope of the exposition, make this a work for almost every class of adult readers. Children, too, of a curious or mechanical turn of mind—or even romantic—will quickly lose themselves in these pages."—N. Y. Evening Post.

With more than 200 charming illustrations.

AMONG CANNIBALS.

By CARL LUMHOLTZ.

8vo, $5.00.

"It is a work which will have a very long life, for it is full of wisdom and useful knowledge; besides, it represents everything so lively before the reader's eyes that he forgets he is reading a mere description and thinks he is at the author's side, and shares with him the hardships, dangers, and joys of a life among cannibals in the wilderness of Australia."—Dr. SCHLIEMANN.

With maps, 4 chromo lithographs, and 100 wood-cuts.

A HISTORY OF FRENCH PAINTING.

By C. H. STRANAHAN.

8vo, $5.00.

"The author has performed her task with judgment, modesty, and wakeful conscientiousness. She has embodied the æsthetic views of all parties in plain language, free from personal gush and sentiment. Full accounts of the French Academy, the Institute, the Beaux Arts, etc., render the work peculiarly interesting to students."—The Saturday Review (London).

With reproductions of 16 superb paintings.

HOW I FOUND LIVINGSTONE.

By HENRY M. STANLEY.

8vo, $3.50.

"The air of romance which has surrounded the discovery of Dr. Livingstone will be found, upon the perusal of this volume, to be surpassed by the marvellous energy and resolution with which it was accomplished. Mr. Stanley has presented a narrative of extraordinary interest."—N. Y. Tribune. "It is full of picturesque description, of racy portraiture of individuals, and graphic and vigorous accounts of adventure."—N. Y. Times.

With maps, plans, and 53 illustrations.

CHARLES SCRIBNER'S SONS' HOLIDAY BOOKS.

DAINTY VOLUMES FOR HOLIDAY GIFTS.

BALLADS.

BY R. L. STEVENSON.

16mo, $1.00.

Mr. Stevenson's third volume of verse is conceived and executed on a much larger plan than that of either "A Child's Garden of Verses" or "Underwoods." It is composed of five spirited narratives, related with all Mr. Stevenson's metrical felicity and vividly picturesque descriptive powers. The most important poems are two long, elaborate, and intensely romantic versifications of South Sea legends, which are now published for the first time.

Daintily bound with gilt top and uncut edges.

THE LION'S CUB,
AND OTHER VERSE.

BY R. H. STODDARD.

With portrait, 16mo, $1.25.

The rare qualities of Mr. Stoddard's verse—the broad view of life that it reflects, the profound thought that it embodies, the graceful and melodious form that it takes—are admirably reflected in this book of poems, which call attention in a remarkable way to the range of his vision and the breadth of his sympathies.

Beautifully bound in an illuminated Persian design.

TWO BOOKS BY EUGENE FIELD.

Each 16mo, $1.25.

"These pretty little volumes (A LITTLE BOOK OF WESTERN VERSE and A LITTLE BOOK OF PROFITABLE TALES) promise to perpetuate examples of a wit, humor, and pathos quaint and rare in their kind. Genial and sympathetic, Mr. Field has already made a mark in the literature of the day, which will not quickly wear out."—New York Tribune.

Bound in blue and gold, with gilt tops and uncut edges.

A LITTLE BROTHER OF THE RICH,
And Other Verses.

BY EDWARD S. MARTIN.

16mo, $1.25.

Mr. Martin's poems have had the honor of being reprinted in London under the title of "Pirated Poems," of which more than twelve thousand copies have been sold.

"The poems are witty, philosophical, graceful, and altogether delightful."—New York Sun.

Tastefully bound in olive and gold, with uncut edges and gilt top.

CAMEO EDITION.

Each with Etching.

16mo, half calf, per volume,
$2.75; half levant, $3.50;
cloth, $1.25.

Mr. Cable's OLD CREOLE DAYS, with an etching by Percy Moran, and Mr. Page's IN OLE VIRGINIA, with an etching by W. L. Sheppard, are added this season to the Cameo Edition, in which Mr. Mitchell's "Reveries" and "Dream Life," each with an etching by Mr. Moran, appeared a year ago.

"In their dainty covers and fine paper they will be prime favorites for holiday gifts."—Boston Traveller.

Daintily bound in gold and olive, with flat back, wide margin, rough edges, and gilt tops.

AND DICKENS.

2 vols., each 16mo, $1.25.

"The selections in the Dickens volume have been made with admirable judgment, and the result is a thoroughly representative and characteristic series of letters, showing the writer in every phase of his manner as a correspondent."—Boston Saturday Gazette.

"Charming in their free and playful humor, abounding in the most genial wit, the Thackeray letters also exhibit the great author in more solemn moods. No more charming correspondence has, indeed, ever been published."—New York Tribune.

Richly bound in brown and gold, with gilt tops and rough edges.

CHARLES SCRIBNER'S SONS' HOLIDAY BOOKS.

FAMOUS WOMEN OF THE FRENCH COURT.

By IMBERT DE SAINT-AMAND. Translated by T. S. Perry. Six volumes now ready. Others in preparation. Each with portrait, 12mo, $1.25.

MARIE-ANTOINETTE AND THE END OF THE OLD RÉGIME—CITIZENESS BONAPARTE—THE WIFE OF THE FIRST CONSUL—THE COURT OF THE EMPRESS JOSEPHINE—HAPPY DAYS OF THE EMPRESS MARIE LOUISE—MARIE LOUISE AND THE DECADENCE OF THE EMPIRE.

"M de Saint-Amand's volumes are inspired with such brightness, knowledge, and appreciation, that their value as studies in a great historical epoch requires acknowledgment. Though written mainly to entertain in a wholesome way, they also instruct the reader and give him larger views. That they have not before been translated for publication here is a little singular. Now, that their time has come, people should receive them gratefully while they read them with the attention they invite and deserve."—New York Times.

HISTORY OF THE UNITED STATES, BY HENRY ADAMS.

FIRST ADMINISTRATION OF JEFFERSON—SECOND ADMINISTRATION OF JEFFERSON—FIRST ADMINISTRATION OF MADISON, each 2 vols., 12mo, $4.00; SECOND ADMINISTRATION OF MADISON, 3 vols. In press.

"The whole history is of the deepest interest, and is set forth in the most attractive and skilful manner, and the public will expect with no little eagerness the completion of this important work."—New York Tribune.

SHORT HISTORY OF ANGLO-SAXON FREEDOM.

By Professor J. K. HOSMER. Crown 8vo, $2.00.

"Professor Hosmer, first showing that our freedom is no new thing, but developed from the ancient Anglo-Saxon freedom, traces step by step the development of its spirit, principles, and institutions down to the present day. Every American citizen will profit much by a reading of the book."—Philadelphia Press.

IN THE VALLEY.

By HAROLD FREDERIC. With 16 full-page drawings by Howard Pyle. 12mo, $1.50.

"It is uncommonly well written, and the whole mise en scène has variety and importance, for the valley of the Hudson, at the moment before the Revolution broke out, is new to romance and is certainly picturesque."—W. D. HOWELLS.

STRANGE TRUE STORIES OF LOUISIANA.

By GEORGE W. CABLE. With illustrations and reproductions. Square 12mo, $2.00.

"What a field of romance, of color, of incident, of delicate feeling, and unique social conditions these stories show! The mechanical part of the book fits the delightful text. The illustrations greatly add to the interest of the text."—Hartford Courant.

ENGLISH LANDS, LETTERS, AND KINGS.

By DONALD G. MITCHELL. FROM CELT TO TUDOR—FROM ELIZABETH TO ANNE. 2 vols., each 12mo, $1.50.

"The student of literature could hardly have a better or happier guide through the delightful mazes of English letters."—Boston Courier.

CHARLES SCRIBNER'S SONS' HOLIDAY BOOKS.

ATTRACTIVE NEW BOOKS FOR THE YOUNG.

A NEW BOOK BY FRANCES HODGSON BURNETT.

LITTLE SAINT ELIZABETH and Other Stories. With 12 new full-page drawings by Reginald B. Birch. Square 8vo, uniform with "Little Lord Fauntleroy," $1.50.

SUSAN COOLIDGE WRITES:

"The pretty tale from which the book borrows its name has for heroine a little French girl brought up in an old chateau in Normandy by an aunt who is a recluse and devote. A child of this type transplanted suddenly while still in childhood to the realistic atmosphere of prosperous New York, must inevitably have much to suffer. She is puzzled; she is lonely; she has no one to direct her conscience. The quaint little figure blindly trying to guess the riddle of duty under these unfamiliar conditions is pathetic, and Mrs. Burnett touches it in with delicate strokes."

Sara Crewe. 8vo, $1.00.

Little Lord Fauntleroy. 8vo, $2.00.

FRANCES HODGSON BURNETT's Two Juvenile Classics. Illustrated by R. B. Birch.

MY KALULU:

Princes, King, and Slave. A Story of Central Africa. By HENRY M. STANLEY. Illustrated, 12mo, $1.50.

"A fresh, breezy, stirring story for youths interesting in itself and full of information regarding life in the interior of the continent in which its scenes are laid."—New York Times.

PERSONALLY CONDUCTED.

By FRANK R. STOCKTON. With 46 illustrations by Joseph Pennell, Alfred Parsons, and others. Square 8vo, $2.00.

"Mr. Stockton is as fascinating in his sketchy talks about the interesting things he has seen across the water as he is in his fancy sketches and stories."—Hartford Post.

BRIC-A-BRAC STORIES.

By MRS. BURTON HARRISON. With 24 illustrations by Walter Crane. Cheaper Edition. 12mo, $1.50.

"It is a well-conceived and delightfully executed collection of fairy stories, and ought to be one of the Christmas presents in every family of children."—Providence Journal.

TWO LITTLE CONFEDERATES.

By THOMAS NELSON PAGE. Illustrated by Kemble and Redwood. Square 8vo, $1.50.

"A charming book for children, whether boys or girls—a most natural, pleasing, and at times touching story."—The Nation.

AGAINST HEAVY ODDS.

A Tale of Norse Heroism. By HJALMAR HJORTH BOYESEN. With 13 full-page illustrations by W. L. Taylor. 12mo, $1.00.

"Mr. Boyesen's stalwart and breezy style is well fitted to convey this story of the fjords and the open sea, and of adventures calling for genuine heroism. The moral of such courage and persistence is always worthy of emphasis."—Brooklyn Times.

AMERICAN GIRL'S HANDY BOOK.

By LINA and ADELIA B. BEARD. With over 500 illustrations. Cheaper Edition. 8vo, $2.00.

"I have put it down in my list of good and useful books for young people, as I have many requests for advice from little friends and their mothers."—LOUISA M. ALCOCK.

OTTO OF THE SILVER HAND.

Written and fully illustrated by HOWARD PYLE. Royal 8vo, half leather, $2.00.

"The book must be greeted as one of the very best juveniles of the year, quite worthy to succeed to the remarkable popularity of Mr. Pyle's 'Robin Hood.'"—Christian Union.

AMERICAN BOY'S HANDY BOOK.

By DANIEL C. BEARD. Enlarged Edition. With over 350 illustrations. 8vo, $2.00.

"The book has this great advantage over its predecessors, that the most of the games, tricks, and other amusements described in it are new."—N. Y. Tribune.

MERRY ADVENTURES OF ROBIN HOOD.

Written and elaborately illustrated by HOWARD PYLE. Royal 8vo, $3.00.

"The most original and elaborate book ever produced by any American artist. Mr. Pyle has told, with pencil and pen, the complete and consecutive story of Robin Hood and his merry men."—Boston Transcript.

ROBERTS BROTHERS'

NEW BOOKS FOR THE SEASON 1890-91.

OUR NEW ENGLAND.

Her Nature described by Hamilton Wright Mabie and some of Her Familiar Scenes Illustrated. The illustrations are photogravures (Gravure-Gilbo) from nature, by A. W. Elson & Co., with Remarques drawn by Frank T. Merrill, oblong quarto, limp cover, with photogravure design on Japanese paper, gilt edges. Price, $4.00; cloth, illuminated design, price, $5.00.

Picture Subjects.

A NEW ENGLAND HOME.
HOME OF THE PURITAN.
A FAMILY OF ROCKS.
HAPPY HOLLOW.
COUNTRY ROAD IN WINTER.
ON THE EXETER RIVER.
PAST MILKING TIME. "Why don't you come and get us?"
COUNTRY ROAD IN SUMMER.
MILKING TIME.
EASTERN POINT BEACH, GLOUCESTER HARBOR.
A WARM CORNER. *
THROUGH THE PINES.

The picture subjects are charming bits of Nature, characteristic of New England, chosen from various localities by an expert photographer, and reproduced with special attention to details, by the photogravure process.

Mr. Mabie's summary of the picturesqueness and grandeur of New England scenery is a clever bit of essay writing. His description of the climatic changes, of boy life in the old homestead and on the farm, the varied aspects of Nature during the four seasons, its beauties so favorably compared with other countries, is unfolded with panoramic clearness, and is extremely fascinating.

To the New-Englander afar, the book will be a happy reminder of his early home life, while to the resident, it will be a source of pleasure and pride.

ROBERTS BROTHERS' ANNOUNCEMENTS.

ILLUSTRATED EDITION OF
THE LIGHT OF ASIA;

The Great Renunciation. Being the Life and Teaching of Gautama, Prince of India and Founder of Buddhism. By Sir EDWIN ARNOLD, M. A., K. C. L. E., C. S. I. Holiday edition. Square 12mo. Bound in Oriental colors. With a new portrait of the author by Damman, and illustrative cover design. Gilt top, price $1.50; full gilt, gilt edges, price $2.00.

"THIS IS THE NIGHT THE AGES WAITED FOR."

The illustrations are taken, for the most part, from photographs of Buddhist sculptures and frescoes found in ancient ruins of India, averaging 2000 years old, many of them being identified by eminent archaeological authorities, both in India and at home, as actually illustrating scenes in the Life of Gautama Buddha, the founder of Buddhism, and the hero of Mr. Arnold's poem.

The design on the cover illustrates the four principal events in the life of Buddha, the Birth, the Meditation, the Preaching, and the Nirvana. It is taken from a bas-relief found at Sarnāth, near Benares, and now in the museum at Calcutta.

 NEW BOOKS FOR THE SEASON, 1890-91.

IDYLLS OF THE FIELD.

By F. A. KNIGHT, author of "By Leafy Ways." With illustrations by E. T. Compton. 12mo. Cloth. Price, $1.50.

The success which has attended the publication of Mr. Knight's recent volume, "By Leafy Ways," has induced him to issue another series of chapters in a uniform volume. These are now just published under the title of "Idylls of the Field," and are tastefully illustrated by Mr. E. T. Compton, whose drawings for the former volume added so much to its charm. The volume consists of a series of Sketches, containing exquisite pictures of country life and scenes, characterised by that charm of style which has rendered Mr. Knight's writing so popular.

BY LEAFY WAYS.

Brief Studies from the Book of Nature. By F. A. KNIGHT. With numerous beautiful illustrations and full-page plates, by E. T. Compton. 12mo. Cloth. Price, $1.50.

A book of delightful reading about out-of-door life. Dealing chiefly with bird life, the work also contains much information about the denizens of English lanes, woods, and meadows, written in a very pleasing and agreeable style. Mr. Knight has a happy touch in describing the ways of birds and the aspects of the fields, and a keenness of observation akin to the faculty that was so remarkably developed by Richard Jefferies in "The Gamekeeper at Home," and other books. Not the least important feature of these studies is to create a love for all the lower forms of life by showing their usefulness in one particular or another.

THE FUTURE OF SCIENCE.

By ERNEST RENAN, author of "History of the People of Israel." One volume. 8vo. Cloth. (In Press.)

MISS BROOKS.

A Boston Novel. By ELIZA O. WHITE, author of "A Browning Courtship." 16mo. Cloth. Price, $1.00.

 ROBERTS BROTHERS' ANNOUNCEMENTS.

THE HOUSE OF THE WOLFINGS.

A Tale of the House of the Wolfings and all the Kindreds of the Mark, written in Prose and in Verse, by WILLIAM MORRIS, author of "The Earthly Paradise." 12mo. Oxford style. Price, $2.00.

This is one of those rare creations of genius which reproduce the life and manners of a remote past and of peoples of a grand kind that civilization cannot assimilate.

The story of the Wolfings, a branch of the Gothic people, in their picturesque life in the woods and their struggle with the Romans, has an epic force and significance; and the way in which Thiodolf, their leader and that of their brother Mark-men, was led to sacrifice his own life in order to insure the success of his people, has a noble pathos. He had been induced by the Wood-Sun, a daughter of the god, who was smitten with love for him, to wear a magic hauberk, or coat of mail, which he threw off on discovering that, while it was a sure protection for him, it would bring ruin on his folk. This was being proved by the success of the Romans, who had captured the sacred Wolfing Roof, when the Hall-Sun, the child of the two lovers, resolving to sacrifice her beloved father for his country, led him to her mother, whom she made confess the deception which she had practised to save Thiodolf's life. That warrior, roused by the emergency, marched with his hosts to the Wolfing Roof, which he recaptured from the Romans, and died from his wounds in the great hall. His death saved his people.

THE DAY'S MESSAGE.

A Brief Selection of Prose and Verse for each day in the year. Chosen by Susan Coolidge. Cover design by Mrs. Whitman. 16mo. White and green cloth. Plain edition, price, $1.00; full gilt and gilt edges, price, $1.25.

The busy days of life are not so busy but that there is time in each for the reading of one compact little sentence of wisdom or comfort and one bit of true poetry, and none need such a little well-selected morsel so much as those who have no time to choose it for themselves.

DIARY AND LETTERS.

By MADAME D'ARBLAY. Revised and edited by SARAH CHAUNCEY WOOLSEY. With portraits. 1 vol., 8vo. Price, $2.50.

"The most charming of all literature, according to Matthew Arnold, is that of literary reminiscences; and of the books in this department there are few more charming than Madame D'Arblay's 'Diary and Letters.' The reputation of her father, Dr. Burney, secured the entrance of his daughter into a brilliant circle of wits and litterati; and her own early acquired fame, as the author of 'Evelina' and 'Cecilia,' widened her social opportunities, and brought her into personal relations with nearly all the leading men and women of her time."—Eclectic Magazine.

NEW BOOKS FOR THE SEASON, 1890-91.

ONE SUMMER'S LESSONS IN PRAC- TICAL PERSPECTIVE.

Told in the Form of a Story for Young People. By CHRISTINE CHAPLIN BRUSH, author of "The Colonel's Opera Cloak," and "Inside Our Gate." With many illustrations. One volume. 16mo. Cloth. Price, 75 cents.

BY THE AUTHOR OF "STORY OF AN AFRICAN FARM."

DREAMS.

By OLIVE SCHREINER, author of "The Story of an African Farm." With portrait 16mo, cloth. [In Press.]

CONTENTS: The Lost Joy—The Hunter—The Gardens of Pleasure—In a Far-off World—Three Dreams in a Desert—A Dream of Wild Bees—In a Ruined Chapel—Life's Gifts—The Artist's Secret—I Thought I Stood—The Sunlight Lay Across My Bed.

Those who read this young author's former book and admired the power and originality displayed in it will welcome this new work by the same pen heartily. It shows the same strength and skill, and is intensely interesting to those who enjoy books out of the usual run of the commonplace. It is one book in a thousand.

ROBERTS BROTHERS ANNOUNCEMENTS.

HE WINDS, THE WOODS, AND THE WANDERER.

A Fable for Children. By LILY F. WESSELHOEFT, author of "Sparrow, the Tramp," and "Flipwing the Spy." With Illustrations. 16mo. Cloth. Price, $1.25.

SPECIMEN CUT.

In the story of "The Winds, the Woods, and the Wanderer," the author has endeavored to depict an artistic temperament that is misunderstood by the practical natures by which it is surrounded,—one that hears the voice of the "dear Lord God," as the Germans have it, speaking through the rustling of the forest-trees. This same artistic temperament the untutored man youth possessed; and the two natures were drawn together by the love of the beautiful which was implanted in the soul of each, and that interpreted to them the voices of Nature which others are as a sealed book.

ESTES & LAURIAT'S NEW BOOKS AND NEW EDITIONS.—Continued

Second Year of English Text Edition.

GOUPIL'S PARIS SALON
Of 1890.

TEXT IN FRENCH OR IN ENGLISH.

THE instantaneous and unqualified success which met the issue, last year, of an English text edition of this beautiful annual art volume, has induced the Paris publishers to continue the publication—no longer an experiment—and every effort is being made to have the volume for 1890 outdo in attractiveness and real art value even its exquisitely beautiful predecessor.

We shall continue, as heretofore, to be Sole Publishers of the English Text Edition and Sole Agents for the United States for the sale of the French Text Edition.

Both Editions will be printed, folded and collated at the Paris establishment of Messrs. Goupil et Cie.'s successors. The price will remain at the same low figure as last year.

- Imperial 8vo, Red Silk Cloth, with new "Palette" design.....$18.00
- Imperial 8vo, Red Silk Cloth, Holland Edition, numbered, net..... 20.00

As each year's edition is limited, and the entire edition was sold last year, early in December, and trade orders refused before the holidays, early orders are advised this year to prevent possible disappointment.

DODD, MEAD & COMPANY'S

Publications for 1890.

HALEVEY.A Marriage for Love.

By LUDOVIC HALÉVY, author of "The Abbe Constantin," etc. An édition de luxe with twenty-three full-page illustrations, reproduced in photogravure, by Wilson de Meza. Uniform in size with the quarto edition of "The Abbe Constantin." In silk portfolio, $10.00.

This charming story, rivalling "The Abbe Constantin" in its delicacy and purity, will, like it, be noted for the beauty and finish of its illustrations.

FERGUSON.A History of Modern Architecture.

By JAMES FERGUSON, D.C.L., F.R.S., M.R.A.S., etc. Thoroughly revised and brought down to the present time by Robert Kerr, Professor of Architecture at King's College, London, with many new illustrations added. 2 vols., octavo, price announced later.

This work is produced jointly by John Murray, London, and ourselves.

A supplementary volume, devoted entirely to Modern Architecture in America, by Montgomery Schuyler, Esq., will appear in 1891.

VAN RENSSELAER.The Devil's Picture Books.

A History of Playing Cards. By Mrs. JOHN KING VAN RENSSELAER. Octavo, with 16 full-page plates in colors, and numerous illustrations in black and white, $5.00.

DOBSON.A Memoir of Horace Walpole.

By AUSTIN DOBSON. A limited édition de luxe, printed at the De Vinne press from type, on hand-made linen and Japan paper, and illustrated with eleven etchings by Percy Moran, by plates, etc.

This volume is not a reprint, but has been written especially for us, and we are its sole owners. Large octavo.

425 copies on Dickinson's hand-made paper, $15.00.

50 copies on Japan paper, $20.00.

4 copies on vellum. Prices on application.

These 479 copies embrace all that will be printed of this edition for both the United States and England.

The Sun Dial.

A Poem by AUSTIN DOBSON. Illustrated with many designs reproduced in photogravure, and with drawings in pen and ink, by George Wharton Edwards, and bound in unique fashion. Quarto, $7.50. An édition de luxe on Japan paper, limited to 50 copies, $20.00.

Four Frenchwomen.

By AUSTIN DOBSON. Small 12mo, cloth. This volume embraces sketches of Mademoiselle de Corday, Madame Roland, Madame de Genlis, and the Princesse de Lamballe. With a portrait of Mademoiselle de Corday, etched by Thomas Johnson. 12mo, cloth, gilt top, $1.25.

SCHOULER.A History of the United States Under the Constitution.

By JAMES SCHOULER, Esq. 4 vols., octavo, cloth, $9.00.

SAND.The Gallant Lords of Bois Dorée.

By GEORGE SAND. Translated from the French by Steven Clovis. 2 vols., 12mo, cloth, uniform with "Consuelo," $3.00.

In "The Gallant Lords of Bois Dorée" George Sand has given a delightful picture of the manners, ideas, and mode of life of the French nobility resident upon their estates in the first half of the 17th century. The political, social, and domestic relations of the times are so interwoven with the story of thrilling personal adventure that the tale commands the unbroken interest of the historical student as well as of the lover of romance and combat.

The Haunted Pool.

(La Mare au Diable.) From the French of George Sand, by Frank Hunter Potter. Illustrated with fourteen etchings by Rudaux. Quarto, beautifully bound, $5.00.

No greater contrast can be imagined than between "Consuelo" and "The Haunted Pool." Abandoning the busy haunts of men, with their strife and intrigues, George Sand here gives us a rustic picture. It is a simple tale of peasant life and love, told with a tender sympathy.

SUMNER.Alexander Hamilton.

(1757-1804), Statesman, Financier, Secretary of the Treasury. By Prof. WILLIAM G. SUMNER, of Yale University. 12mo, cloth, 75 cents. In Series "Makers of America."

BROWNE.George and Cecilius Calvert, Barons Baltimore of Baltimore.

(1580-1676), and the Founding of the Maryland Colony. By WILLIAM HAND BROWNE, editor of the Archives of Maryland. With portrait of Cecilius Calvert. 12mo, cloth, 75 cents. In Series "Makers of America."

BRUCE.James Edward Oglethorpe.

(1687-1785), and the Founding of the Georgia Colony. By HENRY BRUCE, Esq. 12mo, cloth, 75 cents. In Series "Makers of America."

MEAD.Our Mother Tongue.

By THEODORE H. MEAD. 12mo, cloth, $1.50.

"Our Mother Tongue" is written with the view of enabling the reader, without the aid of any other instruction, to correct any defects and imperfections that may exist in his manner of speaking our common language.

MABIE.My Study Fire.

A volume of essays by HAMILTON WRIGHT MABIE, editor of the Christian Union, author of "Norse Stories Retold from the Eddas." 12mo, boards, $1.25.

HOCHSCHILD.Désirée, Queen of Sweden and Norway.

From the French of Baron HOCHSCHILD, by Mrs. M. CARRY. 16mo, cloth, $1.25.

STOCKTON.

Ardis Claverden.

A Novel by FRANK R. STOCKTON, Author of "Rudder Grange," "The Late Mrs. Null," "The Great War Syndicate," "The Stories of the Three Burglars," etc. 12mo, cloth, $1.50.

This novel is the longest and most important of the author's works. It is thoroughly American, the scenes being laid partly in the South and partly in New York; but there is introduced into it a type of English character which has not yet been used in fiction.

The Great War Syndicate.

By FRANK R. STOCKTON, Author of "Rudder Grange," etc. 12mo, cloth, $1.00; paper, 50 cents.

The Stories of the Three Burglars.

A story of the time of Geo. Fox and the days of the Protector and the Restoration.

KRASZEWSKI.

The Jew.

A Novel by JOSEPH IGNATIUS KRASZEWSKI. Translated from the Polish by Linda de Kowalewska. 12mo, cloth, $1.50.

"The Jew" is a plea for Judaism in its higher spiritual and moral aspect. It is at the same time a remarkable picture of the various types of Jewish character, from lowest to highest, from the almost mediævally orthodox to the modern materialist, mercantile Jew. The story is laid amid the last uprising of the Poles in the time of Napoleon III.

GOOCH.

Miss Mordeck's Father.

A Novel by FANI PUSEY GOOCH. 12mo, cloth, $1.00. paper, 50 cents.

BANDELIER.

The Delight Makers.

A Novel of Pueblo Indian Life. By ADOLF F. BANDELIER. 12mo, cloth, $1.50.

Of this novel Dr. Francis Parkman writes: "Mr. Bandelier, whom I have known many years, from his connection with the American Institute of Archaeology, is one of the leading ethnologists and archaeologists on this continent. In some departments, indeed, he has no equal. Aside from literary qualities, his novel, which I have carefully read, has a great scientific value, being by far the best picture of life in the Pueblos of New Mexico that has ever been made public."

STRETTON.

The Doctor's Dilemma.

A Novel. By HESBA STRETTON. 12mo, cloth, $1.00.

At the same time a new edition of Hesba Stretton's stories, in new bindings. 12mo, cloth, $1.00.

READE.

Peg Woffington.

A Novel. By CHARLES READE. With an etched portrait by Thomas Johnson. 12mo, cloth, gilt top, $1.25. In the "Giunta Series."

Christie Johnstone.

A Novel. By CHARLES READE. With a frontispiece in photogravure by Wilson de Meza. 12mo, cloth, gilt top, $1.25. In the "Giunta Series."

ALLEN.

Miss Eaton's Romance.

A Novel. By RICHARD ALLEN. 12mo, cloth, $1.00; paper, 50 cents.

ABBOT.

Battlefields and Campfires.

Being a sequel to "Battlefields of '61," and carrying forward the story of the War for the Union. By WILLIS J. ABBOT, author of "The Blue Jackets of '61," of 1812, of '76." Quarto, with many original illustrations by W. C. Jackson. Cloth, $3.00.

MOORHEAD.

Wanneta the Sioux.

By WARREN K. MOORHEAD, of the Smithsonian Institution. A story of Indian life by one who has lived in the tipis of the Sioux nation, and writes from personal knowledge. With many illustrations of Indian life. Octavo, cloth, $2.00.

FINLEY.

Elsie Yachting.

A new volume in the "Elsie Series," by MARTHA FINLEY. 12mo, cloth, $1.25.

STAHL.

Maroussia.

AIMEE'S MARRIAGE. By P. H. C. 12mo, 534 pages, cloth, $1.50.

This is an exciting story of the difficulties and intrigues arising from the marriage of a Protestant to a Roman Catholic. It illustrates the deception of husbands and priests in their efforts to make a convert.

The characters presented to the reader are not fictions of the author's brain, but are drawn from men and women who, in our own generation, have acted out the principles they have severally imbibed. While strictly guarding the incognito of each actor, the writer has given the detail of a domestic drama which is assuredly finding a counterpart in many households.

"The book makes one indignant at the methods used by Romanists to secure proselytes."—National Baptist.

"This is strong writing . . . it is unfortunate that multitudes of instances have proved the truths here told."—Chicago Inter-Ocean.

"Those to whom we have loaned the book have devoured it with eagerness. It is one of those books which we ought to purchase for the purpose of lending it around."—Christian Observer.

RUDOLPH OF ROSENFELDT; or, The Leaven of the Reformation.

A Story of the Times of William the Silent. By JOHN W. SPEAR, author of "Grace Winslow," etc. 12mo, 419 pages, cloth, $1.50.

A thrilling portrayal of "those troublous times" when the convert to Protestantism, and even the devout Catholic searching for the truth, were intimidated by the horrors of the Inquisition. It is a capital story, well written and fascinating.

"In this book the ferocity and corruption of the Roman Catholic Church are painted with strong colors. We should say that it will be read with deep interest by the average boy."—Christian Union.

THE POOR LITTLE SWEEP. By M. ADELAIDE ATKINSON. Illustrated.

120 pages, board covers, 40 cents; paper covers, 30 cents.

A child of wealthy parents is enticed from his home by a chimney-sweep, and carried off to the sweep's den; is colored, dressed in rags, and taught to climb and sweep chimneys. After a long while, through the assistance of a kind-hearted servant in a house where he is put to work, he manages to escape, is nearly recaptured, and is finally found, almost frozen to death, by his sister.

The story of his sufferings is pathetically written, but is relieved by the evidence of his love for Jesus, to whom he prays for deliverance.

ILLUSTRATED RAMBLES IN BIBLE LANDS. By the late Rev.

RICHARD NEWTON, D.D. 8vo, 254 pages, 60 full-page engravings, cloth, $1.50; gilt edges, $1.75.

A new edition of this handsomely illustrated book of travels in the lands of the Bible, printed in the finest manner on plate paper, and bound in an attractive style. The price is moderate, and as popular as the style of the edition.

"Even those who have read all the books of travels in the Holy Land will find it a privilege to make the journey again with Dr. Newton."—Central Presbyterian.

"It deserves to be printed and reprinted. It is most faithfully graphic and fascinating in its pictures of Oriental scenery."—New York Observer.

WARD & DRUMMOND, NEW YORK,

HAVE JUST PUBLISHED:

Teetotaler Dick. His Temptations, Struggles and Triumphs. By THOMAS W. KNOX, author of "The Boy Travellers," "The Young Nimrods," etc., etc. 1 vol., 12mo, cloth, 418 pp., 6 illus., $1.50.

A Story of Country and City Life in the United States, and of Travel and Adventure in Foreign Lands.

Prominence is given throughout the narrative to the temperance question, and the effects of alcohol are considered in their moral, physical, social, business, economical and other aspects. Many of the views and investigations are here published in book form for the first time, and are of great general interest.

"Col. Knox has a gift for tales of adventure, and one takes up any book of his with the secure expectation of being interested. In this story one is not only interested, but instructed, warned and impelled toward the right. The facts and statistics woven into the tale may be accepted as from the most reliable sources. They add weighty sanctions to the teaching of the story."—New York Evangelist.

PRACTICAL TESTS

DEMONSTRATING THE SUPERIORITY OF THE GENUINE "OXFORD" TEACHERS' BIBLES.

REV. T. DE WITT TALMAGE, D.D.,
Says, October, 1890:

"During [my recent journeying in Palestine I found the 'Oxford' Teachers' Bible helpful, accurate and indispensable."

REV. J. M. BUCKLEY, D.D.,
EDITOR Christian Advocate,
[October, 1890:

"This is the most complete work for its purpose within our knowledge. With a copy of Webster's Dictionary and this book one could prepare discourses fresh, original, in any part of the world, through the whole course of a lifetime. It is our constant companion when absent from home, a library in itself, seldom leaving any additional help to be desired."

REV. WM. P. STOWE, D.D.,
Chicago, October 22, 1890:

"Having used a copy of your Bourgeois Edition of the 'Oxford' Teachers' Bible for about two years, I am frank to say, that for size and clearness of type, for valuable help and elegant and substantial binding, it has no superior in the market."

WARD, LOCK & CO., 35 Bond Street, New York.

T. Y. CROWELL & CO.'S

NEW BOOKS.

The Founding of the German Empire by William I.

Translated from the German of HEINRICH VON SYBEL by Professor MARSHALL LIVINGSTON PERRIN, of the Boston University. 5 volumes, 8vo, cloth, $10.00; half morocco, $15.00. Vol. I. is now ready. Vol. II. will be published Jan. 1, and the remaining vols. during the spring of '91. The American edition is enriched with finely engraved portraits of Emperors William I. and II. and Frederick and of Bismarck and Moltke.

Jane Eyre.

By CHARLOTTE BRONTË. With 48 illustrations by E. H. Garrett, engraved by Andrew. Carefully printed from beautiful type on superior calendered paper. 2 volumes, 12mo, cloth, gilt top, boxed, $5.00; half calf, $9.00. Édition de luxe, limited to 250 numbered copies, large paper, Japan proofs mounted, $10.00.

Jane Eyre is one of the books which seem destined to live. Its original and vivid style, its life-like and powerful plot, its tremendous moral purport (once misunderstood, but now recognized) make it one of the most absorbing novels ever written. The present illustrated edition is as perfect as will ever be produced. Presswork, paper, illustrations and binding combine into a whole that is a delight to the eye and a cynosure for a library.

Gospel Stories.

Translated from the Russian of Count L. N. TOLSTOI by NATHAN HASKELL DOLE. 12mo, $1.25.

Count Tolstoi's short sketches of Russian life, inspired generally by some pregnant text of Scripture, and written for the masses, perhaps even more than his longer works show the man's real greatness. Sixteen of these, selected from "Ivan Ilyitch" and other publications, are here presented in a neat and attractive volume.

The Narrative of Captain Coignet, Soldier of the Empire, 1776-1850.

An autobiographical account of one of Napoleon's Body-Guard. Fully illustrated. 12mo, half leather, $2.50; half calf, $5.00.

The recollections of Captain Coignet, perfectly authenticated, come to us like a voice from those mighty masses who under Napoleon made Europe tremble almost a hundred years ago. It is the record of the daily doings of a private soldier, who fought in many great campaigns. They are marked by quaint frankness and naïveté, an honest boastfulness thoroughly Gallic, and a keen sense of the picturesque value of truth. Nothing like these memoirs has ever been published. They are original, shrewd, clever, and they make the Napoleonic days live again.

Brampton Sketches; or, Old New England Life.

By Mrs. WILLIAM CLAFLIN. Illustrated. 16mo, unique binding, $1.25.

The old New England life is rapidly fading, not only from existence, but even from the memory of people. It is, therefore, well that those who were in touch with the best elements of this quaint and homely life should put upon paper and perpetuate its traditions and half-forgotten memories. This Mrs. Claflin has done for the town of Hopkinton, where her grandparents lived, and Brampton Sketches stand out as a truthful record of a peculiarly interesting provincial town.

Gold Nails to Hang Memories On.

A rhyming review, under their Christian names, of old acquaintances in history, literature and friendship. By ELIZABETH A. ALLEN. 8vo, gilt edges, $2.50.

This is the most original autograph-book ever published. It aims to give a history and record of the more or less familiar Christian names, and at the same time to commemorate the most familiar and famous men and women who have borne them. The book, therefore, has not only an interest of its own, but is distinctively educational. Spaces are left on each page for autographs.

Family Manners.

By ELIZABETH GLOVER, Author of "Talks About a Fine Art," etc. Booklet. Half cloth, 30 cents.

 THOMAS Y. CROWELL & CO.'S NEW BOOKS.—Continued.

Real Happenings.

By MRS. WILLIAM CLAFLIN. 12mo, booklet style, 30 cents.

Under the above attractive title, Mrs. Clafin has collected into a little volume of less than fifty pages five simple, unaffected stories from actual life. They are all pleasantly told, and are filled with a warm feeling of love and humanity.

Bourrienne's Memoirs of Napoleon Bonaparte.

Special limited edition with over 100 illustrations. 5 volumes, gilt top, half leather, $10.00.

Bourrienne's Napoleon is a classic of biography. In this edition graphic outline sketches depicting Napoleon's career make the text doubly attractive.

The Robber Count.

By JULIUS WOLFF. Translated from the 23d German edition by W. Henry and Elizabeth R. Winslow. 12mo, cloth, $1.50.

This masterpiece among Julius Wolff's prose romances is laid in mediæval times, and, as in "The Saltmaster," the author has caught the spirit of those days and transferred it to his pages. It is a notable addition to our list of historical fiction.

Tom Brown's School-Days.

By THOMAS HUGHES. With 53 illustrations by H. Winslow Peirce, engraved by Andrew, carefully printed from beautiful type on calendered paper. 12mo, cloth, $2.00; full gilt, $2.50; Édition de luxe, limited to 250 numbered copies, large paper, Japan proofs mounted, $5.00.

Praise or comment on this classic would be a work of supererogation. Every parent sooner or later puts it into his children's hands. We can only say that the present edition is by all odds the best that has ever been offered to the American public. Printed from large type, well illustrated, and handsomely bound, it makes a book worthy of any library.

Famous European Artists.

By MRS. SARAH K. BOLTON, author of "Poor Boys Who Became Famous," etc. With portraits of Raphael, Titian, Landseer, Reynolds, Rubens, Turner and others. 12mo, $1.50.

In this handsome volume Mrs. Bolton relates sympathetically and with her usual skill in seizing upon salient points the lives of Sir Joshua Reynolds, Turner and other artists whose names are household words. The sketches are accompanied by excellent portraits.

Famous English Authors of the 19th Century.

By MRS. SARAH K. BOLTON, author of "Girls Who Became Famous," etc. With portraits of Scott, Burns, Carlyle, Dickens, Tennyson, Robert Browning, etc. 12mo, $1.50.

During a recent visit abroad Mrs. Bolton had the opportunity of visiting many of the scenes made memorable by the residence or writings of the best known English authors, and the incidents which she was thus enabled to invest with a personal interest she has woven into the sketches of Tennyson, Ruskin, Browning and the other authors of whom she writes. These two companion volumes are among the best of the famous "Famous" Series.

The Portable Commentary.

By JAMIESON, FAUSSETT and BROWN. 2 volumes, crown 8vo, cloth, $4.00.

This convenient manual has a world-wide reputation as the best book of its kind in the English language. It is full, yet concise, easily understood, clear in type, convenient in size; a work that should be in the hands of every student of the Bible.

Half a Dozen Boys.

By ANNA CHAPIN RAY. Illustrated. 12mo, $1.25

This is a genuine story of boy life. The six heroes are capital fellows, such as all healthy lads, or girls for that matter, will feel their hearts warm toward. The simple incidents and amusements of the village where they live are invested with a peculiar charm through the hearty and sympathetic style in which the book is written. It is a book quite worthy of Miss Alcott's pen.

STANDARD PUBLICATIONS.

INSIDE THE WHITE HOUSE IN WAR TIMES.

By W. O. STODDARD. A new book by the author of "Dab Kinzer" is sure to find a ready welcome. This book is the most charming and instructive of all Mr. Stoddard's works. He was one of President Lincoln's private secretaries, and so knows whereof he writes. Not only will the young read this book with pleasure, but it is of equal interest to those of mature years. Humor, pathos, exciting incidents, and vivid pictures of life inside of the White House during the most exciting period of our history make this book of absorbing interest from cover to cover. Small octavo, illustrated by Dan Beard. Stamped cloth, $1.00. For sale by booksellers, or sent post-paid on receipt of price.

PERSONAL MEMOIRS OF U. S. GRANT.

In two octavo volumes. Two steel portraits by Marshall and by Ritchie. Two etchings. Numerous maps, plans and fac-similes of handwriting. In cloth, plain edges, $7.00 per set of two volumes.

McCLELLAN'S OWN STORY.

In one royal octavo volume of about 700 pages. Illustrated with steel-plate portrait and numerous fine wood-cuts. Engraved from photographs taken during the war, and from sketches drawn on the field of battle by A. R. Waud, the great war artist, who accompanied General McClellan during his campaigns. Fac-simile of a celebrated despatch. In fine cloth binding, $3.75.

LIFE OF POPE LEO XIII.

By BERNARD O'REILLY, D.D., L.D. (Laval). From an authentic memoir furnished by his Order. Written with the encouragement, approbation and blessing of His Holiness the Pope. In one volume, royal octavo, of about 600 pages. Two colored plates, two steel plates and twenty-two other full-page illustrations. Jubilee Edition. In cloth, gilt edges, $3.75.

THE LEGENDS AND MYTHS OF HAWAII: The Fables and Folk-Lore of a Strange People.

By HIS HAWAIIAN MAJESTY, KALAKAUA. Edited with an introduction by Hon. R. M. Daggett, late U. S. Minister to the Hawaiian Islands. An octavo volume of 530 pages. Two steel portraits and twenty-five other beautiful illustrations. An exhaustive index. In extra cloth, gold and black stamp, $3.00.

GENESIS OF THE CIVIL WAR: THE STORY OF SUMTER.

By MAJ.-GENERAL SAMUEL WYLIE CRAWFORD, A.M., M.D., LL.D. An octavo volume of about 600 pages. Illustrated with steel-plate portrait and numerous wood-cuts, engraved from photographs and from sketches drawn at the fort just previous to, and immediately after, the bombardment. Fac-similes of celebrated letters. In fine cloth binding, $3.50.

REMINISCENCES OF WINFIELD SCOTT HANCOCK.

By HIS WIFE. In one octavo volume of about 325 pages. Illustrated with steel-plate portraits of General and Mrs. Hancock, an etching of the school-house where General Hancock attended when a boy, and numerous wood-cut portraits. Also photo-engravings of General Hancock's birthplace, his headquarters at Governor's Island, his home at St. Louis, and other interesting scenes in his life. In full sheep binding, library style, $3.50.

TENTING ON THE PLAINS.

By Mrs. ELIZABETH B. CUSTER. An octavo volume of 700 pages. Illustrated by A. Berghaus and Frederick Remington. A steel portrait of General Custer, and his biography. Thrilling sketches of life on the Plains with General Custer. Interesting character sketches. Vivid pictures of the vicissitudes and perils of a frontier existence. Graphic descriptions of buffalo-hunting and Indian-fighting. In cloth, plain edges, $3.50; in half morocco, marbled edges, $5.50.

MARK TWAIN'S BOOKS.

A CONNECTICUT YANKEE IN KING ARTHUR'S COURT: A Satire.

An octavo volume, beautifully and profusely illustrated. In fine cloth, $3.00.

THE PRINCE AND THE PAUPER: A Tale for Young People of all Ages.

An octavo volume of about 400 pages. Beautifully and profusely illustrated. This book is a delightful romance of Edward VI. It is considered by many to be Mark Twain's best work. Eminent critics have pronounced it the best child's story, in every respect, that has ever been written. In fine cloth, $3.00.

THE STOLEN WHITE ELEPHANT, AND OTHER STORIES.

One volume, 16mo. This book contains some of Mark Twain's most entertaining sketches. Cloth, $1.00.

MARK TWAIN'S LIBRARY OF HUMOR.

An octavo volume of over 700 pages. Illustrated by E. W. Kemble. Certainly no one is more capable of judging what is entertaining than Mark Twain. For years he has carefully gathered what has struck him as being bright and amusing, and in this work he has been ably assisted. In cloth, plain edges, $3.50; in full sheep, library style, marbled edges, $4.00; in red seal, half russias, marbled edges, $4.25; in half morocco, marbled edges, $5.00; in full turkey morocco, bevelled boards, antique back and gilt edges, $7.00.

LIFE ON THE MISSISSIPPI.

By MARK TWAIN. An octavo volume of 624 pages and over 300 illustrations. In extra cloth, handsomely stamped in black and gold, plain edges, $3.50.

By the Author of "Days Serene."

SUMMERLAND

By MARGARET MACDONALD PULLMAN.

With 63 original illustrations, engraved on wood by George T. Andrew, and printed under his direction. Size $9\frac{1}{2} \times 13\frac{1}{2}$ inches. Oblong quarto, artistic cover of two colored cloths, beautifully ornamented, full gilt, \$3.75; turkey morocco, \$9.00; tree calf, \$11.00; English seal style, \$7.00.

"This 'Summerland' is one into which no winter comes. The verses are illustrated, line by line, with pictures of woodland and meadow, of quiet bay-fields and blooming primroses, soft-flowing streams and old orchards, with white flowers. The finest of all the illustrations are those of the woods, especially of the birch-trees and pine trees; the birches with their white stems having the effect of light wherever they stand, and the dark, thick boughs of the pines bringing in a truly Rembrandtesque effect of dark shadows.

"Perhaps not the least graceful designs are those smaller ones that strike the key-notes of the larger pictures—the mere glimpses of waving boughs, or fluttering butterflies, or delicate, shadowy ferns. There are some of these that stay in one's remembrance like a bit of some simple and sweet song."

A NEW EDITION.

DAYS SERENE. Original illustration of verses from the poets, by Margaret MacDonald Pullman. Engraved on wood by Andrew, and printed under his direction. Royal oblong quarto. Emblematic cover designs. Twenty-six full-page original illustrations. Full gilt. Size, $10\frac{1}{2} \times 14\frac{1}{4}$. Cloth, \$5.00; turkey morocco, \$12.90; tree calf, \$12.50; English seal style, \$9.00.

Miss Jerome's New Book.

FROM AN OLD LOVE-LETTER

Designed and illuminated in missal style by IRENE E. JEROME. Antique covers tied with silk, boxed, $2.00.

"In this work Miss Jerome has entered a new realm of illustrative art and gives us a delicate combination of text and illumination. Each page contains an apt quotation from the New Testament in ornamental setting, surrounded by an original design illuminated in the old missal style in colors and gold, the whole forming an exquisite love-letter. The work is marvelously executed, and will give pleasure to all who appreciate pure love, and will make a charming gift for Christmas and Easter."

NEW EDITIONS OF THE JEROME ART BOOKS.

IN A FAIR COUNTRY. With 55 full-page original illustrations, engraved on wood by Andrew, with nearly one hundred pages of text by Thomas Wentworth Higginson. Elegantly bound in gold cloth, full gilt, gilt edges, $6.00; turkey morocco, $15.00; tree calf, $15.00; English seal style, $10.00.

NATURE'S HALLELUJAH. By Irene E. Jerome. Elegantly bound in gold cloth, full gilt, gilt edges, $6.00; turkey morocco, $15.00; tree calf, $15.00; English seal style, $10.00.

ONE YEAR'S SKETCH-BOOK. By Irene E. Jerome. 46 original full-page illustrations, engraved by Andrew. In same bindings and at same prices as "Nature's Hallelujah."

A BUNCH OF VIOLETS Gathered by Irene E. Jerome. Original illustrations, engraved by Andrew. Quarto, cloth, $3.75; turkey morocco, $9.00; tree calf, $9.00; English seal style, $7.00; Palatine style, tied with chenille, $2.00.

THE MESSAGE OF THE BLUEBIRD; Told to Me to Tell to Others. By Irene E. Jerome. Engraved by Andrew. Cloth, blue-and-gold, $2.00; Palatine style, ribbons, $1.00.

A New and Improved Edition.

BABY'S KINGDOM

Wherein may be chronicled, as memories for grown-up days, the Mother's Story of the Progress of the Baby. Designed and illustrated by Annie F. Cox. Oblong quarto. Blue and white cloth, gold and white cloth, full gold cloth, $3.75; turkey morocco, $9.00.

This is practically a new work, the illustration and text having been re-drawn and engraved, and many additions made to the contents. The new shape and elegant binding will commend this edition to all customers.

A NEW EDITION.

Wonderful Deeds and Doings of

LITTLE GIANT BOAB AND HIS TALKING RAVEN TABIB

By INGERSOLL LOCKWOOD, author of "Travels and Adventures of Little Baron Trump and His Wonderful Dog Bulger," etc. Profusely illustrated by Clifton Johnson. Quarto, cloth, $2.00.

The hero of this story is the grandson of Boabdil the Moor, and the book is an account of his wonderful adventures. Some of the experiences of the Little Giant are very funny. Notably his connection with El Gran Captain and his visit to the men of stone, while the description of the night ride over the mountains to Malaga is a wonderful piece of writing. The talking raven and the scolding parrot will be found to be the best of good company, while the numerous illustrations by Clifton Johnson are very effective.

Oliver Optic's New Volume.

ON THE BLOCKADE

Two colors cloth. Emblematic dies. Illustrated. $1.50.

"A new story of Oliver Optic (Mr. Adams) will be received with enthusiasm. 'On the Blockade' is marked by all the popular features of the preceding volumes of the series, and deals with many of the same characters. The young readers will be interested in following the career of Christie Passford and his friends, whose varied experiences will be found full of interest, and we are sure they will never want to lay this volume down until the last page has been read. The author has written nothing more interesting or romantic than 'The Blue and the Gray Series.'—Boston Budget.

THE KELP-GATHERERS

A Story of the Maine Coast. Illustrated. Cloth, $1.00.

"The story is fairly alive with adventures, and under its intense interest is a most salutary lesson, which in this guise is sure to sink into young hearts and bear good fruit. The characters are drawn with that life-like spirit and fidelity in the delineation of which Mr. Trowbridge has no superior, and all the boys will see in them faithful transcripts of themselves or their mates, for such boys live in every neighborhood. This is a fitting companion to the first two volumes."—Boston Home Journal.

We desire to call the attention of the Trade to the New Monthly Magazine, the first number of which will appear early in 1891.

THE PANTOBIBLION,

PANTOBIBLION is to be an International Bibliographical Directory of the World's Scientific Literature, which will give every month every kind of bibliographical information of all books published on all scientific subjects in all the countries of the civilized world in every principal language.

A specially attractive feature of the PANTOBIBLION will be short critical articles on the leading publications (books and periodicals) of the world. Such articles will be written in the language of the reviewed publication. Therefore PANTOBIBLION will be printed in Fifteen (15) Different Languages:

English, French, German, Italian, Spanish, Portuguese, Dutch, Swedish, Danish, Hungarian, Roumanian, Servian, Russian, Bohemian and Polish.

PANTOBIBLION will be the most original and striking monthly in the world. It will also be the most instructive and interesting bibliographical publication of its class; moreover, it will be the largest of all similar periodicals, as it will contain every month 150 to 200 pages of the most valuable matter.

In short, PANTOBIBLION will be the best practical bibliographical magazine, unrivalled in the excellence, exactness and completeness of its bibliographical information in all departments of scientific literature in its broadest sense.

PANTOBIBLION is utterly indispensable for all interested in any special course of reading or study.

No person interested in any department of science treated in current literature can afford to be without PANTOBIBLION.

Every intelligent reader wishing to be always perfectly informed on all the scientific events and questions of the day, and to keep pace generally with intellectual progress throughout the world, should subscribe to the PANTOBIBLION.

PANTOBIBLION will have the largest circulation throughout the civilized world, as its polyglot contents will give it an international, cosmopolitan character, and make it equally valuable for every cultivated person, no matter to what country and nation he belongs, nor with what languages he is familiar.

Moreover, the PANTOBIBLION will be read especially by those who are earnestly interested in selecting and buying good books.

Therefore the PANTOBIBLION will be found of incalculable value to all publishers and booksellers, as it will give them a superior medium for advertising their publications throughout the world.

The comparatively small outlay for advertising in the PANTOBIBLION will never be regretted. It will be the most rational and well-paying investment of money for all persons connected with the book trade.

Try it at once, and you will be quite convinced of the truth of all above claimed, which is an impartial statement of facts and their logical deductions.

NOTES IN SEASON.

WORTHINGTON Co. will publish at once a volume of "Christmas stories" by W. Heimbürg. The stories are appropriate to the season, some of them being pathetic, others humorous; all, however, being unusually interesting. The volume is neatly gotten up and illustrated.

ROBERTS BROTHERS have just ready "Mine, not Thine," a boys' book, by William Everett, a sequel to "Changing Base;" also, new editions of his previous boys' books, "Changing Base" and "Double Play;" a new edition of "Diary and Letters of Madame D'Arblay," edited and revised by Sarah C. Woolsey; a new collected edition of the "Poetical Works of Lord Houghton," in two volumes, with a steel portrait; and a new cheap illustrated edition of "The Gamekeeper at Home," by Richard Jefferies.

HARPER & BROTHERS have just ready under the modest title of "Curiosities of the American Stage," a history of our native drama, embracing sketches of the most famous American players, and an account of the progress of dramatic art in this country since the period of the Revolution, written by Laurence Hutton. The work will be handsomely illustrated, containing portraits of many distinguished actors and actresses on the American stage. They will publish shortly a handsome popular edition of Hill's Boswell's "Life of Dr. Samuel Johnson," in six volumes. It is printed from the same plates as the superb édition de luxe of the work issued by the same house last year.

THE UNITED STATES BOOK COMPANY have ready for the Christmas trade unusually beautiful library editions of many standard authors. They have also made fine illustrated gift-books of editions, handsomely printed from new electrotype plates, of "Hypatia," with forty illustrations by Philip Goater; "John Halifax, Gentleman," with forty illustrations by G. A. Traver; and "Vanity Fair," with two hundred and eighty-seven of Thackeray's original illustrations. These books are printed on extra fine supercalendered paper, and are bound in English vellum cloth, stamped in silver and gold, with gilt-tops, or in fine half calf bindings. Each volume is put up in a box, and makes a rich-looking gift-book of enduring intrinsic value. A handsome volume has also been made of Rudyard Kipling's poems entitled "Departmental Ditties, Barrack-Room Ballads, and Other Verses." For young people they have provided "The King's Daughters," by Mrs. Ellen E. Dickinson, illustrated with numerous half-tone plates from original designs for this work by E. J. Austin; and newly illustrated editions of Grace Greenwood's ever delightful books, "History of My Pets" and "Stories of My Childhood."

LITTLE, BROWN & Co. have in preparation a treat for classical scholars in an entirely new, greatly enlarged and thoroughly revised edition of Dr. Wm. Smith's "Dictionary of Greek and Roman Antiquities." The first edition of this valuable work was published in 1842; the second, improved and enlarged, appeared in 1848, since which time it has been reprinted from the stereotyped plates without alteration. The period since then has been one of quite exceptional activity both in classical research and exploration; and in most, and indeed nearly all the subjects treated, recent treatises and recent discoveries have amplified or superseded much of the information which was available for the writers of the articles in the former editions. These are especially subjects relating to constitutional history and law, religious offices and festivals, architecture and arts in general, coins, dress, and domestic life. The views held on many of these subjects have been greatly altered by newly discovered inscriptions, by additions to museums and by the labors of recent scholarship bestowed upon such collections. The work will be in two volumes, the first of which is nearly ready; the second will be issued early in the spring of 1891.

WEEKLY RECORD OF NEW PUBLICATIONS.*

The abbreviations are usually self-explanatory. c. after the date indicates that the book is copyrighted; if the copyright date differs from the imprint date, the year of copyright is added. Books of foreign origin of which the edition (annotated, illustrated, etc.) is entered as copyright, are marked c. ed.; translations, c. tr.; n. p. in place of price, indicates that the publisher makes no price, either net or retail, and quotes prices to the trade only upon application.

A colon after initial designates the most usual given name, as: A: Augustus; B: Benjamin; C: Charles; D: David; E: Edward; F: Frederic; G: George; H: Henry; I: Isaac; J: John; L: Louis; N: Nicholas; P: Peter; R: Richard; S: Samuel; T: Thomas; W: William.

Sizes are designated as follows: F. (folio: over 30 centimeters high); Q. (4to: under 30 cm.); O. (8mo: 25 cm.); D. (16mo: 20 cm.); S. (16mo: 17½ cm.); T. (24mo: 15 cm.); Tl. (32mo: 12½ cm.); Ps. (8mo: 20 cm.). Sq., obli. nar., designate square, oblong, narrow books of these heights.

Adams, C. Francis. Richard Henry Dana: a biography. Bost., Houghton, Mifflin & Co., 1890. c. 2 v., 4+378; 3+436 p. por. D. cl., $4.

Mr. Dana is best known to the world of readers as the author of "Two years before the mast." But he was also one of the foremost members of the Boston bar, an authority in international law, a prominent political leader, a citizen zealous for the good name of his country, and intimately acquainted with a host of the most distinguished men of his time in this nation and in Europe. Mr. Adams' authorship guarantees a work of unusual interest, aside from the intrinsic attractions of his subject. It gives views of many illustrious persons, sketches of many important events, political and other, and contains a large number of valuable letters.

T. shp. $10.

Booth, W: In darkest England, and the way out. N. Y., Funk & Wagnalls, 1890. 4+285+31 p. O. cl., $1.50.

Gen. Booth of the Salvation Army, offers here a scheme for relieving the vice, misery and suffering of England's poor. The first part answers the question "Why darkest England?" and describes "the submerged tenth," the homeless, the out-of-work, those on the verge of the abyss, the vicious, the criminal, the children of the lost, and asks, "Is there no help?" Gen. Booth's scheme for the redemption of these dwellers in darkness is comprised in the second part, "Deliverance."

* In this list, the titles generally are verbatim transcriptions (according to the rule of the American Library Association) from books received. Books not received are indicated by a prefixed asterisk and this office cannot be held responsible for the correctness of their record.

It is described in detail under the following chapters: To the rescue!—the city colony; To the country!—the farm colony; New Britain—the colony over sea; More crusades; Assistance in general; Can it be done, and how?

Bramston, M. Wanted, a sphere; ll. by J. Nash. N. Y., E. & J. B. Young & Co., [1890.] 1 + 160 p. D. cl., 30 c.

Christie Dering thought she had lost her sphere when Dr. Dering commanded her to refuse the Burnett marriage. Her action at this time, and the lot which she finally occupies as her own, make a charming story, which conveys a moral to those who are searching for their proper level.

Erston, Jules. The life of an artist: an autobiography; tr. by Mary J. Serrano. N. Y., Appleton, 1890. 1 + 350 p. por. D. cl., $1.50.

"With charming frankness and simplicity Jules Erston relates in this volume his memories of boyhood, the aspirations and struggles of youth, and the associations of these later years. When Delacroix, Millet, Corot, Rousseau, Degas, and others of that memorable company still lived to the glory of the nation, which Erston himself represents as worthy. Of his own great success he speaks with becoming modesty."—Introduction.

Ezra (A) from the bush. N. Y., United States Book Co., [1890.] 2-148 p. D. (Lovell's Westminster ser., no. 30.) pap., 25 c.

Browning, Rob. The Browning recter: poems for recitation, by Rob. Browning and other writers; ed. by Albert H. Miles. 10th thousand. N. Y. and Chlc., Fleming H. Revell, [1890.] 6 + 248 p. D. (Platform ser.) cl., 50 c.

Browning, Rob. Pocket volume of selections from the poetical works of Robert Browning. [N. Y., G. Routledge & Sons, 1890.] 5-319 p. T. M. cl., 40 c.

Bruglière, Sara Van Buren. Good living: a practical cookery book for town and country. N. Y., G. P. Putnam's Sons, [1890.] c. 10 + 580 p. D. cl., $2.25.

The simplicity and exactness of the science of cookery is so carefully considered in "Good living," that the percentage of success must be materially increased by those who use its recipes. Especial attention has been given to our conventional simple home-dishes, while an earnest endeavor has been made to collect a series of dishes to please all palates, the gourmet included. A time-table is given for meats, one for poultry and game, and one for vegetables. There is also a table of comparative weights and measures which will be found useful in the kitchen. There is a chapter on "Relishes for breakfast," one on "Stray notes," relating to various household subjects, and "Directions for the order of service of dinner."

Bulwer-Lytton, Sir E. G. E. L., [Lord Lytton.] The last days of Pompeii. N. Y., G. Routledge & Sons, [1890.] 17 + 461 p. ll. O. cl., $3.

With 35 full-page ll. by Frank Kirchbach and others.

Osina, W. S. Picturesque India: a handbook for European travellers; ll. by J. Pedder, H. Sheppard Dale and H. H. Stanton. N. Y., G. Routledge & Sons, 1890. 37 + 612 p. O. cl., $3.50.

Descriptions, generously illustrated, of what may be seen by an ordinary traveller in the most accessible portions of British India. The pictures are of buildings, scenery, types of nationality and incidents of the bazaar, etc.

Gedy, Annie Cole. Worthington's history of the United States. N. Y., Worthington Co., 1890. c. 3-389 p. por. and ll. D. (Our boys' lib., no. 2.) pap., 50 c.

Century dictionary (The): an encyclopedic lexicon of the English language; prepared under the superintendence of W. Dwight Whitney. In 6 v. V. 4. N. Y., The Century Co., [1890.] c. 4 + 3557-4880 p. ll. Q. full shp., red., $15.

The present volume, containing the letters M to P inclusive, is the largest of the series yet published, and the richest in material. It illustrates in a striking manner, also, the technical and scientific character of the dictionary. With each successive instalment of the dictionary it has become more and more clear that the original estimates were too small, both as regards the total of pages in the completed book and the wealth of words and other lexicographical material which it would contain. The number 6,000 which was announced as the limit for the pages must be increased, the publishers say, to at least 7,000, and the number of words defined will be considerably in excess of the 500,000 at first promised. For the words contained in the first four volumes now published (two-thirds of the work, 480 pages) are in round numbers 120,000; and if we may suppose that the same fulness will characterize the letters remaining to be treated, the total cannot fall far short of 500,000.

Champlin, J. D., Jr., and Bonwick, Arthur E. The young folks' cyclopaedia of games and sports. N. Y., H. Holt & Co., 1890. c. 4 + 831 p. ll. D. cl., $2.50.

This book, forming a third volume of the well-known "Young folks' cyclopaedia" series, is intended to be a compendium of all kinds of recreations, including indoor and outdoor games, athletic sports, simple chemical and mechanical amusements, and every similar thing that can interest a wide-awake boy or girl. Where standard rules are accessible, they have been given word for word, thus making the book valuable as a work of reference for adults in case of dispute. Other features are the introduction of a brief historical sketch at the end of each article, the description of some foreign varieties of many of the games, and the attempt at a thorough system of etymology and derivation of all technical terms, as in the preceding volumes of the series.

Church, W. Conant. The life of John Ericsson. N. Y., C. Scribner's Sons, 1890. c. 2 v., 12 + 303. 11 + 357 p. por. and ll. O. cl., $6.

It was the declared wish of John Ericsson that Col. Church, the editor of The Army and Navy Journal, should tell the story of his life. He has told it in a way that will please all, and made excellent use of the letters and papers placed by Ericsson's executors in his hands. The biography is careful and exhaustive, reviewing, as only an intimate and life-long friend like Col. Church could review, the personal traits and habits of Mr. Ericsson. Ericsson's life began almost with the century. He was born in Vermeland, a territory of mid-Sweden, on July 31, 1803. After his first year he removed to London, where he completed his first fire-engine in 1828. With this his life as an inventor may be said to have fairly opened. During his next ten years in England he patented no less than thirty inventions. He crossed the ocean in his new propeller in 1839, which the English people had scoffed at, and remained here till his death. As the inventor of the Monitor, and of many useful and important improvements in our navy, he is famous throughout the world.

Oleland, E. Davenport. The white kangaroo: a tale of colonial life founded on fact. N. Y., Ja. Pott & Co., [1890.] 2 + 177 p. D. cl., $1.

In the Australian colonies the black natives believe that the "white kangaroo" has a charmed life. The Everdales lived at Willaroo, a sheep station many miles distant from Adelaide. One day Ralph and Ernest sighted an animal of this species and pursued the game. Their adventures are graphically pictured.

Coffin, C. Carleton. Freedom triumphant: the fourth period of the war of the rebellion, from September, 1864, to its close. N. Y., Harper, 1891 [1890.] c. 11 + 506 p. O. cl., $3.

The volume treats of the military movements of the closing period of the late war—of Sheridan in the Shenandoah, the march of the Army of the West from Atlanta to the sea, and through the Carolinas, the struggle of the Army of the Potomac around Petersburg and Richmond; the breaking up of the Rebellion; the author's personal observations on the chief cities of the Confederacy—Savannah, Charleston and Richmond; the capture of South-ham Lincoln to the capital of the Confederacy; the last great tragedy—his assassination.

Cone, Helen Gray. Baby sweethearts; new il. in colors and outline by Maud Humphrey; new verses by Helen Gray Cone. N. Y., F. A. Stokes Co., 1890. c. no paging, F. bds., $3; portfolio, ribbon tied, $4.

12 fac-similes of very large sketches in colors of children in picturesque groups or scenes. Each one of these pages is accompanied by a separate page, with original verses printed in connection with novel outline sketches of children, flowers, etc.

Connecticut. Supreme ct. of errors. Reports of cases, v. 58; by J. Hooker. N. Y., Banks & Bros., 1890. c. 8+643 p. O. shp., $3.50.

Constitutional and governmental rights of the Mormons, as defined by Congress and the supreme court of the U. S.; cont. the full text of the declaration of independence, the constitution of the U. S., Washington's farewell address, the organic act of Utah territory, the anti-polygamy law of 1862, the Poland law of 1874, the Edmunds law of 1882, the Edmunds-Tucker law of 1887, the U. S. statute of limitations, the poor convict release act, and the Idaho test oath law. To which is appended a digest of decisions, [etc.] Salt Lake City, Jos. Hyrum Parry, 1890. c. 116 p. D. pap., 50 c.

Cope, Rufus. The distribution of wealth; or, the economic laws by which wages and profits are determined. Phil., J. B. Lippincott Co., 1890. c. 364 p. O. cl., $2.

An examination of the extent and sources of our wealth and its distribution in the different branches of industry and trade. The author discusses in a popular manner the limitations on wealth, the correlation of wealth and poverty, interest, taxation, monopolies, protection and free trade.

Cotterill, Ja. H. The steam-engine considered as a thermodynamic machine: a treatise on the thermodynamic efficiency of steam-engines; il. by diagrams, tables and examples from practice. 2d ed. rev. and enl. N. Y., E. & F. N. Spon, 1890. 426 p. 8°, cl., $6.

Courtship (The) and marriage of Cock Robin and Jenny Wren; il. in col. by Jessie Watkins. N. Y., Marcus Ward & Co., [1890.] no paging, obl. D. bds., $2.

Monochrome landscapes, and quaintly pictured little figures in colored costumes illustrate this famous old rhyme.

Oralk, Dinah Maria, [formerly Miss Mulock.] John Halifax, gentleman. [Library ed.] N. Y., J. W. Lovell Co., [United States Book Co., 1890.] 2+643 p. il. O. cl., $1.50; hf. cl., $4.50. See notice under Thackeray, Vanity Fair.

Crandall, C. H., ed. Representative sonnets by American poets; with an essay on the sonnet, its nature and history, including many notable sonnets of other literature; also biographical notes, indexes, etc. Bost., Houghton, Mifflin & Co., 1890. c. 28+361 p. D. cl., $1.50.

"The design of this work is to group as many of the best sonnets in American literature as can be included in a volume of convenient size, and to make the selection as widely representative as possible, while giving to the most eminent sonnet writers a proper prominence by more numerous examples of their work. The editor has endeavored to apply to every sonnet the test of merit; first, for genuine poetic thought; for melodious expression, and a reasonable regard for the accepted forms."—Prefatory Note. Over 200 poets are represented.

Deane, D. J. John Wicliffe, the morning star of the Reformation. [Also,] Martin Luther, the reformer. 3d ed. N. Y., Fleming H. Revell, [1890.] c. 6-208 p. por. and il. D. cl., 75 c.

The facts in the lives of these two reformers; popularly written for young readers.

Detleff, Carl. A Russian country house; from the German, by Mrs. J. W. Davis. N. Y., Worthington Co., 1890. c. 311 p. D. (The rose lib., no. 3.) pap., 50 c.

A picture of life in Russia at the beginning of the present century, when the women of a house were the veritable bond-slaves of half-barbarous fathers and brothers. A young girl is here separated from her lover in the very hour before her marriage and forced into a more "desirable" alliance, the first bridegroom being murdered to more effectually secure his silence. It is a frightful exhibition of unbridled license, but drawn with power and skill.

Dickinson, Mrs. Ellen E. The King's daughters. N. Y., United States Book Co., [1890.] c. '88. 5+275 p. D. cl., $1.25.

The beautiful young heroine of this story is a rich society girl who is unhappy because she had no aim in life. By chance she is brought into the society of "The King's daughters" and becomes an active member. With the account of the many good deeds she performs is the history of her own love-story.

Dumas, Alex. (fils). The Clemenceau case; from the French by J. F. Alvord. Chic., C. H. Sergel & Co., [1890.] 288 p. D. (Sergel's Columbian lib., no. 3.) pap., 25 c.

Dunboyne, Lady. Heather and roses: a tale; il. by W. J. Morgan. N. Y., E. & J. B. Young & Co., [1890.] 1+223 p. il. D. cl., 80 c.

A sad event at Loch Leven forced the daughter of a Scotch artist to make her home with English cousins. Although all the Middletons have a part in the story, Pearl is the one most associated with Jeanie Fraser. A romance in the life of each causes a change of abode; Jeanie stays in England and Pearl goes to Scotland. Then it is that the girls are poetically alluded to as the Scotch heather and the English rose.

Dunboyne, Lady. The young squire: a story for children; il. by J. Nash. N. Y., E. & J. B. Young & Co., [1890.] 157 p. D. cl., 60 c.

By a special clause in his will, Frank Rivers ordained that his son should never be submitted to the tyrannies of a preparatory school, and that he should not enter the army. Mr. Rivers made provisions for Leo to assume the duties of Squire after his course at Eaton was finished. The theme of the story is Leo Rivers' visit to London.

The scene is Savannah, just after the settlement of Georgia by Oglethorpe. The hero is supposed to be one of the small band of followers that cast their lot with the General who founded the colony. Adventures in the life of "Mass' George" are interwoven with facts and fiction of the days of King George II.

Five, ten, and fifteen, by the author of "Miss Toosey's mission." N. Y., Ja. Pott & Co., [1890.] 2+178 p. il. D. cl., $1.

A baptism in the Carminster cathedral is the opening incident. The infantile hero and heroine were born on the same day, but in every other point of history they are very dissimilar, one being a Dean's granddaughter, the other a dissolute gypsy's son. All the events occur on the fifth, tenth and fifteenth birthdays of the children. The way Rosie and Pete sustain their part on these occasions makes an interesting and pathetic tale.

Nigel Browning's father expended the fortune of his ward in speculation. While hoping for successful returns to repay Fulvia Rolfe, he finds his schemes have failed. A relative of Miss Rolfe interferes on her behalf, and Mrs. Browning proposes that Nigel avert disgrace by marrying Fulvia. If Nigel complies he must resign happiness and Rebel Elvery. His decision is rendered more difficult by Fulvia's actions. Affairs finally adjust themselves in an unexpected way, and so ends a good story for young people.

A charming story, rivaling "The Abbé Constantin" in its delicacy and purity. It is uniform with the quarto ed. of the "Abbé Constantin" in size and appearance. The 23 full-page plates which interpret the story are noticeable for their beauty and finish. The text page is very handsome. The type is large and only 12 lines are given on a page, with a graceful vignette top and bottom.

The last American collection of sonnets appeared more than twenty years ago. Mr. Higginson, in his preface, says: "A comparison between that volume and this may safely be challenged, since it is clear that in this direction at least our literature has suffered no detriment with time." To indicate this fact, as well as from other motives, it has been thought best to give but a limited space to any single sonneteer. Some of the poems have been revised for this book by their authors, and one or two are printed for the first time. One hundred and fifty-two writers are represented. Notes are appended, giving the source of selection. Index of first lines. Index of authors.

embodied in a story. The fictitious and historical matter have been kept distinctive to obviate confusion of ideas. The fictitious part of the story tells why Leonard Abberline went to "Darkest Africa," of his adventures there, and of his return to England, where he proclaims Joseph Formley his leader.

Holley, Marietta. ["Josiah Allen's wife," pseud.] Samantha among the brethren. N. Y., Funk & Wagnalla, 1890. c. 10+437 p. il. O. cl., $2.50.

A humorous and semi-serious protest by "Josiah Allen's Wife" against the decision of the General Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church of 1888 respecting the admission of women as delegates to that body. There are many strong points made in favor of the weaker sex possessing equal rights with man, and they are submitted in that inimitable style for which the author is noted. The arguments are witty, and they lose no force from being expressed in the homely Yankee dialect.

The history of Switzerland, for many reasons, is peculiarly interesting to English-speaking peoples. In the first place the "playground of Europe" is every year visited by large numbers of English and Americans. Then to the Anglo-Saxon race the grand spectacle of a handful of freemen nobly struggling for and maintaining their freedom often amidst enormous difficulties and against appalling odds, cannot but be heart-stirring. The history of the period before the formation of the Confederation has been dwelt upon at some length. A chapter is also devoted to the remarkable discovery of the Swiss lake settlements made a few years ago. The formation and progress of the Confederation are traced step by step. The best Swiss histories and the most eminent Swiss scholars have been consulted.

Miss Jewett here adds another to her volumes of New England stories. To those who appreciate the marvellous fidelity with which she depicts New England scenes and characters, the imaginative sympathy with which she treats even the queerest of the queer men and women who figure in her stories, and the fine humor and indescribable charm which pervade every page, her book will be very welcome.

Johnson, Elizabeth Winthrop. Two loyal lovers: a romance. N. Y., F. A. Stokes Co., 1890. c. 381 p. D. cl., $1; pap., 50 c.

Opens in Italy about 1861; after, the scene changes to America. The story is one of the late war, and possesses some thrilling incidents. The author has drawn her material concerning the war, and the causes that led up to it, from personal recollections and from eminent authorities on both sides of the contest, which she industriously consulted.

Kington, W. H. G. Roger Willoughby, a story of the times of Benbow. N. Y., Ja. Pott & Co., [1890.] 4+402 p. il. D. cl., $1.50.

The opening incident occurs just after the restoration of Charles II. to the throne of Great Britain. His reign and the period succeeding the accession of James II. are covered in the book. The action of the Duke of Monmouth at Lyme Regis is one of the events of the story. Roger Willoughby is hero by virtue of his maritime adventures, and his connection with the famous Admiral Benbow.

Kipling, Rudyard. Departmental ditties, barrack-room ballads and other verses. N. Y., United States Book Co., [1890.] c. 5+270 p. D. cl., $1.25.

By the author of "Plain tales from the Hills," "Soldiers three," etc. This collection of verses has the same local color as the above stories. These subjects are mostly so drier and civilian life in India, and they are both funny and slightly pathetic. The volume is a most entertaining one, and the style crisp and witty.

Kirk, Elen O'neey. Walford, Bost., Houghton, Mifflin & Co., 1890. c. 4+432 p. D. cl., $1.25.

Walford, a New England manufacturing town, is the scene of Mrs. Kirk's novel. The plot includes a mysterious disappearance, love of course, jealousy, a strike and a tragedy. The story is full of incident and movement.

Locke, D. Ross. ["Petroleum Nasby," pseud.] The demagogue: a political novel. Bost., Lee & Shepard, 1891 [1890.] c. 4+465 p. D. cl., $1.50.

Those who only know the author as a humorist will be surprised by the force and the dramatic power manifested in this story, a posthumous novel by David R. Locke. Its interest turns largely on political intriguing; but the plot is strong, and its scenes at times rise to a pathos of which the postmaster at "Confederate Cross Roads" could scarcely be suspected. The darker aspects of political life in Washington are vigorously set forth, and the characters are sketched with great spirit and vividness. The familiar humor of the author crops out divertingly in the lighter scenes, and pleasantly tempers the prevailing seriousness of the story, which is told with great animation, and is well worth the reading.

Rustace Dane was one of the curates of St. Claudius, Gladyston. He lived with two brothers and four sisters at Danescourt. Claudia, the eldest sister, was housekeeper but as she devoted most of her time to art, was not a success in this sphere. At the juncture where everything was at "sixes and sevens," the practical Dorothy offers to assume the role of housewife, conditionally. Her proposition is accepted. She becomes to the family "Dorothy the Dictator." Her reign in the household was a success, but her experience will point out to young readers the dangers of being over-ready to assume authority or too quick of speech.

McGlasson, Eva Wilder. Diana's livery. N. Y., Harper, 1891 [1890.] c. 3+286 p. D. cl., $1.25.

"Diana's livery" is a fitting name for the Shaker garb, because the wearer is supposed to put on with it chastity. The scene is Pleasant Hill, Kentucky, where a community of Shakers formerly lived. Through the mediums, Naamah, Laura, Eldress Serena and Laban, many doctrines are explained, and the weakness and strength of this sect are exemplified. Serena and Laban are Shakers from conviction, Laura and Naamah by force of circumstances. The plot involves two love affairs and a tragedy.

Dr. Martin takes us literally "in the footprints of Charles Lamb," through the streets and haunts of London he most sought, and from one lodging-house to another occupied by himself and his sister Mary. Beginning with the house of his birth in Inner Temple Lane, he describes with pen and pencil each of the homes that were theirs, until we come to their final resting-place at Edlington. It may be called a topographical biography, and as such fills a place vacant in the literature pertaining to the essayist. An intimate and realistic yet sympathetic portrait of the man is woven in with the narrative.

Mary, Jules. The shadow of Roger Laroque; from the French. N. Y., Cassell Publishing Co., 1890. c. tr. 3+284 p. D. (Cassell's sunshine ser., no. 57.) pap., 50 c.

Madame Laroque and her young daughter witness by accident one evening a murder. The glimpse they get of the murderer convinces them that he is Roger Laroque, the husband of Madame and the father of little Suzanne. Many terrible scenes grow from this, and a strong net of circumstantial evidence convicts Roger of the crime and sends him into penal servitude. But he is an innocent man, innocent at least of murder, and is the victim of mistaken identity. The play of "Roger L'Honte" is based on this story.

Mathew, Frank J. Father Mathew, his life and times. N. Y., Cassell Publishing Co., 1890. 223 p. por. D. cl., $1.

Father Matthew was the founder of the Irish temperance movement. It was said that he brought more than seven million people to take the total abstinence pledge. He was b. 1790 and d. 1856. His attack upon intemperance began nearly fifty years ago, when he was about 47 years old. This sketch shows him as he was known to his nearest relations, traces the cause of his success, and the connection of his temperance movement with the history of his times.

In the school Maggie Bradford attended a prize was offered to the scholar excelling in composition. Gracie Howard, Lena Neville and Maggie Bradford are the three contestants most likely to win, until Lena's chance is lessened by an action of Gracie's and a sad accident. The story tells how the little girls strove for the prize, of Lena's heroism, Maggie's unselfishness and Grace's self-conceit.

Molesworth, Mrs. M., ["Ennis Graham," pseud.] Family troubles; il. by W. J. Morgan. N. Y., E. & J. B. Young & Co., [1890.] no paging, O. bds., 50 c.

The scene occurs in the household of Father Time, during the regular rally of his twelve children. The story tells how April and May disregarded the warning of their parent, and bred discord amongst the other months. Mr. Nobody's doings are also graphically told in picture and text.

Molesworth, Mrs. M., ["Ennis Graham," pseud.] The story of a spring morning, and other tales; il. by M. Ellen Edwards. N. Y.,

Longmans, Green & Co., 1890. 4+331 p. D. cl., $1.50.

Armar, Carrie, Gilly and Blanche were Lady Alice Fielding's children. The Lady Alice's birthday came in the springtime, and the children were accustomed to make her an offering of her favorite flower on that day. Mother was away from home, but expected momentarily, and nurse thought the children had better not go beyond the rectory garden for their flowers. They seemed to obey; but Carrie had planned differently, and a little after midnight a primrose expedition started for the wood. Their adventures, and the consequences to Armar, make a pleasing juvenile, which has a moral for the disobedient. The book contains also "The story of a spring morning;" "A dog story;" "Locked in;" "Poor Miss Crawford;" "The mysterious guide."

- Amid the historic scenes and characters of Colonial New York Hazel Boniface lived. She was called "A loyal little red-coat" because of the garment she wore, and her devotion to the cause of King George. Her friend, Job Staright, espoused the cause of the Whigs, and the story tells of the valiant defence of the children for their chosen parties, of their many escapades, and their association with men and women of Revolutionary fame.

- The Dene was a rambling old English manor and the property of Squire Hiltwood. His children regarded the house as theirs, and had in their favor the "nine points of the law." The attic was a receptacle for toys and nondescript treasure, and every room served in turn for the reception or entertainment of youthful guests. Hence the news that father's land agent and his sister were to be established at Hursleigh Dene made an unpleasant impression on Ran, Amabel, Dulcie, Ruby, Humphrey and Kitty, until a strange incident makes them acquainted with Mona, and puts a pleasanter construction on their case.

- As Police Headquarters reporter for the Associated Press, Mr. Riss has long been familiar with the seamy side of the life of the metropolis, and he gives a vivid picture of it in this book. It is not merely a portrait of the New York underworld, but a helpful and critical consideration of the forces therein at work, and the best means of counteracting them. It is perhaps in the sociological suggestions of his work that its greatest value lies. The reader obtains a wholesomely quickened sense of the essential unity of such a community as New York, and of the vital importance to the one-half of knowing how the other lives. The illustrations were nearly all made from instantaneous photographs, and form an interesting and valuable feature of the book.

Saint-Amand, Imbert de. The court of the Empress Josephine; tr. by T: Sergeant Perry. N. Y., C: Scribner's Sons, 1890. c. 5+334 p. por. D. cl., $1.25.

The most brilliant and the saddest period of Josephine's life are comprised in this volume. It opens with the beginning of the Empire, the journey to the banks of the Rhine, the Pope's arrival at Fontainebleau, the preparations for the coronation and an account of the coronation, etc. After an account of the etiquette of the Imperial Palace, the household of the Empress, comes the campaign of Austerlitz, the marriage of Prince Eugene, etc., the volume ending with the end of the year 1807.

Lawrence Ford believed that duty should be fulfilled at any cost. Acting upon this conviction he goes to Algeria where most of the story occurs, although it ends in England where Lawrence's last act at duty's shrine threatens serious consequences.

Shipton, Helen. Love and justice; il. by J. Nash. N. Y., E. & J. B. Young & Co., [1890.] 1+248 p. D. cl., $1.

To an accident in extreme youth Martin Bennet owed his deformity. An oversensitive nature and great pride made him realize only too keenly that the sight of his distorted body was apt to call forth either pity or repulsion. This embittered him; his nature was fast becoming as warped as his physical self, when a little child brought a loving element into his life. The story demonstrates that justice is above love, if these virtues are not in union.

Under "Personalities," the first volume gives many interesting personal details about Bismarck, Gambetta, Beaconsfield, Mr. Bright, Lord Randolph Churchill, Mr. Chamberlain, Mr. John Morley, Lord Rosebery, John Stuart Mill, Robert Browning, Doré and other famous men. Also descriptions of two Midlothian campaigns. Volume second has some of Mr. Smalley's most memorable papers that appeared in the New York Tribune and elsewhere, grouped under "Notes on social life," "Notes on Parliament," "Pageants" and "Miscellanies." Mr. Smalley for many years has been the English correspondent of the New York Tribune, under the initials "G. W. S."

Although there was much that was pleasant in Nancy Glendower's London visit, it also had a dark side. An experience she had made her long for home, and after her return to Penhryn, she grew to look upon the sleepy little Welsh town as a fair haven after a troubled existence in Thornleigh Grange.

Smith, Mrs. Lucy T., [formerly L. T. Meade.] The Beresford prize; il. by M. Ellen Edwards. N. Y., Longmans, Green & Co. 1890. 4+354 p. D. cl., $1.50.

By the will of Mrs. Johanna Beresford, Little Merton school was endowed with a prize fund. A scholarship was to be awarded whenever a pupil could fulfil the hard conditions that entitled her to competition. At the time of the story four years had elapsed since any scholar had been adjudged worthy of competition, but now Alison Hilton and others meet the requirements. Alison is thoroughly imbued with a hope to win, until a crisis comes in which she must weigh Kit's happiness and Rose Merryweather's interests, and determine between duty and desire.

Dick Markham tells Hope Karron an incident of his past which influences her to refuse his proffered suit. Hope makes a favorable reply, and they bid fair to become a happy couple until an unexpected arrival makes a coward of the hero. Then it is that Hope proves her own true-heartedness. The scenes are English and the characters well drawn. The plot is interesting because it involves the fate of one girl and the honor of another.

Stables, Gordon. Exiles of fortune; a tale of a far north land. N. Y., Jas. Pott & Co., [1890.] 3-382 p. il. D. cl., $1.50.

Godfrey Dennis and Spencer Roe were cousins and comrades. In a spirit of banter Spencer taunted Godfrey, and Godfrey retaliated in a way that made him leave England. After a while Spencer goes in search of his cousin, and the journey pictures much that is interesting on the high seas, as well as the adventurous life in Alaska. A wedding in Yorkshire makes a romantic ending to a good book for boys.

Stables, Gordon. Rocked in the cradle of the deep: a tale of the salt, salt sea; il. by W. H. Overend. N. Y., E. & J. B. Young & Co., 1890. 1+250 p. il. D. cl., $1.

The story tells the wonderful adventures of Launcelot Lauriston the elder, which precede the birth of his son at sea, and of the still more stirring exploits of Launcelot, Jr. and his friend Rankin, apprentices of the Chang Foo.

Stoddard, R: H: The lion's cub, with other verse. N. Y., C: Scribner's Sons, 1890. c. 6+153 p. por. D. cl., $1.25.

The rare qualities of Mr. Stoddard's verse—its broad view of life, its profound thought and its graceful and melodious form—are admirably reflected in this new book of poems.

Stretton, Hesba. Alone in London. [N. Y. and Chic., Fleming H. Revell, 1890.] 3-159 p. il. D. cl., 60 c.

A story of the London poor; has a little girl heroine.

Sumner, W: Graham. Alexander Hamilton, N. Y., Dodd, Mead & Co., [1890.] c. 10+281 p. D. (Makers of America ser.) cl., 75 c.

There are already a number of good biographies of Alexander Hamilton, of different sizes and planned for various uses. The political history of the first three administrations has also been carefully studied and well described from various points of view. The author therefore has not written a biography, nor a history of the times of Hamilton. The title of the series defines his task. He has only endeavored to show how and in what sense Alexander Hamilton was one of the makers of this American state.

Sybel, Heinrich. The founding of the German empire by William I: based chiefly upon Prussian state documents; tr. by Marshall Livingston Perrin, assisted by Gamaliel Bradford, jr. 5 v. V. 1. N. Y., T: Y. Crowell & Co., [1890.] c. 9+492 p. por. O. cl., $2.

The welding together into a mighty united nation of petty dukedoms and principalities which fifty years ago made up the heterogeneity of Germany, was the greatest political feat of this century. Dr. von Sybel, pre-eminently fitted by nature and training to be the historian of this tremendous creation, had the additional advantage of access to original sources of information in the archives of Prussia, Hanover, Hesse Cassel and Nassau, and the state papers and diplomatic correspondence preserved in the Foreign Office at Berlin. His history, therefore, may be accepted as absolutely authentic; and that it has been so accepted is shown by the universal chorus of praise from German critics.

After the Cascabel family with their travelling show had made a fortune in America, they bought a safe to keep their money in, and started homeward across the plains, their final destination being France. But the safe with the money is stolen and they are obliged to change their plans. Without money to pay for a sea voyage, they conclude they must get to France by land as far as possible. Their new route is up through California, Oregon and Washington Territory and into Alaska. Behring Strait, which separates America and Asia, being frozen over, they easily travel across it in their van, the Fair Rambler. From here they make the distance to Russia in Europe and soon to France. No end of marvellous adventures are of course woven into this remarkable journey.

Vernon, Mrs. R. James Calvert; or, from dark to dawn in Fiji. N. Y. and Chic., Fleming H. Revell, [1890.] 4-160 p. il. D. cl., 75 c.

An account of the missionary labors of the Rev. James Calvert in the Fiji Islands.

Walford, L. B. The havoc of a smile. N. Y., G: Munro, [United States Book Co., 1890.] 6-168 p. D. (Seaside lib., pocket ed., no. 1615.) pap., 20 c.

Warden, Florence, [pseud. for Florence Alice Price, now Mrs. G: E. James.] City and suburban. N. Y., G: Munro, [United States Book Co., 1890.] 4-144 p. D. (Seaside lib., pocket ed., no. 1623.) pap., 20 c.

Wells, D: A. The question of ships: the decay of our ocean mercantile marine—its cause and cure. [Also,] Shipping subsidies and bounties. by J: Codman. N. Y., G: Putnam's Sons, 1890. c. '89. 2+19 p. D. (Questions of the day, no. 64.) pap., 25 c.

Wiggin, Kate Douglas. Timothy's quest: a story for anybody, young or old, who cares to read it. Bost., Houghton, Mifflin & Co., 1890. 201 p. S. cl., $1.

The "quest" of Timothy, a boy of ten or twelve years, is for a mother for a little girl who has been companion in the establishment of a wretched baby-farm. They run away with a dog, and this book tells story of their experiences and success. It is bright, morous and touching, and cannot fail to be read with interest.

Wiggin, Kate Douglas, and Smith, Nora A. The story hour: a book for the home and the kindergarten. Bost., Houghton, Mifflin & Co., 1890. c. 185 p. il. D. cl., $1.

A number of short stories by Mrs. Wiggin and her sister that will enlist the hearty interest of readers of tender age.

Wilbur, Mrs. R. M. Dorothy. Phil., American Baptist Pub. Soc., 1890. 192 p. 12°, 90 c.

Williams, U. Mattieu. The chemistry of and steel making, and of their practical uses. Phil., J. B. Lippincott Co., 1890. 8°, cl., $3.

Wiltse, Sara E., comp. Kindergarten stories and morning talks. Bost., Ginn & Co., 1890. c. 8+212 p. D. cl., 85 c.

Witty sayings selected from all sources. N. Y., J. S. Ogilvie, [1890.] c. 2-187 p. il. D. (Sunnyside ser., no. 3.) pap., 25 c.

Wolff, Julius. Fifty years, three months, two days: a tale of the Neckar Valley; from the 15th German ed., by W. H. Winslow and Elizabeth R. Winslow. N. Y., T. Y. Crowell & Co., [1890.] c. tr. 291 p. D. cl., $1.50.

The somewhat enigmatical title is soon explained by the course of the narration. In the middle ages there was in Germany a law called Das Recht der Hagestolze (which is the title of the German original), whereby a man, attaining the age of fifty years, three months and two days, without having entered into the bonds of matrimony, was deprived of the right to devise his estate (except such part as was entailed), which was confiscated at his death to the Prince Palatine. In Wolff's charming tale the old bachelor, Hans von Steinhach, has almost reached this fatal age, when his brothers and their wives enter into a plot to get him married to a charming widow with whose family there had been a feud. Other interests are opposed, but the plot at last proves successful.

Wood, H. F. The night of the 3d ult. N. Y., G. Munro, [United States Book Co., 1890.] 2-320 p. D. (Seaside lib., pocket ed., no. 1595.) pap., 20 c.

Woods, Katherine Pearson. A web of gold. N. Y., T. Y. Crowell & Co., [1890.] c. 1+307 p. D. cl., $1.50.

Christian Socialism, the deadly effect of trusts, labor problems and other questions of the day play a part in this story by the author of "Metzerott, Shoemaker." The workings of a secret society like the Italian Society of the Mafia is graphically portrayed. The character-drawing is remarkably clear; the young French hero, the Irish foreman, the manager of the Trust, the mysterious chief of the Order, the gentle rector and his lively children whose quaint sayings and doings serve as a foil for the intense portions of the story, the earnest and impulsive Theo, the proud and obstinate manufacturer and his lovely daughter, all stand out in life like colors.

Wordsworth, W.: A selection from the sonnets of William Wordsworth; il. by Alfred Parsons. N. Y., Harper, 1891 [1890.] c. ed. 90 p. Q. cl., $5.

Eighty-eight of Wordsworth's sonnets are here illustrated with rare skill and artistic effect. The volume is one of the handsomest of holiday-books, beautiful in paper, print, binding, etc., as well as in illustrations.

Wright, Julia McNair. A plain woman's story. Phil., Presb. Bd. of Pub., [1890.] c. 2-320 p. S. cl., $1.15.

This story of Joan Hazard's project and how it worked out is not only interesting reading but is full of suggestions of a practical kind. While adapted for library and home reading, the book has also its wise hints for philanthropists.

Wyss, J. Rod.; and Montolieu, J. I. P. de B. The Swiss family Robinson; new tr. from the original German ed., by W. H. G. Kingston. N. Y., G. Routledge & Sons, 1891 [1890.] 14+488 p. il. O. cl., $2.50.
Il. with 12 pl. in colors.

Young elocutionist (The); a book which explains the art of speaking gracefully and well. N. Y., Street & Smith, [1890.] c. 2-60 p. il. S. (S. & S. manual lib., no. 15.) pap., 10 c.

JANUARY 6, 10, 1891.—Lefingwell collection of autographs. Pt. 1: A to J.—C. F. Libbie & Co., Boston.

This collection, which was begun by the late Prof. Lefingwell, of New Haven, Conn., more than fifty years ago, is the largest and richest ever offered in America. It would be almost impossible to find, except in some Historical Society archives, such valuable papers and documents as are contained in this collection. About sixty numbers refer to papers by Samuel Adams and others relating to the "Stamp Act" and "Port Bill," the action in regard to the Boston Massacre, and the destruction of tea in Boston Harbor. A document which sheds new light upon the Boston Massacre is the original coroner's inquest, which is signed by the twelve jurymen, revealing the fact that Crispus Attucks was the pseudonym of Michael Johnson. There are also forty printed broadsides, Revolutionary and Colonial, comprising "The Death of Wolfe," "Battle of Lexington," the various acts of the Continental Congress, "The Address to the Soldiers" used by the benighted British for circulation in the American army around Boston, and many others. A number of documents relate to the King Philip's War, the French and Indian Wars, the events preceding the Revolution, and the contents in the field and in Congress during its progress, also many relating to our late Civil War. Of the signers of the Articles of Confederation letters by Samuel Adams, John Hancock and others, to the number of 500 out of 550 members, are represented. The English Premiers, signers of the Constitution, foreign sovereigns, Bishops of the Episcopal Church, Presidents of Harvard College (complete), the Colonial Governors, signers of the Declaration and numerous noted Generals and civilians of the Revolutionary period are represented.

THE COPYRIGHT VICTORY.

AT last—the copyright bill has passed the House by the satisfactory vote of 139 to 95, thanks especially to the able management of Mr. Simonds and the admirable support of Mr. Breckinridge, both of whom have linked their names historically with this great measure of justice and good policy. The Senate, by its passage of the original Chace bill, of which the present is a modification, including a reciprocity clause, has already shown its disposition in favor of the measure; in fact may probably be depended on more since Mr. Beck, an enemy of the bill, has been succeeded by Mr. Carlisle, an earnest advocate of copyright. The President, in his message, recommends favorable legislation on the subject. The only fear therefore is from failure in parliamentary management to get a vote on the bill in the Senate before the appropriation on other important bills block the way, or from mistake on the part of friends of a less restricted copyright, in attempting amendments which, however desirable in themselves, would make delay fatal to present success, and would jeopard a great result to grasp for a small gain. The friends of the cause look to Senator Platt, who will thus identify his name and his State with an historic law, to give the bill the necessary generalship, and trust that the Senate, in which Clay and Webster commenced the fight in 1837, will crown its own work by giving us international copyright as the best of Christmas gifts.

It has been an obstinate and a long and a difficult fight, and all who have helped to bring about the successful issue are entitled to high praise and to most hearty congratulations. When once the bill becomes a law, the book trade especially will feel that "distinct increase of self-respect" of which one of our co-workers in the cause speaks, and the timid will, we are confident, find out in a short time that the passage of the bill is the best thing that has happened to them in their business lives, while the gain to the nation at large, as well as to the nation's authors, will be beyond measure.

THE rush of the Christmas trade has begun. The advance-guard of shoppers invaded the stores on Saturday last, and kept up the raid until late into the evening; and this week the whole army has begun its assault, and will keep it up until the end of the month. The store-keeper who has not prepared his establishment for a defence of his reputation as an active, enterprising dealer will be swept away into oblivion. He needs no word of ours as counsel—he has been deaf to words of advice in the past, and blind, beyond all hope, to his interests. That man for years has been deploring the tendency of the age, the pernicious methods of competition, the pushing and the trampling of the multitudes past his dank and cobwebby store-windows, with their weazened display of faded rheumatic book-backs, and fly-blown writing-paper, and warped sealing-wax, on to his enterprising neighbor. To the latter we can only give a word of encouragement—his time being precious—the season at hand promises to be the busiest we have had for years. Every indication points that way. Prompt and intelligent service and courteous attention will win the day for you in spite of catch-penny competition. In the end, may a swelled bank account and the satisfaction of work well done be the reward.

SOME time before this issue reaches its destination all who have ordered copies of the imprint editions of the CHRISTMAS BOOKSHELF and of the Literary News will have received their supplies. We think we may say without vanity that our Christmas issues this year present a creditable appearance—we believe we are right in saying that they made their appearance in better time than their contemporaries, thus giving better satisfaction to booksellers who depend upon them as a medium for reaching Christmas shoppers. We owe thanks especially to the publishing trade for their very handsome support of these issues, compelling us to add eight extra pages to the BOOKSHELF. The retail trade has also shown its appreciation by ordering liberal supplies of the imprint editions, and we are therefore able to supply only a few hundred copies more of the CHRISTMAS BOOKSHELF, the supply of the Literary News being exhausted. Those at a distance who desire them will do well to order by telegraph.

ACCORDING to reliable information the concern doing business under the style of "Le Transit International de l'Exposition Universelle (G. Moutet, l'administrateur), 136 rue d'Aboukir, Paris," is an "institution de fantaisie." The circulars sent out by this concern to the American exhibitors to whom prizes were awarded at the recent Paris Exposition, with notice that on receipt of a certain amount of francs and centimes their medals or diplomas would be forwarded by "l'administration du transit international," are sent, it is alleged, for the purpose of "getting the money from foreign exhibitors and returning nothing in exchange." For the information of American exhibitors we are requested by M. Terquem to state that no attention whatever is to be paid to demands of this kind. The distribution of prizes (which has been progressing very slowly) will be through the American Legation at Paris, and these will be forwarded by it to the proper Government officials in this country, who will be responsible for their final delivery. There are to be no charges of any kind, we understand; and next year, it is hoped, all who are entitled to awards will receive them.

PRESIDENT HARRISON, in his message to Congress, refers to the subject of international copyright in the following language: "I also renew my recommendation in favor of legislation affording just copyright protection to foreign authors, on a footing of reciprocal advantage for our authors abroad."

PASSAGE OF THE COPYRIGHT BILL.

ON the 2d inst. the House of Representatives by a vote of 132 to 74 called up for consideration the Copyright bill. Of the affirmative votes 88 were cast by Republicans and 44 by Democrats, showing that the question was not regarded as a party measure, but as one of policy, upon which parties were free to divide. Mr. Simonds, of Connecticut, called for the bill, and at once Mr. Payson—the Hon. Lewis E. Payson, of Illinois—was ready to make the motion against consideration. Upon that demand there was nothing to do but to go to a vote. The yeas and nays were ordered, and the roll was called. There were 206 members present, of whom 132 voted for and 74 against consideration.

As soon as it was apparent that the motion to consider would prevail, Mr. Blount, of Georgia, changed his vote and then moved to reconsider. This was the beginning of a fight that lasted until adjournment. Motions to recommit, to take recess, to adjourn, and to do other things except to consider the bill, followed each other in rapid succession. The resistance to the proposition to discuss the bill suggested the weakness of the opponents of the measure, for it was plain that they did not care to expose ignorant opponents of the bill to the danger of conversion through enlightenment. Mr. Blount's motion was lost by 71 yeas to 119 nays. Mr. Simonds moved an amendment fixing July 1, 1891, as the date on which the bill should go into effect, whereupon Mr. Kerr, of Iowa, offered a motion to adjourn, which was defeated. Mr. Hopkins, of Illinois, next moved to lay the bill on the table. The motion was lost, and after the House had voted down motions for reconsideration and for adjournment, the previous question was ordered—yeas, 106; nays, 73. The House adjourned, however, without taking any action on the bill, leaving it as unfinished business.

On the morning of the 3d, after the reading of the journal, the Speaker stated the pending business to be the further consideration of the copyright bill.

Mr. Simonds said that the friends of the measure were willing to have a vote taken immediately, but expressed his readiness to yield any time that its opponents might desire.

Mr. Springer, of Illinois, argued that the bill changed the Tariff law in so far as the importation of books was concerned. So that the first effort after the McKinley bill and after the election was to make it more impossible to import articles from abroad, notwithstanding the statement of the President that importations were increasing.

Mr. Peters, of Kansas, expressed his opposition to the character of legislation involved in the bill. It was in the nature of quasi-special legislation, and as a matter of fact was the very legislation that had been largely condemned by the last election. There was no demand from the reading public for this legislation. It was demanded only by a few representatives of a certain profession.

Mr. W. C. P. Breckenridge, of Kentucky, next made a brilliant speech in favor of the measure. He replied to the objections made to it by saying that all legislation was practical and a matter of concession. The question was not whether the remedy could be made absolute, but how nearly absolute it could be made. There were divers interests involved—the interest of the author who furnished the brains, the interest of the publisher who furnished the capital and the interest of the workman who furnished the labor. All these interests must be combined in this bill, and all were combined in it. He did not believe that cheaper books could be obtained now than could be obtained under this bill; but even if they could, this was a matter of justice and honesty. It was the old argument he had heard of in Kentucky, when one colored man asked another, "Sam, how's it you sell your brooms cheaper than me, when I steals the straw?" "Oh, that ain't nothin'," was the reply, "I steals my brooms ready made." He believed that a man's dollar belonged to the man that made it; and society's highest duty was to protect that man in the possession of his dollar, whether that man was a foreigner or not.

Mr. Farquhar, of New York, said that the intention of the bill was public honesty. It benefited the printers, and out of the printing offices came cheap books. By no means could the people have cheap books save by honest legislation. No individual of a foreign nation could get any benefit out of this law unless that nation stood on the same honest platform as the United States. The measure was in the honest line of reciprocity.

Mr. McAdoo, of New Jersey, said that the moral sense of the American people would be outraged unless this bill was passed. An overwhelming majority of the American people was in favor of honesty, and the first point in favor of this bill was that it was an honest measure. The second point was that it was an American bill, and would give the American people American books by American authors.

Mr. Kerr, of Iowa, opposed the bill, characterizing ideas as something intangible, and referring to the pending measure as a great tariff law. It was a law for the protection of the printers. It was not a protective tariff, but a prohibitive tariff.

Mr. Cummings, of New York, declared that the bill was demanded not only by the National Typographical Union, with its 45,000 members, but by the American Federation of Labor and by the Knights of Labor. It was recognized not only as dealing out justice to the authors, but as doing justice to the organized printers of the Union. As the case stood now, American books were sent to England and put in type, and their shell plates brought here and sold to American publishers for the purpose of robbing American printers of the work that should be done in this country. Not only this, but English books were brought here in shell plates. All the printers asked was, that if English books were to be sold cheap in this country, the type should be set in this country.

Mr. Butterworth, of Ohio, said the bill provides for a recognition of the rights of property. The gentleman from Iowa (Mr. Kerr) had said that ideas were intangible. Whenever the time came that ideas—thinking—had no money value, we would become a nation of "chumps."

Mr. Peters, of Kansas, moved to recommit the bill with instructions to the Committee on Patents to report it back with an amendment limiting the life of a copyright to fourteen years.

Mr. C. R. Breckinridge, of Arkansas, moved to amend the instructions by instructing the committee to provide for the importation of books of foreign authors at the rate now provided by law. This was lost—yeas, 95; nays, 140—and Mr. Peters' motion suffered the same fate by yeas, 98; nays, 138.

The question then recurred to the passage of the bill, and this was successfully accomplished by this vote:

The following is the text of the bill as passed:

A BILL

To amend title sixty, chapter three, of the Revised Statutes of the United States, relating to copyrights.

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That section forty-nine hundred and fifty-two of the Revised Statutes be, and the same is hereby, amended so as to read as follows:

"SEC. 4952. The author, inventor, designer, or proprietor of any book, map, chart, dramatic or musical composition, engraving, cut, print, or photograph or negative thereof, or of a painting, drawing, chromo, statue, statuary, and of models or designs intended to be perfected as works of the fine arts, and the executors, administrators, or assigns of any such person shall, upon complying with the provisions of this chapter, have the sole liberty of printing, reprinting, publishing, completing, copying, executing, finishing, and vending the same; and in the case of dramatic composition, of publicly performing or representing it or causing it to be performed or represented by others; and authors or their assigns shall have exclusive right to dramatize and translate any of their works for which copyright shall have been obtained under the laws of the United States."

SEC. 2. That section forty-nine hundred and fifty-four of the Revised Statutes be, and the same is hereby, amended so as to read as follows:

"SEC. 4954. The author, inventor, or designer, if he be still living, or his widow or children, if he be dead, shall have the same exclusive right continued for the further term of fourteen years, upon recording the title of the work or description of the article so secured a second time, and complying with all other regulations in regard to original copyrights, within six months before the expiration of the first term; and such persons shall, within two months from the date of said renewal, cause a copy of the record thereof to be published in one or more newspapers printed in the United States for the space of four weeks."

SEC. 3. That section forty-nine hundred and fifty-six of the Revised Statutes of the United States be, and the same is hereby, amended so that it shall read as follows:

"SEC. 4956. No person shall be entitled to a copyright unless he shall, on or before the day of publication in this or any foreign country, deliver at the office of the Librarian of Congress, or deposit in the mail within the United States, addressed to the Librarian of Congress, at Washington, District of Columbia, a printed copy of the title of the book, map, chart, dramatic or musical composition, engraving, cut, print, photograph, or chromo, or a description of the painting, drawing, statue, statuary, or a model or design for a work of the fine arts for which he desires a copyright, nor unless he shall also, not later than the day of the publication thereof in this or any foreign country, deliver at the office of the Librarian of Congress, at Washington, District of Columbia, or deposit in the mail within the United States, addressed to the Librarian of Congress, at Washington, District of Columbia, two copies of such copyright book, map, chart, dramatic or musical composition, engraving, chromo, cut, print, or photograph, or in case of a painting, drawing, statue, statuary, model, or design for a work of the fine arts, a photograph of same: Provided, That in the case of a book the two copies of the same required to be delivered or deposited as above shall be printed from type set within the limits of the United States, or from plates made therefrom. During the existence of such copyright the importation into the United States of any book so copyrighted, or any edition or editions thereof, or any plates of the same not made from type set within the limits of the United States, shall be, and it is hereby, prohibited, except in the cases specified in section twenty-five hundred and five of the Revised Statutes of the United States, and except in the case of persons purchasing for use and not for sale, who import not more than two copies of such book at any one time, in each of which cases the written consent of the proprietor of the copyright, signed in the presence of two witnesses, shall be furnished with each importation: And provided That any publisher of a newspaper or magazine may, without such consent, import for his own use but not for sale not more than two copies of any newspaper or magazine published in a foreign country: Provided, nevertheless, That in the case of books in foreign languages, of which only translations in English are copyrighted, the prohibition of importation shall apply only to the translations of the same, and the importation of the books in the original language shall be permitted."

SEC. 4. That section forty-nine hundred and fifty-eight of the Revised Statutes be, and the same is hereby, amended so that it will read as follows:

"SEC. 4958. The Librarian of Congress shall receive from the persons to whom the services designated are rendered the following fees:

"First. For recording the title or description of any copyright book or other article, fifty cents.

"Second. For every copy under seal of such record actually given to the person claiming the copyright, or his assigns, fifty cents.

"Third. For recording and certifying any instrument of writing for the assignment of a copyright, one dollar.

"Fourth. For every copy of an assignment, one dollar.

"All fees so received shall be paid into the Treasury of the United States: Provided, That the charge for recording the title or description of any article entered for copyright, the production of a person not a citizen or resident of the United States, shall be one dollar, to be paid as above into the Treasury of the United States, to defray the expenses of lists of copyrighted articles as hereinafter provided for.

"And it is hereby made the duty of the Librarian of Congress to furnish to the Secretary of the Treasury copies of the entries of titles of all books and other articles wherein the copyright has been completed by the deposit of two copies of such book printed from type set within the limits of the United States, in accordance with the provisions of this act and by the deposit of two copies of such other article made or produced in the United States; and the Secretary of the Treasury is hereby directed to prepare and print, at intervals of not more than a week, catalogues of such title-entries for distribution to the collectors of customs of the United States and to the postmasters of all post-offices receiving foreign mails, and such weekly lists, as they are issued, shall be furnished to all parties desiring them, at a sum not exceeding five dollars per annum; and the Secretary and the Postmaster-General are hereby empowered and required to make and enforce such rules and regulations as shall prevent the importation into the United States, except upon the conditions above specified, of all articles copyrighted under this act during the term of the copyright."

SEC. 5. That section forty-nine hundred and fifty-nine of the Revised Statutes be, and the same is hereby, amended so as to read as follows:

"SEC. 4959. The proprietor of every copyright book or other article shall deliver at the office of the Librarian of Congress, or deposit in the mail, addressed to the Librarian of Congress, at Washington, District of Columbia, a copy of every subsequent edition wherein any substantial changes shall be made: Provided, however, That the alterations, revisions, and additions made to books by foreign authors, heretofore published, of which new editions shall appear subsequently to the taking effect of this act, shall be held and deemed capable of being copyrighted as above provided for in this act, unless they form a part of the series in course of publication at the time this act shall take effect."

SEC. 6. That section forty-nine hundred and sixty-three of the Revised Statutes be, and the same is hereby, amended so as to read as follows:

"SEC. 4963. Every person who shall insert or impress such notice, or words of the same purport, in or upon any book, map, chart, dramatic or musical composition, print, cut, engraving, or photograph, or other article, for which he has not obtained a copyright, shall be liable to a penalty of one hundred dollars, recoverable one half for the person who shall sue for such penalty and one-half to the use of the United States."

SEC. 7. That section forty-nine hundred and sixty-four of the Revised Statutes be, and the same is hereby, amended so as to read as follows:

"SEC. 4964. Every person who, after the recording of the title of any book and the depositing of two copies of such book, as provided by this act, shall, within the term limited, and without the consent of the proprietor of the copyright first obtained in writing, signed in presence of two or more witnesses, print, publish, dramatize, translate, or import, or knowing the same to be so printed, published, dramatized, translated, or imported, shall sell or expose to sale any copy of such book, shall forfeit every copy thereof to such proprietor, and shall also forfeit and pay such damages as may be recovered in a civil action by such proprietor in any court of competent jurisdiction."

SEC. 8. That section forty-nine hundred and sixty-five of the Revised Statutes be, and the same is hereby, so amended as to read as follows:

"SEC. 4965. If any person, after the recording of the title of any map, chart, dramatic or musical composition, print, cut, engraving, or photograph, or chromo, or of the description of any painting, drawing, statue, statuary, or model or design intended to be perfected and executed as a work of the fine arts, as provided by this act, shall within the term limited, and without the consent of the proprietor of the copyright first obtained in writing, signed in presence of two or more witnesses, engrave, etch, work, copy, print, publish, dramatize, translate, or import, either in whole or in part, or by varying the main design with intent to evade the law, or, knowing the same to be so printed, published, dramatized, translated, or imported, shall sell or expose to sale any copy of such map or other article as aforesaid, he shall forfeit to the proprietor all the plates on which the same shall be copied and every sheet thereof, either copied or printed, and shall further forfeit one dollar for every sheet of the same found in his possession, either printing, printed, copied, published, imported, or exposed for sale, and in case of a painting, statue, or statuary, he shall forfeit ten dollars for every copy of the same in his possession, or by him sold or exposed for sale; one-half thereof to the proprietor and the other half to the use of the United States."

SEC. 9. That section forty-nine hundred and sixty-seven of the Revised Statutes be, and the same is hereby, amended so as to read as follows:

"SEC. 4967. Every person who shall print or publish any manuscript whatever without the consent of the author or proprietor first obtained, shall be liable to the author or proprietor for all damages occasioned by such injury."

SEC. 10. That section forty-nine hundred and seventy-one of the Revised Statutes be, and the same is hereby, repealed.

SEC. 11. That for the purpose of this act each volume of a book in two or more volumes, when such volumes are published separately and the first one shall not have been issued before this act shall take effect, and each number of a periodical, shall be considered an independent publication subject to the form of copyrighting as above.

SEC. 12. That this act shall go into effect on the first day of July, anno Domini eighteen hundred and ninety-one.

SEC. 13. That this act shall only apply to a citizen of a foreign state or nation when such foreign state or nation permits to citizens of the United States of America the benefit of copyright on substantially the same basis as its own citizens; or when such foreign state or nation permits to citizens of the United States of America copyright privileges substantially similar to those provided for in this act; or when such foreign state or nation is a party to an international agreement which provides for reciprocity in the grant of copyright, by the terms of which agreement the United States of America may at its pleasure become a party to such agreement. The existence of either of these conditions shall be determined by the opinion of the Attorney-General of the United States whenever an occasion for such a determination arises.

MILTON BRADLEY AND HIS WORK.*

ABOUT thirty-four years ago a young man of twenty moved from Lowell over to Springfield, Mass., to take a position as draftsman in the locomotive works of Bemis & Co. Two years after he found himself out of work, the company with whom he had been associated having removed its works to the West. Nothing daunted, he hired an office on Main Street, and hung out a shingle announcing to whomever it might concern that inside might be found a "Mechanical Draughtsman and Patent Solicitor." At this occupation he might have gradually starved had he not shortly received a call from the Wason Car Company. He was to make the mechanical drawings and superintend the construction of a palace car for the Pasha, for the first Egyptian railroad ever built. His co-worker was the head painter of the company, Mr. W. C. Child. While the two men were working together on this car, which, by the way, was to be a sumptuous affair for which the Oriental authorities had voted to give $10,000, they became interested in the subject of lithography, an art which was practised nowhere in Massachusetts outside of Boston. Mr. Child, who was in possession of some ready money, knew of an old press and equipment, which he bought in Worcester and transferred to the former drafting-room of Bemis & Co., where our young friend the draughtsman at once began making experiments to see what he could do in a line of business concerning which he had picked up some knowledge before settling in Springfield.

In the course of time the two men formed a temporary partnership to do the lithographic work for a book of "monumental" designs, which a local marble works was anxious to publish, buying a better press from Providence and a "job lot" of lithographic stones from New York, and setting up the pioneer establishment of its kind in western Massachusetts, in the office of the "Mechanical Draftsman and Patent Solicitor" on Main Street. At this same time, and in this way, our anonymous friend, who was no less a personage than Milton Bradley, laid the foundation of one of the most successful manufacturing houses in this country. Gifted with genius for devising original ideas, unflagging industry, pluck and perseverance, it is hardly to be wondered at that this man carried forward to success an undertaking which at the time offered little but a limited field. After completing the marble cutter's job, Mr. Child dropped out of the combination, pocketing, by mutual agreement, the money on hand, leaving the plant to Mr. Bradley. The problem arose how to find enough work to keep a single hand-press busy. One of the expedients for keeping that press running was to print a portrait of Lincoln, who had just been nominated for his first term. But the subject was hardly popular enough at the time, and, as after the campaign was well under way Lincoln began to grow a beard, the value of the first edition of the portrait was reduced to the price of junk.

One evening, after playing some social games at the house of a friend, Mr. Bradley became possessed with certain ideas that led him to bring out his first venture in a new line, "The Checkered Game of Life." At the same time he brought out a set of cards containing a series of illustrated rebuses, and with these two articles he started out to canvass the trade. The business grew apace, and was strengthened in due time by the admission of Clark W. Bryan and J. F. Tapley as silent partners of Milton Bradley & Co. In 1863 or 1864, Mr. Bradley's father identified himself with the concern, as superintendent of the manufactory. He was a natural inventor and very ingenious, and very materially helped the development of the business, which soon outgrew its original quarters, and from time to time was obliged to provide itself with larger and more convenient buildings. In 1881 Mr. George W. Tapley, who succeeded Messrs. Bryan and J. F. Tapley as the partner of Mr. Bradley, erected the buildings at the corner of Willow and Cross Streets which are now occupied by the concern. Its removal there, early in 1882, was made the occasion of a famous house-warming which was mentioned in the WEEKLY.

Besides the manufacture of games and toys, the manufacture of kindergarten material engages considerable of the attention of the firm. About 1870 Mr. Bradley, through Prof. Edward Wiebe, became a convert to the educational system of Froebel. Under the direction of Prof. Wiebe and Miss Elizabeth P. Peabody, this branch has become one of the most important departments of the kind in the country.

It would be impossible to enumerate even the many games and novelties for the entertainment of old and young issued by this firm. Their leader this year is a series of games which they call the "quartette," comprising "Kerion," "Chuba," "Eckha" and "Mind Reading." "Kerion" is the invention of Dr. Thomas Hill of Portland, Me., the name being the Greek word for "honeycomb," and may be played in three ways; "Chuba" is a game of skill for two players, and is entirely new as regards all published games, having its origin among the natives of Eastern Africa; "Eckha" is in its fourth season, and very popular; and "Mind Reading" is unique, offering the possibility of calculation regarding the players' thoughts as well as the conflict of motives involved, which gives interest as well as a name to the game. These games, as all the goods turned out by this house, are substantially and neatly made and sold at moderate prices.

The whole history of the Milton Bradley Company, from the beginning to the end, is a forcible illustration of the wisdom which lies in the Scriptural admonition to "despise not the day of small things." Its prosperity has been built upon the cordial relations existing between employers and employed—a prosperity which we trust is destined to still farther increase.

THE LAST WORD ON "A RECENT PARAGRAPH IN THE ATHENÆUM."

NOVEMBER 17, 1890.

To the Editor of the London Athenæum.

OUR attention has been called—somewhat late, perhaps—to a passage in the "Literary Gossip" of the Athenæum of October 4, in which the case of a certain author against Messrs. Harper & Brothers is first mentioned. It is no part of our purpose to express an opinion upon this case. But it seems a clear duty to us, who have experienced honorable treatment from this firm, to enter a protest against the sweeping condemnation passed upon them in the paragraph in question. This paragraph does not take the form of a communication by a contributor singly responsible for his own opinion, but it carries the whole weight and authority of the greatest literary journal in the country. "When," says this editorial note, "an author is unknown to fame, they, it would seem, content themselves with insulting him; when he is celebrated, they insult and rob him."

We wish to record the fact that, in the course of many years' friendly business relations with Messrs. Harper & Brothers, such has not been our experience. Whenever it is a question of acquiring for any of their periodicals the foreign author's rights, they are as just and liberal in their dealings as any English house. In the matter of book-publication we have always found them willing and desirous to do what is possible for the foreign author, whose interests the American law not only fails to protect, but entirely ignores.

OLD BOOK CHAT.

At a sale in London recently a copy of the first quarto "Merchant of Venice" brought £270. A choice copy of the poems, with the same portrait sold for £61. The latter was bought by a New York dealer.

A COPY of Shelley's rare tract, "Proposal for Putting Reform to the Vote," was sold at auction in London recently. It is coming to America, and will, I believe, be the only copy to be found in the United States.

MR. ERNEST D. NORTH, of Charles Scribner's Sons, has compiled a very careful and valuable bibliography of Lamb's writings. With characteristic modesty he has refrained from publishing it separately, but has hidden it away at the end of Martin's "In the Footprints of Charles Lamb," issued recently by Scribner's Sons. The work, he says, has been an arduous one, but withal a labor of love—which, by the way, bibliography ever was.

FROM Philadelphia comes news of one of the most remarkable and interesting sales of many years. It consists of the family papers of the Washington family, which have been religiously preserved by the descendants of George Washington's last surviving executors. Among the relics to be sold are Martha Washington's family Bible with her autograph in several places, and some of the most interesting and characteristic letters of the great patriot in existence. The one in which he advises Lawrence Lewis to build upon the land which, after Washington's death, Lewis is to have, is especially remarkable, and gives us a glimpse of the General at his best. Upright, kind, generous, but still master, the letter is really an epitome of his life. Giving reasons for not at once handing over the land, he says: "To do justice to others, it behooves me to take care of myself by keeping the staff in my own hands." Among the other items of interest are Washington's famous letter to General Lee, relative to the capture of Benedict Arnold; Benj. Franklin's noted letter, written in the market, to his friend "Jimmy" (James Reed); Washington's private account-books, and a number of books from his library and that of his wife; the music-books and others owned by Nellie Custis; a number of personal relics, etc.

OBITUARY.

BENJAMIN P. SHILLABER.

THE famous creator of Mrs. Partington, whose sayings were so widely quoted many years ago, died at his home in Chelsea, Massachusetts, on November 25. Shillaber belonged to the same class of celebrated literary humorists as Artemus Ward and D. R. Locke ("Petroleum V. Nasby"). He struck a popular chord with his "Life and Sayings of Mrs. Partington," which he kept in vibration for many years. Mr. Shillaber was born in Portsmouth, N. H., in 1814, and became a printer in 1830. In 1840 he became editor of the Boston Post, and in 1847 contributed to its columns the "Mrs. Partington" papers which gave him a world-wide reputation. In 1852 he left the Post, and with Charles G. Halpine ("Miles O'Reilly") started the Carpet Bag, which, in the language of "Mrs. Partington," "had more character than patronage, survived all the means for its support and died happy."

In 1866 Mr. Shillaber retired to his home in Chelsea and worked steadily on books and sketches. He has published "Rhymes With Reason and Without" (1853), "Life and Sayings of Mrs. Partington" (1854), "Knitting-Work" (1857), "Partingtonian Patchwork" (1873), "Lines in Pleasant Places" (1875), "Ike and His Friends" (1879), "Cruises with Captain Bob" (1881), "The Doublerunner Club" (1882), and "Wide Swath" (1882). He contributed sketches and essays to various periodicals during the intervals between each published volume with great success. Although he did not become wealthy by his writings, he contributed innocent pleasure to thousands of people, and never gave pain by his inexhaustible wit and humor. He was, as a friend once said, "a big bunch of sunshine," and a singularly unselfish man. Mr. Shillaber is said to have left an autobiography which will be published in the Boston Journal.

REV. DR. HENRY MARTYN DEXTER.—The well-known editor of The Congregationalist, Dr. Dexter, died suddenly on November 13, at his home in New Bedford, Mass. Dr. Dexter was born in 1821, graduated at Yale College in 1840, and at the Andover Theological Seminary in 1844. From that time until 1867 he filled several Congregationalist pulpits, but then resigned his pastoral duties and devoted himself to his duties as editor of the Congregationalist, and other literary work. The chief literary work of his later life was a history of Plymouth Colony, upon which subject he had accumulated a very valuable library. Among his published works are "The Voice of the Bible the Verdict of Reason," "Street Thoughts," "Congregationalism," which has gone through five editions, and "The Years." He had prepared in manuscript "A Bibliography of the Church Struggle in England During the Sixteenth Century," with 1800 titles.

JOHN DOUGLAS DELILLE.—The death of the young United States Consul at Bristol, England, is a sad occurrence. Mr. Delille was only twenty-eight years old, and a journalist of exceptional talent, writing French and English with equal facility. His literary tastes were inherited from his mother, Olive Logan. He was formerly on the staff of The Critic and later on Once a Week. His death was due to brain-fever.

OTTO F. WIGAND, the well-known bookbinder of New York, and senior member of the firm of Otto Wigand & Son, died suddenly of pneumonia at his residence at Mt. Vernon, N. Y., November 28, aged sixty-one years. He was born at Goettingen, Hanover, August 25, 1829, and was apprenticed to a bookbinder when fourteen years old. After the failure of the revolutionary movement in 1848, in which he took part, he came to this country and obtained a position in the establishment of Koch, Son & Co. A short time after this he went into the bookbinding business in partnership with Mr. Huber (later George Werner), but, being unsuccessful, he retired from the firm and took a position at D. Appleton & Co.'s, under Mr. Matthews. When the war broke out he joined the Union army, and served as lieutenant of Company G, Forty-fifth N. Y. V. In 1869 he established himself again in the bookbinding business, which he carried on this time successfully, until a few days before his death. George and Otto Wigand, the celebrated booksellers and antiquarians of Leipzig, were his uncles. His son Adolph, who was associated in business with him, died about a year ago, thus leaving his wife and three remaining sons to carry on the business. Otto Wigand was a Hercules in build, and in every way a thorough and conscientious workman, a cordial, large-hearted man—too liberal oftentimes for his own good—ever willing with his counsel and advice; in short, one of the men of whom the world can never have too many.

NOTES ON AUTHORS.

THE report that M. Alphonse Daudet will never recover from his illness, which is said to be a disease of the spinal column, is unfounded.

A MOVEMENT is afoot in this country to collect money for a monument to be erected over the English grave of Anna Sewell, the author of "Black Beauty."

OSSIP SCHUBIN is not a man, as has been generally supposed in this country, but a young woman, whose real name is Lola Kirschner, and who leads a retired life in a Bohemian village.

THE COMTE DE PARIS is said to have promised to write a book of American impressions, the title of which is to be "America Revisited" or "America Twenty-five Years After the War."

IGNATIUS DONNELLY, according to Book Talk (issued by St. Paul Book and Stationery Co.), is the author of the novel entitled "Cæsar's Column," which attracted considerable attention at the time of its appearance.

THE author of the "Appeal to Pharaoh," which called out so much discussion in the press North and South, is Mr. Carlyle McKinley, an editorial writer on the Charleston (S. C.) News and Courier. The steadily growing demand for the book has induced Fords, Howard & Hulbert to issue an edition in paper covers.

THE author of "Society as I Found It" received for writing it the sum of five thousand dollars outright and a royalty of twenty cents per copy in addition. If the latter is true, the author will realize a neat sum, as we have it on good authority that the publishers at no time have been able to keep the supply up to the demand.

MRS. ANN SHELTON COOMBS, author of "As Common Mortals," "The Garden of Armida," published by the Cassell Publishing Co., and a "Game of Chance," published by D. Appleton & Co., committed suicide on November 22 by throwing herself from the sixth story window of a hotel in Brooklyn, N. Y. She had been long suffering from a nervous disorder. She was thirty-two years old.

DONALD G. MITCHELL met with a serious accident on November 20. Mr. Mitchell had not fully recovered from the effects of his fall about two months ago, and for the benefit of his health went out riding with his daughter. When nearly home, on the return, Miss Mitchell alighted to shut a gate through which they had passed. The horse, becoming frightened, dashed down the road, throwing Mr. Mitchell from the carriage. He struck on his head and side, and was rendered unconscious for three hours. Serious consequences are feared, as Mr. Mitchell has not been in good health for some time, and his years are beginning to tell on him.

THE committee formed last May to purchase Dove Cottage as a national memorial of Wordsworth, says the London Athenaeum, "have now obtained a conveyance of the premises, and have entered into possession. But in order to put the place in good repair, to make it look like a home, to plant the garden with the flowers that Wordsworth planted, to put his poems on the shelves he used, a further sum of about £300 is required. Furthermore, as it is intended to place within the cottage such memorials of the poet as can be obtained, any who may have relics, pictures, MSS., etc., that they would give or lend, are invited to send them to the Treasurer, Mr. George Lillie Craik, 29 Bedford Street, Covent Garden."

EVERYBODY who knows Dr. Edward Everett Hale's summer home at Maltunne, knows how full of jollity is that sunny dwelling. The master of the house is the first of jokers there, and fun is always bubbling about him. It is related, says a correspondent of the N. Y. Tribune, "that not long ago the members of the family were engaged in reading Ruffin's charming story, 'Dr. Antonio,' in conjunction with a neighboring household of literary tastes. Several copies of the book lay on the piazza of each house and the two families regularly met to discuss the story. As they approached the sad ending, a practical joke suggested itself to Hale's fertile brain. He wrote a new and joyful ending, and persuaded his publisher to print and bind it into several volumes in the place of the bona-fide one. These volumes he scattered about his own piazza, and they were duly read by his olive branches and his guests. Soon after arrived his neighbors, and the usual discussion began. "'Dr. Antonio' is certainly a delightful book," said Miss Neighbor, "but what a pity that it ends so sadly!" "Sadly!" exclaimed a Hale, "what do you mean by 'sadly'?" "It's a very happy ending!" The other members of the group joined in the battle and verbal hostilities had become very hot, when the laughing Doctor revealed his sly joke. "What a conundrum to the New Zealand bibliographer these Hale copies of 'Dr. Antonio' will be, if the story that goes with them should happen to get lost within the next thousand years!"

AN UNAPPRECIATED GIFT.

"I thought, Mrs. Small," remarked the Star Boarder, as he laid a copy of "The Complete Cook-Book" in her lap, "that you would appreciate a literary gift."

"Thanks," replied the landlady as she glanced at the title and handed it back, "but I'm not much of a reader."

JOURNALISTIC NOTES.

Wide Awake will publish a story by Mrs. Barton Harrison entitled "Diamonds and Toads."

Geyer's Stationer, Christmas number, though a month behind time according to the date on its cover, is a fine issue of 78 pages, showing a variety of fair color printing.

ISRAEL C. RUSSELL, who was in charge of the recent expedition for the exploration of the region about Mount St. Elias, will contribute to the Century an account of the expedition, with illustrations from photographs made at the time.

MR. WHITTIER will contribute occasional poems to the Atlantic next year. Francis Parkman will write a serial, extending over three numbers, on "The Capture of Louisbourg," and Mr. Percival Lowell a narrative of his adventures in Japan, entitled "An Unexplored Corner of Japan."

CLARK W. BRYAN & CO., the enterprising New England journalists, have added another string to their bow in the Progressive Springfield, a new journal to be devoted to the interests—business and social—of one of the busiest and most wide-awake Massachusetts cities. The trade has two of its busiest representatives in that city—Milton Bradley and the Merriams—sketches of whom very properly form a feature of the initial number of Progressive Springfield.

AMONG the novels announced for publication in Lippincott's Magazine is one left in MS. by Frederick Cozzens, the author of "The Sparrowgrass Papers." It is said to be "charming." Captain King will contribute a new novel; Mrs. Ellen Olney Kirk, otherwise "Henry Hayes," has prepared a story of New York society, called "Maidens Choosing;" the Duchess adds to the list a bit of fiction, entitled "Lady Patty;" Mr. George Parsons Lathrop has contributed another novel, under the title of "The Golden Link;" and young Mr. William Clyde Fitch has written one called "A Wave of Life."

MRS. HENRY WARD BEECHER'S "Reminiscences" of her late husband, which she is now writing, has been purchased by The Ladies' Home Journal, of Philadelphia, and the articles will shortly begin in that periodical. The series will have for its title "Mr. Beecher as I Knew Him," and will cover the entire period of his fifty-seven years of married life, from young Beecher's first acquaintance with his wife, his college life, their courtship and marriage, his first public speech, the first year of married life with an income of $300, and so all through the great preacher's life until his later triumphs, his last sickness, and his death.

THE bound volume of Harper's Young People for 1890 is in no respect inferior to its predecessors, either in the excellence of its reading-matter or the beauty of its illustrations. Among the list of contributors to this volume we notice the names of William Dean Howells, Thos. Nelson Page, Hjalmar Hjorth Boyesen, Margaret E. Sangster, Richard Malcolm Johnston, William Hamilton Gibson, Dora Read Goodale, Howard Pyle and many other favorite American writers. The pictures are by such artists as Gibson, Fawcett, Smedley, Rogers, Dielman, Thumstrup, Pyle, Rosina Emmett Sherwood and many others equally famous. The volume is issued in good time for the holiday season.

A. KRISHA, civil engineer, Fontanka 64, St. Petersburg, Russia, is the editor of a new international bibliographical directory of the world's scientific literature which will be called Panobibliion, and of which the first number will be issued early in 1891. The new magazine will give a monthly review of scientific books published throughout the civilized world, with short critical notes of the leading books and magazine articles written in the language of the book or magazine reviewed. This will necessitate writers of fifteen different languages and will make the paper thoroughly original and invaluable to students and scholars. It is an important undertaking and should meet with instant and tangible recognition.

HENRY HOLT & Co. will publish in January the first number of a new monthly Educational Review of which Prof. Nicholas Murray Butler, of Columbia, who is President of the New York College for the Training of Teachers, will be editor-in-chief, and associated with him will be Dr. E. H. Cook, Head-master of Rutgers Preparatory School, New Brunswick, N. J., Dr. William H. Maxwell, Superintendent of Schools in Brooklyn, and Dr. A. B. Poland, Superintendent of Schools in Jersey City. This gives the University, the Preparatory School, and the Public School competent representation on the editorial board. The character of the publication may be further inferred from the fact that the circular announcing it contains the endorsements of the Presidents of Harvard, Yale, Hopkins, Columbia, Massachusetts Institute of Technology, Cornell, University of Michigan, and about a hundred educators of corresponding prominence.

THE first issue of Far and Near, a new periodical devoted specially to the interests of women wage-workers, is thoroughly representative of its aim and scope. It has been found necessary for the Working-Girls Societies of this country to have an organ of their own in which might be explained the varying methods in use in the different clubs, that all may profit by the practical experiences of successful clubs and be guided to avoid the mistakes that have brought failure to others. Besides the club news there will be departments of fashion, housekeeping and stories and other literary contributions included in the new periodical. It will be published monthly from the office of The Critic Co. The editor is Maria Bowen Chapin, of New York City, who cordially invites communications from all working-girls as to what they specially need in a periodical.

Scribner's Magazine during the coming year will publish among other matters papers on Japan, by Sir Edwin Arnold (completing the series to be begun in the December number under the title of "Japonica"), illustrated by Robert Blum; four articles on India, by Prof. James Bryce, embodying the results of his recent journey and a careful study of the country in its social and political aspects; an important contribution on an African topic by Henry M. Stanley (entirely distinct from his book), with noteworthy illustrations; Robert Louis Stevenson's story, "The Wrecker;" a series of papers (the only ones to be published in any periodical) on the latest explorations of Dr. Carl Lumholtz in Northern Mexico; a series on the great streets of the world, on Australian topics, on ocean steamships, the seashore, and the continuation and conclusion of the anonymous novel, "Jerry."

NOTES ON CATALOGUES.

OTTO HARRASSOWITZ, Querstrasse, 14, Leipzig, has published a catalogue of a valuable collection of works on theology, history, law and belles-lettres. (No. 167, 4468 titles, 246 p. 8°.) Also a Catalogue of Roman Philology, including the Roman or Latin tongue generally; also, French, Italian, Spanish and Catalan, Portuguese, Rumanian and Celtic. (No. 169, 1147 titles, 12°.)

K. W. BARRY, of the Catholic Publication Soc. Co., 9 Bartley St., N. Y., is engaged in making a complete catalogue of the works of all the Catholic authors in the English-speaking world. He has already gathered an enormous amount of material, but is anxious to perfect it in every detail before going to press. Publishers and booksellers are requested to help to this end.

FRITZ VON SZCZEPANSKI, St. Petersburg and Leipzig, has prepared and published a "Bibliotheca Polytechnica: a directory of technical literature of all books, annuals and journals published in America, England, France and Germany, including their relation to legislation, hygiene and daily life." The catalogue is arranged by classes under the following headings: architecture, baking trade, building, mining, bibliography, brewery, bridges, cooperage, bookbinding, printing, brush-maker, chemical industry, technical electricity, color, dyeing, surveying, firemen, firework, gas, service-engineering, leather, technical education, jewelry, india rubber, heating, wood, hat-making, engineering, instruments, tinman, industrial art, amateur work, ballooning, palating, machinery, steam-engines, mechanics, metal-working, millers' trade, sewing-machines, oils, paper, patents, photography, harness-making, ship-building, smithing, tailoring, shoe-making, soap, spirits, stone-squarer, wall-papers, upholsterer, technology, textile-manufacturing, pottery, joinery, accidents, carriage-building, thermodynamics, hydraulics, waterworks, wine, and sugar, with a number of subdivisions. The first word of the general divisions being in German the classification is strictly alphabetical and not as they are given above. It was a happy idea to compile and bring into one alphabet the important scientific publications issued in the three important languages of the world. The student and specialist is afforded for the first time an opportunity to acquaint himself with everything of value and interest in his special field, and the librarian's and bookseller's library is made tolerably complete in a direction which has long been without such a guide. It is to be hoped that the compiler will find sufficient sale for the volume to encourage and enable him to supply the promised annual supplements. The International News Co., 83 Duane Street, N. Y., are the American agents for the work. (80 p. S. flex. cl., 75 c.)

Catalogues of New and Second-Hand Books.—James Beale, 719 Sansom Street, Philadelphia, War literature, Union and Confederate. (159 titles.)—J. W. Bouton, 706 Broadway, N. Y., Clearance Catalogue. (New ser., No. 16, 4017 titles.)—Milton Bradley Co., Springfield, Mass., games, sectional pictures, toys, puzzles, blocks and novelties. (Season 1890-'91, 52 p. 8°.)—Catholic Publication Society Co., N. Y., Catholic Book Talk, November. (No. 17, 32 p. 8°.)—F. M. Crouse, Indianapolis, Ind., Miscellaneous.

Davie & Co., 16 E. 4th Street, Cincinnati, art, architectural and reference books. (No. 36, 27 p. 8°.)—Francis P. Harper, 17 E. 16th Street, N. Y., Americana. (No. 46, 48 p. 8°.)—International News Co., 83 Duane Street, N. Y., Allgemeiner bücher und Weinachts Katalog, 1890-91. (52 p. 4°.)—H. H. Otis, 288 Main Street, Buffalo, Holiday book annual. (No. 32, 48 p. 16°.)—Rand, McNally & Co., Chicago, Holiday books, 1890-91. (16 p. 16°.)—W. H. Smith & Son, 186 Strand, London, Miscellaneous. (November, 116 p. 16°.)—H. Welter, 59 Rue Bonaparte, Paris, France, Orientalia, Americana, Slavica. (No. 47, 66 p. 12°.) Also, Catalogue des livres pour l'étude des langues romanes. (No. 46, 80 p. 12°.)—B. Westermann & Co., 812 Broadway, N. Y., Aldines, editiones principes and other very rare philological books. (No. 8, 4 p. 8°.)—S. Zickel, 129 Duane Street, N. Y., Illustr. Weinachts-Katalog, XIV. Jahrg. (146 p. 8°.)

BUSINESS NOTES.

ATHENS, GA.—The Jackson-Burke Co. have opened a book and stationery store at this place. Their stock is a large and very complete one, comprising books, stationery and fancy goods.

CHICAGO, ILL.—H. L. Barber, who for several years has been very successful as a general agent in the subscription-book business, has recently (so he writes us) put $10,000 into the Elder Company's business, of Chicago, and taken the sole management. A number of new books are promised, one of which is mentioned elsewhere.

PHILADELPHIA, PA.—John C. Yorston & Co. have removed their headquarters from Cincinnati to No. 1313 Walnut Street, this city.

PITTSBURG, KAN.—W. A. Swan has purchased the stock of books and stationery formerly owned by A. Buchanan. Ben Hollister has been placed in charge of the same.

SEDALIA, MO.—W. H. Ramsey has opened a new book and stationery store here.

URBANA, O.—L. H. Todd and John Bucher have purchased the bookstore of Reed & Williams.

WAUSAU, WIS.—C. W. Chubbuck, who for the past fourteen years has carried on an extensive mercantile business in books, stationery, notions and wall-paper at this place, has sold out his business to A. W. Mumm and W. D. Murray.

LITERARY AND TRADE NOTES.

D. LOTHROP CO. have in preparation a volume on Massachusetts, by Dr. E. E. Hale, for their Story of the States.

CHAS. D. RAYMER, of Minneapolis, Minn., has nearly ready for press a book entitled "The Art of Bookselling, or, how to become a good bookseller."

JOHN WILEY & SONS have in preparation "Wire: its manufacture and uses," by J. Bucknall Smith, and "Wooden Trestle Bridges," by Wolcott C. Foster.

ROSS & GOODHEART, Knoxville, Tenn., have now ready for delivery the long-promised "Brief History of the Synod of Tennessee from 1817 to 1877," by Rev. J. E. Alexander, D.D.

THOMAS WHITTAKER will publish at once a verbatim report of the discussions of the various topics at the recent Church Congress held in Philadelphia. The edition will be limited.

LINDNER, EDDY & CLAUS, lithographers, 66 Centre St., N. Y. have issued an artistic calendar for 1891, of which they can furnish a limited quantity, with imprints, at a reasonable price.

GINN & Co. will publish on the 20th, under the happier title of "Goodnight Poetry," the selection of poems by W. P. Garrison, published several years ago by D. Lothrop Co. under the title of "Bedside Poetry."

CHARLES G. BARLOW, of 150 Nassau Street, N. Y., announces that he will issue at once, in book form, a complete set of plans of the theatres and halls of New York. He will print 5000 copies, and give them away.

BENJ. R. TUCKER, Boston, has published the first English translation of Claude Tillier's humorous novel, "My Uncle Benjamin," which has won its author, by its realistic satire, the title of "the modern Rabelais."

THE J. G. CUPPLES CO., Boston, announce an "experiment in a new variety of fiction." It is entitled "The Chevalier of Pensieri-Vani; together with frequent references to the Provege of Arcopia." It has been written by Stanton.

THE ELDER PUBLISHING CO. will publish early next year "The Treasurer of God" in a sumptuous style, containing over 200 fine wood-engravings and nearly 30 colored plates printed in 14 colors, all by the best lithographers of Philadelphia.

THE PORT-LORE CO., 1602 Chestnut Street, Phila., have nearly ready in dainty shape a new edition of Kingsland's "Browning," with added memorabilia, photogravure reproduction of the latest portrait of the poet, and fac-simile letter.

THE BANCROFT-WHITNEY CO. have just ready a handy edition of Blackstone, edited by Prof. Wm. G. Hammond. It is in four small pocket volumes, unabridged as to the text of Blackstone and enriched with the elaborate notes of Prof. Hammond.

W. S. GOTTSBERGER & Co. have just published an authorized translation of a collection of tales by Georg Ebers, under the title of the leading story, "The Elixir." It is translated by Mrs. Edward Hamilton Bell, and contains a portrait of the author.

MACMILLAN & Co. have in press "A Dictionary of Classical Mythology, Religion, Literature, Art and Antiquities," revised and edited from the German of Dr. Seyffert by H. Nettleship and J. E. Sandys. The work will contain nearly five hundred illustrations.

CHARLES SCRIBNER'S SONS will publish in the New Year a new volume by Mrs. Humphrey Ward, which is said to deal with the aspirations of a workingman after culture. She is said to have derived some of her ideas from a reading of the life of Robert Chambers.

FLEXNER & STAADEKER, booksellers, Louisville, Ky., have issued a neat little pamphlet on "Card Etiquette," giving hints on visiting cards and their uses as prescribed by polite society, together with the most approved form of invitations for teas, receptions, etc.

THE BAKER & TAYLOR Co. will publish immediately a new book by Dr. Theo. L. Cuyler, late of the Lafayette Avenue Church, Brooklyn, entitled "How to Be a Pastor," a subject upon which (by reason of his forty years of successful service) he is eminently fitted to give counsel.

STREET & SMITH, New York, have just published in the Select Series "A Silver Brand," a tale of love, mystery and domestic bereavement, by Charles T. Mannings; and in the Secret Service Series "The Los Huecos Mystery," an exciting romance of California life by Eugene T. Sawyer.

HENRY CAREY BAIRD & Co., Philadelphia, are about to bring out in a volume the essays on "Road-Making and Maintenance" awarded the prizes offered through the University of Pennsylvania by the "Committee on Better Roads" of Philadelphia. Such a work deserves a wide circulation.

FLEMING H. REVELL announces for immediate publication "How London Lives," by W. J. Gordon. This book, profusely illustrated, is the result of an independent inquiry into many matters of interest concerning the administration of London, which have not been dealt with popularly before.

A. D. F. RANDOLPH & Co. have just ready in the series of Mens of the Bible, "St. Paul," by Prof. James Iverach, of the Free Church College, Aberdeen; also "Under the Nursery Lamp," a charming collection of songs about the little ones, compiled, we believe, by the junior member of the firm, Mr. Arthur Randolph.

FRANK E. HOUSH & Co., Brattleboro, Vt., has just published "The Health Calendar," or House-keeper's Kitchen Roll for 1891, containing a bill of fare for each day of the year, telling about healthful foods, with directions how to prepare them, also "Words of Life," a wall roll, each page of which contains a quotation from the Bible for morning, noon and night.

THE many readers who have enjoyed the previous novels by the Warner Sisters will be glad to learn that a new story, entitled "Patience," from the pen of Anna B. Warner will soon be published by J. B. Lippincott Co. Its predecessors, by their lifelikeness and pure, ennobling tone have well deserved their wide popularity, which will doubtless be shared by the new volume.

A. C. McCLURG & Co. have just issued in their series of Laurel-Crowned Tales "The Epicurean," by Thomas Moore, and "The Vicar of Wakefield." They have also just ready a volume entitled "Education and the Higher Life," by Bishop J. L. Spalding, of Peoria; "Savonarola: his life and times," by Prof. W. Clark, of Trinity College, Toronto; and "Martha Corey," a tale of Salem witchcraft, by Constance Stoddard du Bois.

LEE & SHEPARD publish this week "A Lost Jewel," by Harriet Prescott Spofford, a story of the American life of an Italian girl, with her adventures, some of which are funny; "Dorothy's Experience," by Adeline Trafton Knox, author of "The American Girl Abroad;" "The Log of the Maryland, or, adventures at sea," by Capt. Douglas Frazer, author of "Perseverance Island," etc.; "From Lake to Lake" and "Camp Life in the Wilderness," two volumes by Captain Charles A. J. Farrar.

DR WOLFE, FISKE & Co. have ready new editions of the following works, formerly published by Robert Carter & Bros., recently purchased by them: the "Bessie Books," by Joanna H. Mathews, six volumes; and her "Mrs. Ashton's Girls," six volumes, and "Haps and Mishaps," six volumes, both of which have been enlarged and made uniform with the "Bessie Books." Also, a new enlarged edition of "Ellen Montgomery's Book-Shelf" (in five volumes), by Anna B. Warner, and eleven other volumes of her latest works.

FUNK & WAGNALLS have just ready in the American Reformers Series the biography of William E. Dodge, the late merchant prince and earnest philanthropist, written by Carlos Martyn, the author of "Wendell Phillips" in the same series. The book quotes largely from lectures and speeches delivered by Mr. Dodge during his busy life, and is full of lessons of inestimable value for young and old. "Studies in Young Life," in which Bishop John H. Vincent hits off some youthful fault or tells of some good thing well done by youthful heads and hands, is also just issued.

MR. WILLIAM WINTER'S "Life of John Gilbert" is going through the press of De Vinne. It contains a number of charming letters addressed to the author by the actor. This being a publication of the Dunlap Society, and not accessible to the general public, Mr. Winter has been enabled to use many delightful personal reminiscences. The book will give a full record of the actor and a clear view of the man. Mr. Winter's companion volume to his beautiful "Shakespeare's England" is now on the press of David Douglas, of Edinburgh. The authors celebrated in this new volume are Dr. Johnson, Tom Moore, Lord Byron and Sir Walter Scott. Its title is "Gray Days and Gold."

LONGMANS, GREEN & Co. have just ready "The Philosophy of Fiction in Literature," an exhaustive essay by Daniel Greenleaf Thompson, in which he examines the principles of the art of novel-writing and pays special attention to the moral import of the novel and its influence for good and evil. This house will issue shortly, under the title of "Studies, Reviews and Essays," a collection from the writings of Dr. Martineau made by himself; "Voces Populi," the title given by F. Anstey, author of "The Tinted Venus," to a series of excerpts from his contributions to Punch; and "Tobuva-Vohn," under which name will appear a small volume of fragments by the late Dr. Edersheim, the celebrated author of "The Life of Christ."

GEN. J. WATTS DE FRYSTER has added another to his long list of valuable historical monographs. It is entitled "Mary Stuart, Bothwell, and the Casket Letters," in which he follows up, almost to the end, a subject to which he has given many years of study and research, and on which he has already given the world much valuable information. He now finds in the recent work of T. F. Henderson, entitled "The Casket Letters and Mary Queen of Scots," decisive evidence in favor of the views which he has heretofore maintained of Mary's guilt and evil disposition, and of Bothwell's innocence and good intentions. The author has brought together a number of portraits and other illustrations, which add much attraction to his essay. There are no less than six portraits of Mary, three of them in full length.

J. B. LIPPINCOTT Co. will issue shortly a new volume by the author of "A Diplomat's Diary," which was so warmly received in cultured literary circles. Social life in New York City will be the theme treated in "A Successful Man," and the talented writer cannot fail to make the rich subject most excellent reading. The same house announces "Her Brother Donald," by Emily E. Veeder, the story of a bright Scotch youth, which will be illustrated; "The Mystery of New Orleans," by Dr. William H. Holcombe, a novel introducing some clever detective work; and "The Dream of a Modest Prophet," by General M. D. Leggett, advocating a return to the simple rules of life taught by Jesus Christ as the only practical remedy for the growing social and industrial ills under which the world is suffering.

HOUGHTON, MIFFLIN & Co. have just ready "The Genesis of the United States," prepared by Alexander Brown, the publication of which has been delayed from time to time since its first announcement a little over a year ago; Part vii. of "English and Scottish Ballads," edited by Prof. F. J. Child; the 9th and 10th volumes of the handsome Riverside Edition of Lowell's works, completing the set; "Life of Richard H. Dana, Jr.," by Charles Francis Adams; "Dr. Le Baron and His Daughters," by Jane G. Austin, author of "A Nameless Nobleman," etc.; "Representative Sonnets by American Authors," with an essay on the sonnet, its nature and history, including many notable sonnets of other literatures, also biographical notes, indexes, etc., selected by Charles H. Crandall; and "American Sonnets," edited by Thomas Wentworth Higginson and Mrs. E. H. Bigelow.

HUNT & EATON purchased the plates of ten volumes by Mrs. S. S. Robbins, at the recent sale of Robert Carter & Bros., and will immediately release them. "Makdie's Problem" is Mrs. Sangster's last and very successful book. Among other stories announced for immediate publication are "Deeds Worth Telling" and "Under the Lantern at Black Rocks," two tales by Edward A. Rand. In more serious literature there will be ready shortly "From the Thames to the Trossachs," an illustrated volume of travel in England and Scotland, prepared for the Epworth League reading course. "Studies in Old Testament History," by J. L. Hurlbut; "Ten Lessons in Sunday-School Science," by R. P. Holmes; a new translation in blank verse, by Dr. M. S. Terry, of the old Greek "Sibylline Oracles;" and "Boston Homilies," a series of brief and pithy sermons on the Sunday-School lessons of 1891, by the "Alpha Men" of Boston University.

HENRY HOLT & Co. have just published a comprehensive "History of Greek Literature," by Thomas Sergeant Perry, author of "English Literature in the XVIIIth Century," etc., presenting a philosophical account of the growth of Greek literature, and of its relations to the physical surroundings and political and social history of the people. The volume will be fully illustrated and elaborately bound. They have also just ready a "Young People's Cyclopædia of Games and Sports," by John D. Champin, Jr., and Arthur E. Bostwick. This book, forming a third volume of the well-known Young Folks' Cyclopædia Series, is intended to be a compendium of all kinds of recreations, including indoor and outdoor games, athletic sports, simple chemical and mechanical amusements, and every similar thing that can interest a wide-awake boy or girl. Where standard rules are accessible, they have been given word for word, thus making the book valuable as a work of reference for adults in case of dispute. Other features are the introduction of a brief historical sketch at the end of each article, the description of some foreign varieties of many of the games, and the attempt at a thorough system of etymology and derivation of all technical terms, as in the preceding volumes of the series. This work has been written from the American standpoint, even such a game as Cricket being treated as it is played in this country.

THE J. B. LIPPINCOTT Co. have just published the sixth volume of the new edition of Chambers' Encyclopædia. A marked feature is the unusually large number of American articles, and the excellence of its maps and illustrations. Among others, Mr. Groome writes on Leigh Hunt; M. Pasteur and Mr. J. A. Thompson on Hydrophobia; Prof. James Geikie on Igneous Rocks and Mineralogy; Mr. H. B. Wheatley on Illumination of Books and Indexing; Sir Richard Temple on India; Dr. Clouston on Insanity; Canon Isaac Taylor on Inscriptions; the Duke of Argyll on Iona; Mr. Justin McCarthy, Prof. Mackinnon, and Prof. G. T. Stokes on Ireland. Mr. Child, Chief Justice of St. Lucia, is responsible for the article on Jamaica. Mr. Walter Jerrold writes of Douglas Jerrold; Mr. Walter Besant on Jerusalem; Archdeacon Farrar on Jesus Christ. Prof. A. B. Davidson takes for his subject Job; Prof. Hales, Samuel Johnson; Mr. W. Fraser Rae, Junius; Dr. J. H. Stirling, Kant; Mr. R. W. Lowe, the Keans and Kembles; and Mr. F. T. Palgrave, Keats. Prof. Arminius Vámbéry has furnished the articles on Khiva and Kandahar; Mr. S. Lane-Poole that on Kufic Coins. Canon Ainger deals with Charles Lamb. Prof. Legge with Lao-Tze; Sir C. W. Dilke, Liquor Laws; the Marquis of Bute, Liturgy and Litany; Herr Froebel has helped to revise the article on Kindergarten; Cardinal Manning those on the Immaculate Conception and Intallibity; Mrs. Oliphant that on Edward Irving; the General of the Jesuits that on his Society; Signor Bodio, the Director-General of Italian Statistics, that on Italy; and Prof. Huxley the article on himself. The same thorough revision that characterized the previous volumes is continued through the present, which extends from Humber to Malta.

PROF. KOCH's work on the cure of consumption will be brought out in London by William Heinemann.

THE long-promised "Dictionary of Hymnology," edited by Rev. John Julian, is now almost ready for issue. It sets forth the origin and history of the Christian hymns of all ages and nations, with biographical and critical notices. It will form a volume of about 1500 pages.

MR. ROSE TROUP's volume, entitled "With Stanley's Rear Column," includes, in addition to the author's diaries, an introductory chapter replying to Mr. Stanley and the entire correspondence between himself and Mr. Stanley in regard to the rear column. Some passages relating to Major Barttelot, which were first included, Mr. Troup has decided to omit. This decision is said to have been reached before the recent attack was made on Barttelot.

THE copy of Captain Cook's journal purchased by the late Mr. Comer is about to be edited in a popular form by the latter's literary executor, Mr. Bell. A collation of this journal with the copy in the Admiralty archives shows some differences. Dampier's voyages are to be edited for the Hakluyt Society by Lieutenant Dampier, R.N., under the supervision of Mr. Clements Markham, C.B., the President of the Society.

THE poems of Dante G. Rossetti will shortly be published in a cheaper form. The volume (which may be ready before the end of the year) will contain the whole of the original poems, such as they appear in the "Collected Works" issued at the end of 1886, but not any of the translations, nor yet of the prose. As in the previous instance, Mr. W. M. Rossetti will supervise the edition, and Messrs. Ellis & Elvey will be the publishers. A portrait of the author (not supplied in any existing form of his works) will be given.

H. LE SOUDIER, Boulevard Saint-Germain, Paris, has issued "La Hongrie Contemporaine," by Raoul Chéland, a work which has been received in Hungary with the highest praise, owing to the accuracy of its information and the political value of its theories, based on profound study of the national documents. The young author has avoided the mistakes of former writers and controlled his imagination, confining himself strictly to facts. He shows spirit and artistic sense of beauty in his descriptions of the natural and geographical characteristics of Hungary, but it is in his dissertation on the economics of the nation that lies the great value of his book, which is an important addition to the literature of political economy.

"ONE of the rarest of modern books," says the London Athenæum, "is the little volume of his poems which Mr. Ruskin collected from the magazines and issued for private circulation in 1850. All of these poems were written before he was twenty-six. But Mr. Ruskin has from time to time written others which have never appeared in print. He has, however, now given permission to Mr. W. C. Collingwood, his former secretary, to edit all of his poetical work that he himself deems worthy of preservation. The new matter is nearly as large again as that contained in the volume of 1850. The whole will be arranged in chronological order and approximately dated, so as to furnish, together with notes, a sort of autobiographical commentary on the author's life. The mode of publication will be in two volumes of about 230 pages each with twenty-five plates from drawings by Mr. Ruskin never before published, illustrative of places mentioned in the poems, besides fac-similes. Three editions will be issued, ranging in size from large quarto to small octavo. Mr. George Allen, of Orpington, hopes to have the work ready early in the new year."

SALE OF LOCKWOOD & COOMBS' PLATES.—At the sale at Bangs & Co. on November 26, of plates and copyrights formerly controlled by Lockwood & Coombes, Brentano's bought the copyright of "After Dinner Stories from Balzac," by Edgar Saltus, and Dodd, Mead & Co. bought the stereotype plates and copyright of "Ballads of Books," edited by Brander Matthews, and the stereotype plates and copyright of "Books and Bookmen," by Andrew Lang.

LIBRARY EDITIONS OF STANDARD AUTHORS

IN LITERATURE, HISTORY, POETRY AND FICTION

In which the greatest care has been taken by the publishers in the presswork, binding, paper, and illustrations, especially designed for persons wishing fine editions for the library. All are printed on extra super calendered paper. Finely illustrated. Bound in either vellum cloth, leather titles and gilt tops, or finest half calf with gilt tops. Including works of BROWNING, CARLYLE, COOPER, DICKENS, ELIOT, FIELDING, HUME, LYTTON, RUSKIN, STRICKLAND, SWINBURNE, THACKERAY, SCOTT.

Indian Tales.

By RUDYARD KIPLING. 1 vol., 12mo, cloth, gilt top, 771 pages, $1.50.

This is the only edition of "Plain Tales from the Hills," "Soldiers Three, and Other Stories," "The Story of the Gadsbys," "Phantom 'Rickshaw," issued in America with the sanction of the author.

Verses.

By GERTRUDE HALL. 1 vol., 12mo, cloth, gilt, $1.00.

A little volume of verses from the pen of Gertrude Hall, a young English writer of promise, has just been issued. The English papers, in commenting on this little volume, dwell particularly upon the unaffected sweetness and naturalness of the sentiment, and the smoothness of metrical diction. In all probability a second edition will be demanded, on the strength of the impression created by the too-limited number just issued.

Departmental Ditties, Barrack-Room Ballads, and Other Verses.

By RUDYARD KIPLING. 1 vol., 12mo, cloth, gilt, $1.25.

We have just issued, under the authorization of Rudyard Kipling, a volume of poems, which contains "Departmental Ditties," "Barrack-Room Ballads" and a collection of Kipling's fugitive verses, which he has recently arranged for this volume. This will be the first edition of Kipling's poetical writings issued in this country. The press universally praise his poetical work, the style of which is crisp, terse, witty and entertaining.

Letters to Living Authors.

By J. A. STEUART. Cloth, $2.00.

Illustrated with portraits of the different authors. An Edition de Luxe, limited to 25 copies, printed on hand-made paper and tastefully bound, $5.00.

The Gentle Art of Making Enemies.

By J. MCNEILL WHISTLER. A gift most acceptable to any Artist.

Being a collection of his writings edited by himself. 12mo, cloth, with cover specially designed by Mr. Whistler, $2.00. An Edition de Luxe, limited to 300 copies, issued on hand made paper, each copy numbered and signed by Mr. Whistler, $10.00.

The first edition of this remarkable book was exhausted in a few days, and the second edition is selling rapidly, while only a few of the Edition de Luxe are left.

George Meredith, Novelist and Poet: Some Characteristics.

By RICHARD LE GALLIENNE.

Author of "My Ladies' Sonnets," "Volumes in Folio," etc. With a Bibliography by John Lane, and a Note by W. Morton Fullerton on the reception of George Meredith's works in America. Regular edition, $2.00. American Edition de Luxe, limited to 25 copies, $10.00. With an illustration of the novelist's chalet from a pen-and-ink sketch by his son, Mr. W. M. Meredith.

"My whole attempt is that of a lover of the works to give expression to the faith that is in him."—Extract from Preface.

The King's Daughters.

By Mrs. ELLEN E. DICKINSON. 1 vol., small 4to, cloth, silver and gilt, $1.25.

Illustrated with numerous half-tone plates, from original designs for this work, by E. J. Austin.

History of My Pets. Stories of My Childhood.

By GRACE GREENWOOD (Mrs. Lippincott). 12mo, cloth, gilt, $1.00 per volume.

Beautifully illustrated from new designs made expressly for these volumes.

"It is like hearing that an old friend is about to visit us, that I learn that new editions of Mrs. Lippincott's delightful books are soon to be published."—J. G. WHITTIER.

SOCIALISM OF CHRIST.

By AUSTIN BIERBOWER.

12mo, Cloth, $1.00.

This book presents the attitude of early Christianity toward Socialism and its related problems. All ancient writings bearing on the subject have been critically examined, as well as all ancient socialistic theories and attempts at practical communism. The author believes Christianity to be the outcome of a tremendous popular movement. Moderns will be astonished at how thoroughly and passionately those questions were anciently discussed which seem new to this age, and how they received a solution by Jesus or his immediate followers. The book is unlike any ever written, and will awaken intense interest in early Christianity, as well as in social and economic problems. It is written in popular style and abounds in constant surprises.

Owing to our removal next month to larger quarters, we offer until January 15 the following four books in lots of 100 copies or more, assorted, at $6.00 per hundred, cash with order. These are regular stock, and are not inferior books gotten up to sell at a low price :

NOTES IN SEASON.

J. B. LIPPINCOTT Co. have just ready "With Stanley's Rear Column," by J. Rose Troup, transport officer of the Emin Pasha Relief Expedition; "Patience," by Anna B. Warner; and in their series of Select Novels a new story by John Strange Winter, entitled "The Other Man's Wife."

THE OPEN COURT PUBLICATION Co., of Chicago, will publish immediately in two handsomely bound and printed volumes a new authorized translation of Gustav Freytag's well-known novel, "The Lost Manuscript." This is regarded by critics as the most charming of the famous German writer's works.

THE WORTHINGTON Co. announce for immediate publication "One of Cleopatra's Nights, and other stories," by Théophile Gautier, translated by Lafcadio Hearn. The volume consists of exquisite short tales, with a number of photogravure illustrations which add very much to the interest of the author's imaginative creations.

THE publication of Tourgée's new novel, "Murvale Eastman, Christian Socialist," having been delayed until now, Fords, Howard & Hulbert announce that it will not be issued until Jan. 7, when the holiday rush will be over, and buyers and readers can give the book the attention it deserves. In Great Britain it will be published by Sampson Low, Marston & Co.

WARD, LOCK & Co. will publish in The Minerva Library, next month, a new edition of "Lyra Elegantiarum." This edition will contain, in addition to about 40 poems introduced to replace less interesting ones taken out, about 80 poems by authors who have died in recent years including Robt. Browning, Mrs. Browning, Calverly, Henry S. Leigh, Wm. Allington and many others. An index of authors and an index of first lines will be added to the work.

D. APPLETON & Co. have nearly ready a new book by Gail Hamilton, entitled "A Washington Bible-Class." The book will prove a novelty, inasmuch as it tells how a considerable number of Washington women spend their Sunday afternoons. It is an authoritative and detailed account of the topics which interest them, and of the handling which these topics receive; and no one should consider himself thoroughly informed regarding Washington society until he has read this book. But it will appear that the conventional type of butterfly, fashion-plate "society belle" will have to be reconstructed.

THE Cassell Publishing Co. will publish, January 1, 1891, the "Life of John Boyle O'Reilly." It is written by James Jeffrey Roche, an intimate friend of the lamented dead during all his life in Boston, and for many years his associate in the editorship of the Pilot. This work has the full sanction of Mr. O'Reilly's family, and will be the only authorized life. The volume has an introduction by Cardinal Gibbons, a warm admirer of O'Reilly, and will also contain his complete poems (including some that have not yet been printed), and his orations and addresses, edited by his wife, Mary O'Reilly. The book will be handsomely illustrated, and generally gotten up in sumptuous style.

MACMILLAN & Co. have nearly ready for publication a one-volume edition of Shelley's poetical works, edited with a preface by Prof. Edward Dowden, and uniform with the similar editions of Tennyson, Wordsworth and Matthew Arnold; a pocket edition, bound in morocco, of Lord Tennyson's poetical works, without the dramas; and a large-type edition of Mr. Palgrave's "Golden Treasury of English Songs and Lyrics." Of the last-named book a limited edition will be published on hand-made paper, each copy being numbered and signed by the editor. They also announce for early issue a volume of essays, chiefly on literary subjects, by the present Bishop of Durham, and a volume of sermons by the Bishop of Meath.

WEEKLY RECORD OF NEW PUBLICATIONS.*

The abbreviations are usually self-explanatory. c. after the date indicates that the book is copyrighted; if the copyright date differs from the imprint date, the year of copyright is added. Books of foreign origin of which the edition (annotated, illustrated, etc.) is entered as copyright, are marked c. ed.; translations, c. tr.; n. p. in place of price, indicates that the publisher makes no price, either net or retail, and quotes prices to the trade only upon application.

A colon after initial designates the most usual given name, as: A: Augustus; B: Benjamin; C: Charles; D: David; E: Edward; F: Frederic; G: George; H: Henry; I: Isaac; J: John; L: Louis; N: Nicholas; P: Peter; R: Richard; S: Samuel; T: Thomas; W: William.

Contents: The light of the world; The new and greater miracle; The priority of God; Identity and variety; The seriousness of life; The choice young man; Backgrounds and foregrounds; The silence of Christ; How to abound; How to be abased; The Christian church; The opening of the eyes, etc. The author is the well-known rector of Trinity Church, Boston.

*Brown, Alex., comp. and ed. The genesis of the United States; a narrative of the movement in England, 1605-1616, which resulted in the plantation of North America by Englishmen, disclosing the contest between England and Spain for the possession of the soil now occupied by the United States of America; the whole set forth through a series of historical manuscripts now first printed, together with a reissue of rare contemporaneous tracts, accompanied by bibliographical memoranda, notes, plans, maps and 108 por., and a bibliographical index. Bost., Houghton, Mifflin & Co., 1890. 2 v., 8°, cl., net, $15.

Although this work was entered in the "Weekly Record" as published early in the year, it is only just published. The error arose from the publishers being disappointed in issuing it, after announcing it as ready.

Burch, Florence E. Farmer Bluff's dog Blazer; or, at the eleventh hour; il. by Gordon Browne. [N. Y. and Chic., Fleming H. Revell, 1890.] 5-188 p. il. D. cl., 80 c.

Blazer is the hero in a story which pictures the strange characteristics of farmer Bluff and his canine, and tells how the Squire's bailiff was brought to see the error of his ways, and why Hal determined that Blazer should wear a silver collar.

Cajori, Florian. The teaching and history of mathematics in the United States. Wash., D. C., Government Print. Office, 1890. 400 p. O. (Bureau of education, Circular of information, no. 3, 1890.) pap.

Callahan, G. W. George Callahan's easy method of ventriloquism. N. Y., Street & Smith, [1890.] 4-28 p. S. (S. & S. manual lib., no. 16.) pap., 10 c.

Cameron, Mrs. H. Lovett. Jack's secret: a novel. Phil., J. B. Lippincott Co., 1890. 3+300 p. D. (Lippincott's ser. of select novels, no. 115.) pap., 50 c.

A couplet which had been handed down through generations of Durhams foretold the fortunes of the house in the following words:

"When Fairmead's maids shall rule successive three,
Then Fairmead's lands shall peace and plenty see."

This prophesy the elder Miss Durham is determined to see realized. She fulfils her part stoically, and insists on her niece doing her part; but Madge of the third generation refuses to sacrifice her fate at the altar of the old prediction. Her action makes a very romantic story that involves a mystery in the life of Jack Ludlow.

*Catholic home almanac for 1891. N. Y., Benziger Bros., 1890. 16°, pap., 25 c.

* In this list, the titles generally are verbatim transcriptions (according to the rule of the American Library Association) from books received. Books not received are indicated by a prefixed asterisk and this office cannot be held responsible for the correctness of their record.

Chicago, Ill. Laws and ordinances governing the city, as in force April 2, 1890; compared and revised by Jonas Hutchinson and M. W. Robinson, with explanatory annotations digesting the decisions of the supreme and appellate courts to date; by H. Binmore. Chic., E. B. Myers & Co., 1890. c. 9+1395 p. O. shp., $16.

Child, Francis J., ed. English and Scottish popular ballads. Edition de luxe. In 8 pts. Pt. 7. Bost., Houghton, Mifflin & Co., 1890. 4° pap., subs., net, $5.

Christmas stories and March violets; from the German, by Elizabeth P. Corder. Bost., G. H. Ellis, 1890. 3-91 p. D. bds., $1.

Contents: The little angel among the broken wings, by Frida Schanz; The Christ-child, by Marie Herbert; The three fir trees, by August H. Plinke; The discontented stars, by Liddy Richter; and March violets, by Elise Polko.

Clark, W. Savonarola, his life and times. Chic., A. C. McClurg & Co., 1890. c. 2-352 p. D. cl., $1.50.

The author, who is Professor of Philosophy in Trinity College, Toronto, gives in his preface the titles of the best-known biographies of Savonarola, briefly epitomizing their special characteristics. He acknowledges himself most indebted to Villari's "Life of Savonarola," first published in 1861 and reissued with several changes in 1888. Professor Clark has also depended upon painstaking original research for the facts he has presented with literary skill.

Classic gems of English literature. V. 1, Selections from Milton, Addison, and Goldsmith. V. 2, Cowper, Scott and Macaulay. N. Y., T. Nelson & Sons, 1890. ea., 18°, cl., 50 c.

Clemens, S. L., ["Mark Twain," pseud.] A Connecticut Yankee in King Arthur's court. N. Y., C. L. Webster & Co., 1890. c. '89. 4-465 p. il. O. cl., $3.

A keen and powerful satire on English nobility and royalty.

Clerke, Agnes M. The system of the stars. N. Y., Longmans, Green & Co., 1890. 444 p. 8°, with photographic chart, cl., $7.

Cohen, Alfred J., ["Alan Dale," pseud.] An old maid kindled: a novel. N. Y., G. W. Dillingham, 1890. 345 p. 12° pap., 50 c.

Collis, Septima M. A woman's trip to Alaska; being an account of a voyage through the inland seas of the Sitkan Archipelago in 1890. N. Y., Cassell Publishing Co., 1890. 12+194 p. il. D. cl., $2.50.

The author makes no pretence of writing a scientific or historical work. All this she thinks has been done better than she can do it. Her sole object is to put on paper, for the benefit of others, the impressions made upon her by the voyage, and to explain how this delightful excursion can be enjoyed without fatigue or discomfort, and at trifling expense. She hopes to induce her countrywomen to postpone Paris, London, Rome, Vienna, the Rhine and the Alps until they have seen some of the marvellous beauties of their own land. The book is beautifully printed, and many of the illustrations are colored. She is the wife of Gen. C. H. T. Collis.

Coppée, François. Ten tales from the French, by Walter Learned; with 50 pen-and-ink drawings by Albert E. Sterner, and an introd. by Brander Matthews. N. Y., Harper, 1891 [1890.] c. tr. 10+219 p. por. S. (The odd number ser.) cl., $1.25.

Contents: The captain's vices; Two clowns; A voluntary death; A dramatic funeral; The substitute; At table; An accident; The sabots of Little Wolff; The foster sister; My friend Mentrrier. A portrait of Coppée forms the frontispiece. The little drawings scattered through the text are full of life and character. Coppée offers untold difficulties to the translator, but the English of this version gives an excellent idea of the peculiarities of the author's crisp idiomatic style.

Corelli, Marie. Wormwood: a drama of Paris. N. Y., G. Munro, [United States Book Co.,

1890.] 10+421 p. D. (Seaside lib., pocket ed., no. 1663.) pap., 20 c.

Courtier, H. Biblical atlas and scriptural gazetteer. Rev. and enl. N. Y. and Chic., Fleming H. Revell, 1890. 100 p. 4°, cl., $2.

Curtis, D. E., ed. Orders of worship for the Sunday-school. Bost., Congregational S. S. and Pub. Soc., 1890. 45 p. sq. D. pap., 15 c.

Dabney, Rob. L., D.D. Discussions, by Robert L. Dabney, D.D.; ed. by C. R. Vaughan. In 4 v. V. 1, Theological and evangelical. Richmond, Va., Presb. Committee of Pub., 1890. c. 10+728 p. O. cl., $1.50.

Prof. Dabney was b. in Virginia, on the 5th of March, 1820. He has been, in turn, teacher, farmer, mechanic, author, soldier, financier, theologian and preacher of the gospel. He is at present Professor of Moral Philosophy in the University of Texas, and was for many years Professor of Theology in Union Theological Seminary in Virginia. His writings range over a variety of subjects—political economy, theology, philosophy, etc.

Dale, R. W. The living Christ and the four gospels. N. Y., A. C. Armstrong & Son, 1890. 7+299 p. D. cl., $1.50.

Fourteen lectures delivered during the present year. They were intended for a congregation in the heart of a great manufacturing community where there were few Masters of Arts, but many men and women with active, vigorous and speculative intellects, keen interest in public affairs and in current theological controversies. The author says there are large numbers of people who cannot understand how it is possible in these days for intelligent, open-minded, educated men to believe in the Lord Jesus Christ. To strengthen faith in the historical trustworthiness of the story of his earthly ministry contained in the four gospels is the object of these lectures.

Dana, Ja. D. Corals and coral islands. New ed. enl. N. Y., Dodd, Mead & Co., 1890. il. 8°, cl., $5.

De Mille, Ja. Helena's household: a tale of Rome in the first century. [New issue.] N. Y., Ward & Drummond, [1890.] c. '67-'90. 4+422 p. D. cl., $1.50.

First published by Robert Carter & Bros., 1867.

Dieulafoy, Mme. Jane. At Susa, the ancient capital of the kings of Persia: narrative of travel through Western Persia and excavations made at the site of the Lost City of Lilies, 1884-1886; from the French by F. L. White. Phil., Gebbie & Co., 1890. il. 4°, cl., $5.

Dobson, Austin. A memoir of Horace Walpole. Limited ed. de luxe; il. with 11 etchings by Percy Moran. N. Y., Dodd, Mead & Co., 1890. 8°, cl., $15.

Doudney, Sarah. Old Anthony's secret. [N. Y. and Chic., Fleming H. Revell, 1890.] 5-96 p. il. D. cl., $1.

An old house in Sea Castle, which rumor said was haunted, was bequeathed to Anthony Foyle. The story tells of the unpleasant consequences that pursued Anthony and his niece, Lettice, because of the ignorant superstition of the villagers, and how Anthony's talked-of safeguard revealed itself in the words "The secret of the Lord is with them that fear him."

Drysdale, A. H. Early Bible songs; by-paths of Bible knowledge, v. 15. N. Y. and Chic., Fleming H. Revell, 1890. 192 p. 12°, cl., $1.

Du Bois, Constance Goddard. Martha Corey: a tale of Salem witchcraft. Chic., A. C. McClurg & Co., 1890. c. 3-314 p. D. cl., $1.25.

The story begins in Thomas Beverley's stately London mansion in 1691. In the form of fiction the reasons are given for the emigration of the chief actors to America. Some of the horrors of the tortures of the supposed witches are softened. But enough details are given to paint a vivid picture of those troublous times. Romance is skilfully introduced, and Cupid has his hands full at many points of the tale. Martha Corey is a most lovable character, who proves a blessing to her friends.

Ebers, G. The elixir, and other tales: from the German, by Mrs. E. Hamilton Bell. N. Y., W. S. Graustreger & Co., 1890. c. 3+261 p. S. pap., 50 c.

Contents. The elixir: The grey'sack, a fairy tale: The rose, a Christmas story.

Eckstein, E. Die Numidierin: nouvelle aus dem altägyptischen Afrika. Milwaukee, Wis., C. N. Caspar, 1890. 165 p. 16°, cl., 50 c.

Edon, Janet. Peter's sister. [N. Y., and Chic., Fleming H. Revell.] 1890. 5+255 p. il. D. cl., $1.25.

The sacrifice of Mary Kenward for her little crippled brother makes a very pretty theme in a story which pictures a few of the scenes and some of the trials that the working-woman of London is subjected to. Florence's story conveys a wholesome lesson to girls of her type.

Edwards, Rev. Rob. A. From Joppa to Mount Hermon: a series of narrative discourses on the Holy Land, delivered in the Church of St. Matthias, Phil., during the autumn and winter of 1887-1890. Phil. Porter & Coates, 1890. c. 2+256 p. il. O. cl., $1.50.

In February, 1889, Rev. Mr. Edwards sailed from New York and completed his tour through the Holy Land before the end of April. He told his congregation what he saw in twenty-three lectures which are now printed by request. They are illustrated from photographic views taken by Hon. David C. Beil, of Minneapolis, who was one of the party.

Eustace, Rev. J. M. Notes on trigonometry and logarithms. N. Y., Longmans, Green & Co., 1890. 311 p. 12°, cl., $1.35.

Every man his own mechanic: a complete and comprehensive guide to every description of constructive and decorative work that may be done by the amateur artisan at home. New ed. N. Y., Ward, Lock & Co., 1890. 924 p. il. 8°, cl., $3.

Farjeon, B. L. Basil and Annette. N. Y., United States Book Company, [1890.] 2+440 p. D. (Lovell's international ser., no. 133.) pap., 50 c.

The scene is laid in Australia, where Anthony Bidaud, conscious that he is stricken with death, confides to Basil Whittingham the guardianship of his daughter. Before his plans are executed, Gilbert Bidaud plots for the fortune. His plans cover many sensational scenes and incidents, but the most interesting part of the novel is that which involves the happiness of "Basil and Annette."

Farrar, C: A. J. Camp life in the wilderness: a tale of the Richardson Lakes; il. by Reed and Poole. [New issue.] Bost., Lee & Shepard, 1890. c. 3+224 p. D. (Lake and forest series.) cl., $1.

Farrar, C: A. J. From lake to lake; or, a trip across country: a narrative of the wilds of Maine; il. by Reder, Garrett, Reed, [and others.] Bost., Lee & Shepard, 1890. c. '87. 8+224 p. D. (Lake and forest ser.) cl., $1.

Favorite nursery album. N. Y., T: Nelson & Sons, 1890. il. 4°, cl., $2.50.

Fenn, G. Manville. Lady Maude's mania: a tragedy in high life. N. Y., United States Book Co., [1890.] 2+277 p. D. (Lovell's international ser., no. 136.) cl., $1; pap., 50 c.

Fleming, Geraldine. Countess Isabel; or, for honor's sake. N. Y., United States Book Co., [1890.] c. '85. 2+169 p. D. (American novelists' ser., no. 44.) pap., 25 c.

Fox, Luther A., D.D. Evidence of a future life from reason and revelation. Phil., Lutheran Pub. Soc., 1890. c. 378 p. D. cl., $1.25.

The author is Professor of Philosophy in Roanoke College. From personal association with educated young men he knows how to sympathize with honest doubt. He has tried to state honestly and fully every objection that fell under the line of his discussion, to minimize no difficulty and magnify no proof.

Froude, Ja. A. Lord Beaconsfield. N. Y., Harper, 1890. 10+267 p. 5°. (The Queen's prime ministers, no. 1.) cl., $1.

Gibson, W. Hamilton. Strolls by starlight and sunshine; il. by the author. N. Y., Harper, 1891 [1890.] c. 134 p. O. cl., $3.50.

The "strolls" are entitled "A midnight ramble," "Night watchery," "Bird notes," "Bird cradles," "Pre-historic botanists" and "The wild garden." They are all rich in appreciation of the beauties of the various aspects of nature, and of the trees, flowers and living inhabitants of the fields and forests. The illustrations adorn almost every page, and consist of graceful sprays of flowers, beautiful landscapes, birds, etc., etc.

Goddard, Julia. The golden weather-cock. N. Y., Scribner & Welford, 1890. 5°, cl., $1.

Goldsmith, Oliver. The Vicar of Wakefield. New American ed. N. Y. and Chic., A. C. McClurg & Co., 1890. 4+279 p. D. (Laurel crowned tales.) cl., $1.

H., J. W. A. M. Mackay, pioneer missionary of The Church Missionary Society to Uganda; by his sister. Author's ed. N. Y., A. C. Armstrong & Son, 1890. 8+486 p. por. and map. D. cl., $1.50.

Alexander M. Mackay was born in the agricultural county of Aberdeen in 1849, and died in Usambrio, Africa, February 12, 1890, of a malarial fever. The story of his arduous labors in Africa is chiefly revealed in letters to his sisters. He was profoundly impressed with the great task of evangelizing Africa. This he thought could best be accomplished by selecting a few particularly healthy sites and erecting on every one a worthy and stirring educational institution.

Habberton, J. All he knew: a story. Meadville, Pa., Flood & Vincent, [Chautauqua-century press,] 1890. 197 p. D. cl., $1.

Haycraft, Margaret Scott. Myrtle and Rue: a story for the young illustrating Psalm XIII. N. Y. and Chic., Fleming H. Revell, [1890.] 3-224 p. il. D. cl., $1.

Myrtle and Rupert were two children, who lived with their parents in India, until it was decided best to send them to England. Their voyage and doings after they reached that country, with the story of a happy reunion, makes an interesting book for the young.

Hazlitt, W. Carew. Studies in jocular literature, a popular subject more closely considered. N. Y., A. C. Armstrong & Son, 1890. 6+230 p. S. (The book-lovers' lib.) cl., $1.25.

In this new volume of the Book-Lovers' Library Mr. Hazlitt has treated jocular literature from the points of view of the philosopher and the student. He points out the real use of the jest and traces the origin of the literature of humor from the earliest of times, showing its dependence on the varying conditions of society in which it was originated. The various forms of epigram, skit, pun, retort, ballad, nursery-rhymes, etc., are all noted and commented upon in their places more or less fully.

A graphic account of the making of New England, told for younger readers by one of the brightest of historical story-tellers. It covers the ground from the days of Miles Standish to those of Israel Putnam and Ethan Allen. Illustrated with many full-page pictures.

Hutchinson, J. Hal Hungerford; or, the strange adventures of a boy emigrant. N. Y., Scribner & Welford, 1890. il. 8°, cl., $1.

Hutton, Laurence. Curiosities of the American stage. N. Y., Harper, 1891 [1890] c. 8+347 p. por. O. cl., $2.50.

A series of chapters from the annals of the American theatre, plays and players are considered more particularly in their less familiar aspects. The book does not pretend to be critical, but is written with a thorough love and sympathy for the subject. The titles of the papers are: The native American drama; The Indian drama; The revolutionary and war drama; The frontier drama; The stage American in the character play; The local New York drama; The society drama; The American stage negro; The American burlesque; Infant phenomena of America; A century of American Hamlets. A double index—personal as well as local—makes the book available for reference. The numerous portraits of stage favorites give it a special interest.

Iverach, Ja. St. Paul: his life and times. N. Y., A. D. F. Randolph & Co., [1890.] 6+216 p. D. (Men of the Bible ser.) cl., $1.

The author is Professor of Apologetics and Exegesis of the Gospels in Free Church College, Aberdeen, Scotland. The chief sources of information for the fifteen chapters in which he has summed up the eventful career of St. Paul, are of course the Acts of the Apostles and the Epistles of St. Paul and the articles on St. Paul in the "Encyclopædia Britannica," Smith's "Bible Dictionary," Schenkel's "Bibel-Lexikon" and in Herzog-Platt's "Real-Encyclopædia." Besides, he has consulted Meyer, Godet, Edwards, Beet, Lightfoot and others, and been over every notable life of St. Paul that has thus far been written. He has put his abundance of material into good popular form.

Jastrow, Jos. The time-relations of mental phenomena. N. Y., N. D. C. Hodges, 1890. 1+60 p. O. (Fact and theory pap., no. 6.) cl., 50 c.

It is only within very recent years that this department of research has been cultivated, and it is natural that the results of different workers, involving variations in method and design, should show points of difference. In spite of these it seems possible to present a systematic sketch of what has been done, with due reference to the ultimate goal as well as the many gaps still to be filled.

Gives the history of eleven abbeys which form a glorious group of ruins from which the author thinks we cannot get the best and deepest enjoyment or reveal to others the secret of their charm without an imaginative sympathy with the spirit which wrought in and still lingers near them. The first edition was published some seven years ago, since then much fresh light has been thrown on monastic antiquities; and, in revising the work for this edition, the author has made careful use of later authorities.
- Leitch, Mary and Margaret W. Seven years in Ceylon: stories of mission life. N. Y., American Tract Soc., [1890.] c. 7+170 p. il. O. bds., 75 c.

Outlines the laws governing memory; prescribes simple methods of improving the memory and storing it. Bishop J. H. Vincent contributes a chapter on Bible memorizing with selections therefor. Mr. W. R. Baird gives valuable hints on legal study, with an example from the law of evidence. Mr. W. A. Dunning gives suggestions to undergraduates. Mr. G. F. C. Smilie concludes with hints on general study. The vol. is the first of a bi-monthly series to comprise Quickness of perception, Ear memory and eye memory training, The study of languages, Memory and thought, Memory training of the young. The editor is the well-known founder of the Industrial Art Public Schools of Philadelphia, and author of Practical education, etc. The series will be invaluable to the student, professional man, or indeed to anybody who wishes to remember more so as to have more to think with.
- Litchfield, Grace Denio. Little he and she; il. by L. Meynelle. Boast, D. Lothrop Co., [1890.] c. 7-175 p. O. bds., $1.50.
Two intensely natural children are the hero and heroine. Their love for one another, and their unconsciousness of the meaning of the word "hate," bring together two older persons who have been long estranged.

- Macdonald, G. A rough shaking; il. by W. Parkinson. N. Y., G. Routledge & Sons, [1890.] 7-384 p. D. cl., $1.50.
Dedicated to the author's great-nephew. Two old men meet in a beautiful English country lane and exchange thoughts about the erroneous ideas men and women have about animals. One of the old men tells the story of his boyhood in a manner calculated to inspire noble manly thoughts in healthy boys. The pictures are by W. Parkinson, and are bright and pretty. The title comes from the fact that the hero's parents are killed by an earthquake shock.
- McGuzalor, Steward, (pseud.) Society as it found me out. N. Y., W. Carlton Regard, 1160 B'way, 1890. c. 5+115 p. D. pap., 50 c.

For twenty seven years the author has tried to understand "orthodoxy," but has failed. What he now believes he understands, and thinks he can explain so that others can understand it. In his opinion "God gave Christ a religion, but men have so perverted it and so mixed it up that most, if not all, of the 'essential points' in what they call 'orthodoxy' are mere 'hoax' and 'humbug.'" Also, in his opinion, if Christ were held up as a teacher, a guide, a friend and elder brother, and less as a God, mankind would be the better for it. He divides his book into four parts, all headed "Things that men should know," and every one containing too numbered propositions of belief, and rules for conduct of life.

- Martyn, Carlos, William E. Dodge: the Christian merchant. N. Y., Funk & Wagnalls, 1890. c. 2-349 p. por. D. (American reformers.) cl., $1.50.
William E. Dodge was born in Hartford, Connecticut, in 1805, and died in New York City in February, 1883. His large wealth and fine intellectual powers were always used in the cause of religion, morality, order, patriotism and philanthropy. He was an active living force in New York City for more than sixty years. He witnessed the growth of the population of the metropolis, including the suburbs, from 150,000 to 2,000,000, and the record of his active business career is a record of New York business development that in itself is of general interest. The author has also written "Wendell Phillips" for the same series.

- Morris, W. News from nowhere; or, an epoch of rest: being some chapters from a Utopian romance. Bost., Roberts Bros., 1890. 3-278 p. D. cl., $1.
The narrator of this romance falls asleep to-day and awakes an old man on the banks of the Thames, and finds himself in an amazing land, among curious people, in the year 1971. The society described is enjoying the delights of pure communism. Everything is owned in common; there is no government, no vicious class and no vice, and no enforced labor. Mr. Morris' story is all touched by a poet's fancy and is delightfully enticing.

- Pendleton, L. King Tom and the runaways: the story of what befell two boys in a Georgia swamp. N. Y., Appleton, 1890. c. 5+273 p. O. cl., $1.50.
The second volume in the American Fiction Series for young people. Describes some remarkable adventures in a little known region. The illustrations by E. W. Kemble show thorough familiarity with the scenes and actors of the story. By the author of "In the wire-grass."
- Parry, T. Sergeant. A history of Greek literature. N. Y., H. Holt & Co., 1890. c. 13+877 p. il. O. cl., $7.50.
A philosophical account of the growth of Greek literature, and of its relations to the physical surroundings and political and social history of the people. In this setting appears the outlines of the great masterpieces, with English translations of their more interesting or representative passages. It is believed that the man who knows little or no Greek may by this book put himself in closer contact with the spirit of Greek literature than most students of the language have obtained, and also that the college-bred man who got from his study of these classics in the original but faint and distorted views of their beauties will here find assistance in extending and organizing his knowledge.

First published in 1868. As now presented, revised, edited and in a large measure rewritten, and also enlarged for this series, it is practically a new work.
- Rand, Rev. E. A. Deeds worth telling; logs for the Yule-tide fire. N. Y., Hunt & Eaton, 1890. c. 233 p. il. O. cl., $1.50.
Instead of writing about imaginary boys and what they might do, Mr. Rand tells twenty-six true stories of what real boys (and girls and men and women as well) have actually done.
- Rand, Rev. E. A. Under the lantern at Black Rocks. N. Y., Hunt & Eaton, 1890. c. 3-347 p. D. cl., $1.25.
There is plenty of life in the story of this group of lads in a small New England seaport. It proves to any boy's satisfaction that the fellow who sticks to his business honestly comes out ahead of his brilliant rival, who blows a big trumpet, but neglects the plain duties of life.
- Reed, Elizabeth A. Hindu literature; or, the ancient books of India. Chic., S. C. Griggs & Co., 1891 [1890.] c. 410 p. D. cl., $2.
In Hindu literature the books themselves, with their commentaries and the works connected with their history and philology, constitute so large a library that people of modern times cannot afford the time it takes to get at the gems of thought in these colossal works. An effort has here been made to give the chronology of these ancient books, showing where they belong in the world's history, and presenting a résumé of their teachings and specimens of their literary style. The work has been done as briefly as is consistent with accuracy. The author is a member of the Philosophical Society of Great Britain. Full index.

In the introductory "Aunt Charry" says that every village has its dreamer "who would be sorely missed more'n some o' the wide-awake ones." The seven dreams of the seven dreamers are entitled "How Faith came and went; Botany Bay; Aunt Randy; Fishin' Jimmy; Butterneggs; Deacon Phcby's selfish natur', and A speaking ghost. All show fine poetic feeling and a keen sympathy with human joy and sorrow.

- Spalding, J. L. Education and the higher life. Chic., A. C. McClurg & Co., 1890. c. 3-210 p. D. cl., $1.
The author is the Roman Catholic Bishop of Peoria,

Illinois. He takes as his text Locke's statement that "the business of education is not to perfect the learner in any of the sciences, but to give his mind that freedom and disposition and those habits which may enable him to attain every part of knowledge himself." From this he describes an ideal university and ends by a tribute to Mary Gwendolin Caldwell, "who has now given existence and a dwelling-place to what was heretofore a dreamlike vision."

Sprague, Rev. Philo W. Christian socialism, what and why? with appendix address of the Bishop of Durham on socialism. N. Y., E. P. Dutton & Co., 1891 [1890.] c. 2+204 p. S. cl., 75 c.; pap., 50 c.

Contents: What is socialism? Our present economic system; Spirit of the system; Results of the system; why socialists believe in collective ownership and control of land; Results of the system; why socialists believe in collective ownership and control of capital; Christianity and our present industrial system; The message of Christian socialism; The realization of Christian socialism.

Stoker, Bram. The Snake's Pass: a novel. N. Y., Harper, 1890. 2+234 p. D. (Harper's Franklin sq. lib., new series, no. 685.) pap., 40 c.

Shleenanaher, which is in Irish parlance "The Snake's Pass," is a small cleft or mountain gorge in the west of Ireland, that popular superstition accredits with being the place that St. Patrick did battle with the King of Serpents. Knockcalltecore, the hill of the lost crown of gold, is also vested with interest because of its connection with the legendary lore, and its being the site of the brave rescue, and a romantic incident that makes Nora Joyce the heroine in a novel that pictures several phases of Irish life.

Sumner, T. O. Waukeenanah's slave: a legend; il. by Horace Wightman. N. Y., W. Carlton Regand, 1160 Broadway, [1890.] c. 2+43 p. S. pap., silk cords, $1.

A graceful poem, gotten up as a souvenir.

Szczepanski, Fritz v., ed. Bibliotheca polytechnica: directory of technical literature. 1st annual issue, 1889. N. Y., International News Co., 1890. 80 p. D. flex. cl., 75 c.

A classified catalogue of all books, annuals and journals published in America, England, France and Germany, including their relations to legislation, hygiene and daily life. Arranged under subject headings, the catch titles being in German, French and English.

Talbot, Ella V. The perseverance of Chryssa Arkwright: a lesson in self-help. N. Y., Hunt & Eaton, 1890. c. 266 p. D. cl., $1.

A story for girls.

Taylor, W. M., D.D. The miracles of our Saviour expounded and illustrated. N. Y., A. C. Armstrong & Son, 1890. c. 6+449 p. D. cl., $1.75.

A companion volume to "The parables of our Saviour," already in the fourth edition. The pastor of the Broadway Tabernacle has not attempted any classification of the Saviour's miracles because, after Westcott, he thinks that quite unnecessary, and because, taking each just as it comes and putting it in its own surroundings, he says we get a fuller view of its teaching than we could otherwise obtain. His aim throughout is expository and practical.

Tead, Louise Ordway. The Sunday-school primary teachers' manual. Bost., Congregational S. S. and Pub. Soc., 1890. c. 2+71 p. D. cl., 35 c.; pap., 25 c.

Besides many brief hints as to management of the class, furnishings, etc., there are given opening and closing exercises, motion exercises, brief but pointed Bible exercises, offering and birthday exercises, lessons in Bible history and geography (with outline maps), and other short exercises for teaching children.

Terry, Milton S. The Sibylline oracles; tr. from the Greek into English blank verse. N. Y.,

Hunt & Eaton, 1890. c. tr. 2-267 p. D. cl., $1.50.

The Sibylline oracles are a collection of pseudepigraphal poems, venerable for their antiquity, and valuable for their exhibition of the spirit and thought of the early Christian centuries. They possess a permanent value for the theologian and the student of history.

Thompson, Dan. Greenleaf. The philosophy of fiction in literature. N. Y., Longmans, Green & Co., 1890. 8°, cl., $1.50.

Thompson, Mrs. E. H. From the Thames to the Trosachs: impressions of travel in England and Scotland; with an introd. by Jesse L. Hurlbut. N. Y., Hunt & Eaton, 1890. c. 7+203 p. D. (The Epworth readings from 1870-71.) cl., 50 c.

Tillier, Claude. My uncle Benjamin: a humorous, satirical and philosophical novel; from the French by B. R. Tucker, with a sketch of the author's life and works, by Ludwig Pfarr. Bost., B. R. Tucker, 1890. c. 312 p. D. cl., $1; pap., 50 c.

Claude Tillier was born on the 10th of April, 1801, in Clancy, a small town in the department of Nièvre. He died at Nevers, October 12, 1844. He "kicked against the pricks" all his life and met plenty of misfortune, which probably accounts for the pessimistic strain in this novel. The translation is probably accurate. The French call a spade a spade, and Mr. Tucker never softens their vocabulary. Uncle Benjamin was a physician, devoted to his sister, the mother of seven children, one of whom is supposed to tell the story. He was "the drollest, wittiest man in the country, and almost the least sober."

Tolstoi, Count Lyof N. The dominion of darkness: a drama in five acts; from the original Russian. Chic., C. H. Sergel & Co., [1890.] c. tr. 116 p. D. (Sergel's Columbian lib., v. 1, no. 4.) pap., 25 c.

The scene is laid in Russia. The actors are peasants of the lowest class upon whose improvement in morality and acquiring of knowledge Count Tolstoi has spent the best years of his life. A startling picture is given of scenes and incidents that, incredible as it may appear, are said still to exist among the great bulk of the Russian peasantry.

Tolstoi, Count Lyof N. The romance of marriage; tr. by Alexina Loranger. Chic., Laird & Lee, 1890. c. 4-171 p. D. (Pastime ser., no. 45.) pap., 25 c.

A young Russian girl of eighteen marries her guardian, a man thirty-six, full of plans and hopes for the good of his country and his fellowmen. The romance of her wedded life seems to wear off and she feels neglected and uninterested in her husband's ideals. After some severe lessons she is finally taught through her two children to make a good wife for their father.

Toussaint Samson, Mme. A Parisian in Brazil; from the French, by Emma Toussaint. Bost., Ja. H. Earle & Co., 170 Washington St., 1891 [1890.] c. 2-166 p. il. D. cl., $1.

Brazil looks to France for many of its social and commercial fashions and customs, and for this reason a Parisian is specially competent to sketch them correctly. The account of the relationship existing between the races, negro and Caucasian, has for Americans a national interest. The book gives late and profitable information about the land which has so recently joined the sisterhood of American Republics.

Towle, Mary L. W. Where is heaven? and other poems. San Francisco, Cal., The Bancroft Co., 1890. c. 3-48 p. S. pap., 50 c.

Towner, D. B. Hymns new and old, no. 2. N. Y. and Chic., Fleming H. Revell, 1890. 190 p. 12°, bds., 30 c.

Trafton, Adeline, [now Mrs. Knox.] Dorothy's experience. Bost., Lee & Shepard, 1891 [1890.] c. 2-211 p. S. hf. cl., $1.

The history of a mental struggle with theological problems. Dorothy at the suggestion of her pastor drops all theorizing and settles down to help others. She lets the religious problems take care of themselves and takes up the work of helping some unpromising specimens of factory girls, only to find, after some difficulties, that her troubles have vanished, with those of the young women.

whom, in unconventional but kindly and human ways, she has helped to a better life.

Tucker, Mrs. Charlotte, ["A. L. O. E.," pseud.] The Hartley brothers; or, the Knights of Saint John. N. Y. and Chic., Fleming H. Revell, [1890.] 11+226 p. il. D. cl., 75 c.

A sequel to the "Pictures of St. Paul" and "Pictures of St. Peter;" but so little is known of the personal history of St. John, that instead of making the beloved disciple hero, the author has made the Hartley brothers enact in their lives the principles that this apostle preached. The scenes are for the most part in a distant Indian mission. The story is made up of perilous adventures and pleasing experiences of two brothers who enrolled themselves Knights of St John.

Tuttle, Hudson. Religion of man and ethics of science. N. Y., M. L. Holbrook & Co., 1890. c. 3+313 p. D. cl., $1.50.

The fundamental propositions of the religion of man, under which the author means Christianity, are given and the results summed up as superstition; a priesthood; bigotry; persecution; suppression of knowledge; and the arrogance of infallibility. The fundamental scientific proposition that man was evolved from the lowest form of being is then stated, and the results stated to be nobility of life; highest ideal aspiration; all-embracing charity and philanthropy; earnest endeavor to actualize the ideal perfect life, etc. The author puts many of the old arguments in a fresh way.

Under the nursery lamp: songs about the little ones. N. Y., A. D. F. Randolph & Co., 1890. c. 3-87 p. S. cl., 75 c.

In a pretty blue cover; a collection of poems from various sources about the little ones.

United States. The McKinley tariff act: der englische text mit deutsches übersetzung, angabe der bisherigen zollsätze und alphabet. register der artikel, englisch u. deutsch; mit anhang- das zollverwaltungs. Gesetz (The McKinley customs administrative act.) N. Y., E. Steiger Co., [1890.] c. 113 p. D. pap., 50 c.

Upton, Mrs. Harriet Taylor. Our early presidents, their wives and children, from Washington to Jackson. Bost., D. Lothrop Co., [1890.] c. 7-395 p. por. and il. O. cl., $4.

The seven Presidents whose families the author photographs in this volume are known as the "historic Presidents," and were those concerned in the early making of the American republic. Family letters of the various Presidential households, their private records and diaries, their personal recollections and researches, have furnished the most of the material. The many portraits and illustrations are directly from the original paintings and family relics.

Villari, Pasquale. The life and times of Girolamo Savonarola; tr. by Linda Villari. New cheaper ed. rev. and enl. N. Y., Scribner & Welford, 1890. 2 v., por. and il. 8°, cl., $6.

Vincent, J: H., (Bp.) A study in pedagogy for people who are not professional teachers. N. Y., Wilbur B. Ketcham, [1890.] c. 73 p. D. cl., 60 c.

This well-known Bishop of the Methodist Church addresses his ideas in a plain, frank way to fathers, mothers, grandfathers, grandmothers, brothers, sisters, servants, preachers, clerks, editors, merchants, school-teachers, bill-posters and newsboys, "a multitude who help in never so slight a way to make public sentiment" in favor of true popular education and the best means of furthering it.

Vincent, J: H., (Bp.) Studies in young life: a series of word-pictures and practical papers. N. Y., Funk & Wagnalls, 1890. c. 274 p. D. cl., $1.25.

Forty-one of these word-pictures offer all kinds of practical advice in the form of short sermons. The Bishop thoroughly understands the peculiar trials and temptations of young hearts and minds. He thinks they should be taught to study, grapple and control circumstances. They must wait for experience to give wisdom and for years to mature, but they must wait actively, and must be made to realize that every one is in a large sense the arbiter of his own destiny.

Wagner, R: Richard Wagner's letters to his Dresden friends. Theodore Uhlig, Wilhelm Fischer and Ferdinand Heine; tr. into English with a preface by J. S. Shedlock. N. Y., Scribner & Welford, 1890. 8°, cl., $3.50.

Webb, Mrs. Pomponia; or, the gospel in Cæsar's household. N. Y. and Chic., Fleming H. Revell, 1890. 384 p. il. 12°. cl., $1.

Wollstonecraft, Mary. A vindication of the rights of woman; with strictures on political and other subjects. New ed., with introd. by Mrs. H: Fawcett. N. Y., Scribner & Welford, 1890. 8°, cl., $2.

Wood, Jerome Ja. The wilderness and the rose: a story of Michigan. Hudson, Mich., Wood Book Co., 1890. c. 133 p. D. cl., $1.

Michigan life half a century ago is the subject; scenes and incidents of pioneer life are depicted in the narrative.

The Publishers' Weekly.

FOUNDED BY F. LEYPOLDT.

DECEMBER 13, 1890.

"Every man is a debtor to his profession, from the which, as men do of course seek to receive countenance and profit, so ought they of duty to endeavor themselves by way of amends to be a help thereto."—LORD BACON.

A PLEA FOR A COMPLETE RECORD OF BOOKS.

THE publication of the new volume of the American Catalogue has been delayed for several months, at considerable sacrifice, because of the omissions that were found in the information sent by publishers, many of whom, although sending most of their books for record in the PUBLISHERS' WEEKLY, had omitted so many titles or bibliographical details that to fill the gaps required indefinite correspondence and caused very great delay. The result has been so serious that we could not undertake, in another issue of the "American Catalogue"—namely, that for 1890-1895—to repeat these expensive delays. The same is true of the "Annual Catalogue," as after all our endeavors through the year to make our records complete, we have each year found that many publishers have omitted a few titles, and some publishers a great many titles, so that our Supplementary List, which is at best but a short-title index, becomes a very serious burden.

As the "Annual Catalogue" for 1890, which will be put to press promptly on the close of the year, will be the continuation of the new volume of the "American Catalogue," it is doubly important that this year's records should be complete. We therefore ask publishers to look over the Order Lists in the PUBLISHERS' WEEKLY of the year, or their own records of books sent, and to mail us at once any omitted titles of books published within 1890, so that we can get them into the regular issues of the PUBLISHERS' WEEKLY during the month of December. After having given this opportunity, we cannot undertake to continue the system of Supplementary Lists on which we have hitherto been compelled to fall back. A circular letter to this effect has been mailed to the publishing trade, and we hope they will give their best and most prompt attention to the matter.

THE outcome of the suits instituted by the Messrs. Black, of Edinburgh, against the reprinters of the "Encyclopædia Britannica" and their agents, will be watched with great interest. Whether they be successful or not their movement will be satisfactory if it tends to render uncertain and unprofitable the endeavors of a certain class of people to foist wares upon the public under false pretences. That is what an agent of the alleged reprint attempts to do when he represents a number of volumes to be a reprint of the ninth edition of the "Encyclopædia Britannica," which is such only in part. This was the grievance also against the manufacturers of the photographed edition of the Webster's Dictionary of 1847, when they attempted placing it with the intention of misleading the public into the belief that it was a reprint of the unabridged edition of a later date. It is already settled that it is not safe for the American reprinter to reprint the Encyclopædia Britannica: and, as the Times truly says, "it is very much to be hoped that the present suit may result in showing that it is equally unsafe for him to pretend that he is reprinting it and not to reprint it. In any case the Messrs. Black deserve the thanks of all lovers of justice and decency for defending their rights in such a way as to make pirating their books a troublesome and uncomfortable industry."

THE Copyright bill, it is feared, may have to rest for a little while before it can be brought before the Senate. It was hoped that the bill could be called up at once, but the open feud which has broken out in the Senate over party politics makes the calling up of a peaceful bill improbable for the moment. It remains upon the calendar in its regular place, and awaits its turn: and when Senator Platt sees the opportunity he will call it up, and will probably be able to dispose of it without much difficulty. The friends of the bill ought not, however, to remit efforts for its early and successful consideration.

THE ENCYCLOPÆDIA BRITANNICA SUITS.

BLACK et al. vs. EHRICH et al.

JUDGE WALLACE, in the United States Circuit Court held in New York City on December 10, heard arguments in the suit of Adam and Charles Black, of Edinburgh, against Samuel W. and Julius S. Ehrich, of New York. The suit is one of a series instituted by the Blacks to secure an injunction restraining "the fraudulent use by the defendants of the designation 'Encyclopædia Britannica, Ninth Edition,' and other acts alleged to constitute an unfair competition in business;" in other words, to protect the last edition of the "Encyclopædia Britannica" on common-law grounds. It is the logical corollary of the suit (James T. Black et al. vs. The Henry G. Allen Company, etc.) tried in the same court in July of this year by Judge Shipman. The latter, it will be remembered, in granting the injunction prayed for, held that defendants' publication was an infringement of the complainants' copyrights, and declared that "if the author has a valid copyright, it is valid against any unpermitted reprint of his book; and the fact that his book is bound up in a volume with fifty other books, each of which is open to the public, is immaterial."

Pending an appeal by the Allen Company from this decision to the Supreme Court at Washington, the Blacks proceeded to take action against other assailants of their rights. Ehrich Brothers are not the publishers of the edition upon which the action is brought, but are made the defendants to the suit as being the agents in this city of the actual publishers, R. S. Peale & Co., of Chicago. Any judgment which may be obtained by the complainants in this suit will be promptly brought to bear upon the Chicago house and others of its agents.

In the original bill of complaint filed in July last by Mr. Rowland Cox, attorney for plaintiffs, in the action against the Ehrichs, the complainants expressly waived any penalties to which the copyright statutes might entitle them, claiming only that "the use of said words ['Encyclopædia Britannica, Ninth Edition'] in the form and manner practised by the complainants, causing the spurious to appear to be the original edition, will be restrained by a court of equity." In this form, however, the suit did not come to trial. R. S. Peale & Co. deemed it advisable to shun the probable consequences of Judge Shipman's ruling, and before publishing the volumes which contained any American copyrights, they substituted other articles and maps, written and copyrighted in this country, these having been ingeniously fitted so as exactly to fill the vacant spaces created by the omissions of the original copyrights. A supplemental bill of complaint was therefore filed on Oct. 30, bringing in the additional ground of action alleged therein, that "each original copyrighted article was an inseparable part of the 'Encyclopædia Britannica, Ninth Edition,'" and that the defendants were delivering under this title a spurious imitation, lacking these integral parts, and containing other and different articles.

Mr. Cox recited these facts to Judge Wallace and stated as the charge of his clients "that the defendants, with knowledge of the reputation of complainants' work, and the great demand existing for the same, and intending to divert to themselves the profits which of right pertain to complainants' business, had entered into a scheme to defraud complainants, whereby complainants' rights existing at common law had been violated."

Reviewing the affidavits submitted by him in the moving papers, Mr. Cox first called the Court's attention to the original labor given by the complainants to the production of this work. He said:

"The complainants' business, the good-will of which they are seeking to protect, is of great magnitude and value. It began in 1875 and continued until 1889, when the last volume was published. To lay down the first copy of the book cost the enormous sum of $1,150,000. This business has been successfully established; in the United States 40,000 copies have been placed and a large and permanent demand has been created.

"The complainants' business is one which as a matter of public policy, a court of equity should protect. Their series has been a benefit to the civilized world; its far-reaching influence for good, which must continue for many years, cannot be estimated.

"The 'Encyclopædia Britannica, Ninth Edition,' thus created by complainants, consists in part of copyrights owned by the complainants. The preservation of the integrity of the name of complainants' work is of essential importance to them in the transaction of their business. To destroy its significance is to destroy the business; to impair its meaning is, pro tanto, to impair the reputation and demand for the book.

"The papers show, or it is deducible therefrom, that 'the defendants have attempted to supplant complainants in the market by disposing of their goods on the strength of complainant's reputation' (35 Fed. Rep., 151). The defendants' book was so made that it showed nowhere that it was their book. It was held out to be in every way the same as the original, and was offered at one-third the price of the original. The statements concerning it in advertisements were baldly untrue. After the enterprise had been set in motion the simulated book was offered as the 'Encyclopædia Britannica, Ninth Edition,' with the statement that for the copyrights of the true Britannica other articles by other authors would be substituted.

"On these facts, we submit that we have a standing in this court to ask that the untruthful use of the designation 'Encyclopædia Britannica, Ninth Edition' be restrained; and we think that our copyrights, the validity of which is tacitly admitted, give us, during the period for which they have been granted, the exclusive right to make use of the designation 'Encyclopædia Britannica, Ninth Edition.'

"It was said by this Court in an important case: 'It is unnecessary for present purposes to consider whether the complainant has a valid trade-mark or can have a technical trade-mark in the name "St. Louis." It is sufficient that it was lawful for complainant to use that name to designate its property; that by so doing it has acquired a trade which is valuable to it; and that the defendant's acts are fraudulent and create a dishonest competition detrimental to the complainant.' (Anheuser-Bush Brewing Ass'n vs. Piza, 24 Fed. Rep., 150.)

"It was very recently said by the Supreme Judicial Court of Massachusetts, in the case of Chadwick vs. Covell: 'When the common law developed the doctrine of trade-marks and trade-names, it was not creating a property in advertisements more absolute than it would have allowed the author of "Paradise Lost;" but the meaning was to prevent one man from palming off his goods as another's, from getting another's business or injuring his reputation by unfair means, and, perhaps, from defrauding the public.' (23 N. E. Rep., 1069.)

"The question to be determined in the present instance is whether these defendants are getting the complainants' business by unfair means. It is, of course, not enough that the defendants are stating what is untrue. There must be 'The false representation of facts which tends to mislead the public and divert custom from one to the other' (27 Fed. Rep., 22). The act of the defendant is not actionable, 'although designed to alienate patronage,' if there are 'no deceitful or misleading statement,' (ibid.). In other words, the essential factors are: (1) an intent specifically to reach and divert, nakedly stated, to steal the patronage of the complainant; and (2) the false representation of facts which tend to mislead the public, whereby they purchase defendants' article, believing it to be that to which complainant has given reputation.

"In the present instance all the necessary factors are present. There is an intent specifically to trespass upon the good-will of complainants' business; to alienate and divert the custom, patronage and demand which are parts of that good-will ; and this is attempted to be done by 'the false representation of facts which tend to mislead the public,' and to cause intending purchasers to take defendants' book, believing it to be complainants' book."

Mr. Cox described the defendants' circulars in which they announced the undertaking of this reprint, and which said, among other things, "' We have recently concluded arrangements with the publishers of the 'Encyclopædia Britannica,' whereby we are enabled to offer you the entire set of twenty-five volumes at the ridiculously low price of $36.60.'

"There was nothing in this announcement which was not calculated to lead an intending purchaser of the 'Encyclopædia' to believe that the book here mentioned was complainants' work. Complainants were in the market offering their excellent volumes at a total price of about $125 for the entire set. The defendants came in and underbid them, saying, 'Here is the same thing, with all the illustrations, maps, plates, etc., which we offer you at the ridiculously low price of $36.60.'

"The vice of this original announcement is not lessened when, in the tenth volume of the series, the defendants publish a title page bearing the legend, 'R. S. Peale Reprint.' The term 'reprint' is a misnomer. The tenth volume is not a reprint of the tenth volume of the 'Encyclopædia Britannica, Ninth Edition ;' it is very much like it, but to say that it is a reprint is to state what is untrue.

"Will it be said that a book from which the Sermon on the Mount has been omitted is the New Testament? There would be an omission of only a few pages, but the individuality of the book would be greatly affected. The Peales omit twelve per cent. of the twenty third volume of the Encyclopædia articles on the United States by men of the highest attainments, and pad the book they have cut with substituted matter of their own, written by who shall say whom? Their book is 'Peale's Encyclopædia.'"

The relation of book-titles to trade-marks was then discussed at some length, Mr. Cox claiming that while "the name of a book is never a trade-mark, but always a descriptive term, the only reason why it is not always publici juris is that the copyright confers the exclusive right to produce the thing which the name describes. The name of a copyrighted book is purely descriptive in its character, but because the owner of the copyright owns the source of supply he has an exclusive right to use it. But he has not such an exclusive right that he can prevent absolutely the use of the name of his book for purposes of description. It is only when the use amounts to a misleading representation as to the book in connection with which it is employed that the law will interfere. For instance, assuming that the designation 'Encyclopædia Britannica, Ninth Edition' is protected by copyright, it would be perfectly legitimate for the publishers of what we may designate 'Peale's Encyclopædia' to state upon the title-page of their book that it was 'made up largely of articles and maps from the "Encyclopædia Britannica,"' and 'better than "Chambers' Cyclopædia."' Any such statement, if set in honest type, would be legitimate.

"Another established doctrine concerning the question of infringement of trade names has been evolved. It is pointedly illustrated in the case of Reid vs. Richardson, 45 L. T. R., N. S., 54, known as the 'Dogs-Head Beer' case. It was stated at an early date in the House of Lords, in Johnston vs. Ewing, L. R. 7 App. Cas. 219, 232, as follows: 'But no man, however honest his personal intentions, has a right to adopt and use so much of his rival's established trade-mark as will enable any dishonest trader, into whose hands his own goods may come, to sell them as the goods of his rival (37 Fed. Rep., 363). It has recently been applied in Brown & Co. vs. Stearns, 37 Fed. Rep., 363.'

Mr. Cox concluded his argument with the following point, fully argued :

"But if the copyrights are laid out of sight there remains an equitable principle which entitles the complainants to protection. The collection of books, maps, etc., which they have made, is, as a collection, the product of their thought and labor. There is no doubt that their reputation is inseparably connected and bound up with the work of which they are the publishers. It was recently said in this court, concerning a collection which was in every way inferior to that which is here involved : 'There is work in these publications aside from the ideas and conceptions. Johnson was not the writer of the articles, nor the designer of the pictures composing the book, but he brought them out in this form' (21 Fed. Rep., 189)."

"This is our case," said Mr. Cox; "the Peales tear our book apart, turn their piratical cameras upon its pages, take of its contents what they think they dare, add something of their own fabrication, and then steal our name, and boldly begin the stealing of our trade."

Mr. Augustus T. Gurlitz, attorney for the defendants, based his arguments chiefly upon well-known facts in the history of the "Encyclopædia Britannica" and its sale in this country. "The complainants," he said, "have made statements which would lead your Honor to believe that this encyclopædia has always been known as their book. On the contrary, eight other editions have been published by other firms during the last 100 years. All of these used the same title, 'Encyclopædia Britannica.'

"The book put in evidence by the complainants is not the original edition. It is the Scribner reprint. It nowhere bears a mark indicating that this book is published by the complainants, the Blacks."

Mr. Gurlitz dwelt at length upon the Stoddard reprint of the Encyclopædia, which was begun in 1875, and upon which, as is well known, Judge Butler in Philadelphia dismissed a motion for an injunction. "Notwithstanding this failure to repress competition," said counsel for the defence, "the complainants have substantially claimed that their rights to the American sales have never been contested. I shall later discuss the question of the complainants' laches more fully.

"In 1875, when the Stoddard reprint was begun, Little, Brown & Co., of Boston, the only agents in this country for the real 'Edinburgh Edition,' wrote to the Stoddards, saying in substance : 'We do not dispute your right to republish the Encyclopædia, but if you continue your work we will block your game by having American copyrights inserted in the succeeding volumes.'

"In the suit against the Stoddards, Judge Butler dismissed the motion for an injunction, holding that, if granted, it would work more harm to the defendants than good to the complainants."

Mr. Gurlitz's argument was continued after the recess, when an hour was given to the discussion of technical points in the Stoddard case. The case will be resumed some time in January.

INTERNATIONAL COPYRIGHT MATTERS.

THE AUTHORS' CLUB TAKES ACTION.

At the regular meeting of the Authors' Club on the evening of December 4 the Executive Committee presented the following, which were unanimously adopted by the club:

Resolved, That the Authors' Club recognizes in the passage of the International Copyright bill by the United States House of Representatives a gratifying advance in the application of those principles of universal honesty upon which a true civilization depends.

Resolved, That we express our thanks to those members of Congress and others whose untiring and enlightened efforts have brought about this result.

There was a large attendance at the meeting.

PROVISION FOR SIMULTANEOUS PUBLICATION—A CRITICISM AND A REPLY.

MONCURE D. CONWAY, in a letter to the N. Y. Times, December 6, took exception to the provision that "no foreign author shall enjoy copyright unless his work be published here simultaneously with its publication in his own country," because he considered it a virtual incorporation of piracy.

"This demand for simultaneous publication," he said, "is also unfair to the American author. It legalizes the piracy of all foreign books which American publishers have declined to pay for, or have offered so little for that their authors will not take the trouble to copyright them here. It would tempt publishers to return to foreign authors, as if declined, manuscripts secretly copied, to be published under other imprints and in other cities. Such a provision would pretty surely be followed by the formation of 'rings' to prevent fair payments for foreign works, with 'corners' raising their price on a pretext of authors' compensations never made. The American market will be stocked with unpaid and underpaid productions with which the American author will be unable as now to compete. And at the same time we shall be deprived of the satisfaction of branding as piracy that which would be established as copyright law."

Dr. Edward Eggleston, in the Times for December 7, took up the matter, suggesting that as "the feature which Mr. Conway criticises was in the Chace bill," Mr. Conway might have suggested a revision of it at any time in the past three years. "He might have criticised it among his friends in the Copyright League. He has waited until the bill is in the full tide of success, and until its enemies are more than half beaten, to criticise publicly a detail which was carefully debated at the time of the introduction of the Chace bill three years ago. No more effective method of aiding the enemy can now be devised than that of finding fault at the last moment with the details of a bill which is the outcome of a complicated adjustment of interests to secure action in favor of a great reform."

This was followed by another letter from Mr. Conway on the 10th, in which he deprecated the idea that his action was inimical to the bill, concluding as follows: "If the exposure in your columns of this wrong should injure the bill marred by it, I should regret it, having concluded that it is more likely to be redressed after its fruits are tasted. But should such injury result, fair-minded readers will judge whether it be justly attributable to those who framed the wrong or those who pointed it out. I have never heard or read even an attempted defence of the clause criticised. Senator Chace did not defend it; the Secretary of the Copyright League, in our Athenæum controversy, did not defend it; Dr. Eggleston does not. When 'the outcome of a complicated adjustment of interests' is something morally indefensible, is it to be expected that no mirror will be held before it? It is no defence to smash the mirror."

To the foregoing the Times for December 11 contained the following reply:

To the Editor of the New York Times:

In response to Mr. Conway's letter in your paper of to-day it is necessary to say, briefly:

1. That the fact of Mr. Conway's previous letter having been written before the passage of the Copyright bill in the House only shows that its tendency was more mischievous than we had supposed. If Mr. Conway were, indeed, "the plaintiff's attorney," acting for certain English publishers and paper-makers, the Scotch printers, the photographic pirates, or any other opponents of the measure, he could hardly have contrived to give the supporters of international copyright more trouble than he has since this contest began.

2. That we have no time in the thick of the fight to debate the "simultaneous" clause with Mr. Conway. It is enough to say that the whole question which Mr. Conway raises was fully considered in the council of the Authors' Copyright League. Although it is a limitation on ideal copyright, its retention was deemed essential to the passage of the bill. The time for an ideal copyright law has not yet arrived in any nation under heaven. Does Mr. Conway know that the very clause to which he objects is at least as favorable to English authors as are the provisions of the law of their own country?

3. The policy of objecting to certain features of the bill is precisely that adopted by Arnoux, Ritch & Woodford, the paid counsel of its opponents; by Payson, the bold defender of book piracy, and by all who wish to prolong the present lawless conditions. Mr. Conway certainly is not to be ranked with these, but, as a man of recognized standing in literature, he is capable of doing more harm.

EDWARD EGGLESTON.

GEORGE HAVEN PUTNAM.

NEW YORK, Wednesday, December 10, 1889.

THAT "CERTAIN PROFESSION."

W. H. McElroy, in the N. Y. Tribune.

Mr. Peters, of Kansas, expressed his opposition to the character of legislation involved in the bill. It was demanded only by a few representatives of a certain profession—(Extract from the report of the Congressional debate on the Copyright bill.)

Peters, you ought to have called the roll
Of that "certain profession"—'pon my soul;
You'd have killed the bill and done yourself proud
Had you called the roll and called it loud!

O Peters, it should have occurred to you
That "certain profession" to up and review;
Your judgment, Peters, was clearly erring,
You'd have certainly killed it dead as a berring!

O Peters, why didn't you call the roll?
The deed would have echoed from pole to pole.
Ah, never again, there's reason to fear,
Will you have such a chance to boom your career!

O Peters of Kansas, your fame is stalled,
Just think of the names you might have called;
Pray, just allow us to mention a few,
As quite at random they rise to view.

There's MOSES and Dickens and Burns and Paul,
And Cæsar—who carried wormwood to Gaul—
And Homer and Horace and Mrs. Stowe,
And Fielding and Milton and Edgar Poe.

And Daniel Webster—rhetorical very—
You remember he wrote the dictionary?
Macaulay, whose talk-stream had no dam,
Cervantes, Bacon and dear Charles Lamb.

And Gray—his Elegy p'rhaps you've seen—
Tom Brown and Anna Katharine Greene,
Kirk White, oft plunged in the blues, alack!
And William, and also Ivory Black.

And Shakespeare, a writer of readable plays—
Why don't you glance over them, some of these days?
And Washington Irving and Doctor Nott,
And Beecher and Curtis and Walter Scott.

And Emerson, Bancroft and Laurence Sterne,
And Smiths such a plenty wherever you turn,
And Thomas Carlyle, good hater of cant,
And Gilder, the favorite Century plant.

And Molière, Chaucer and Doctor Hodge,
Thackeray, Gladstone and Mary Dodge,
And Artemus Ward—how he made us laugh!—
And Mary E. Wilkins and Philip Schaff.

And Whitman—who's rather too fond of mud—
And Lowell and Holmes and Sylvester Judd,
And Fenimore Cooper, e'er sketching the red man,
And Thomas à Kempis and E. C. Stedman.

Pope—whose intimates called him Aleck—
The Brownings, Bunner and Fitz Greene Halleck,
And Plutarch—no wonder he long survives—
There was never a cat had so many lives.

And the man who was mashed on martyrs—Fox,
And Nathaniel Hawthorne and Sunset Cox,
And Watts—such a genius for psalms and hymns—
And Dante and Howells and Gilmore Simms.

And Byron, of critics proudly defiant,
And Plato and Motley and William C. Bryant,
And old Munchausen—firm wedded to truth—
And Goethe and Aldrich and Mary Booth.

And Swinburne, a master of intricate rhyme,
Bret Harte and Hume and Irenæus Prime,
And Tennyson, happy father of "Maud,"
And Mrs. Elizabeth Stuart Phelps Ward.

And Chatterton—ah, what a wonderful stripling!—
And Hale, Lindley Murray and Rudyard Kipling,
And Prescott and Shelley, who worshipped the lark,
And Winter, the Stoddards and Mungo Park.

And Wendell Phillips and Jeremiah,
And Craddock, Tom Moore, and Child (L. Maria),
And Roosevelt, sketcher of Western ranch,
And Franklin and Kingsley and Christopher Cranch.

The Kings, Charles Clarence and Thomas Starr,
The Jameses, Henry and G. P. R.,
The Stanleys, Africa's lord and the Dean,
The Fields, Kate, Henry and gay Eugene.

And Saxe, Clark Russell, that fluent sailor,
And Walter Besant and Bayard Taylor,
And Marion Crawford and Richard Baxter,
Montaigne and Bunyan and Celia Thaxter.

Herodotus, Alcott, the father and daughter,
And Keats who objected to names writ in water,
And Gibbon and Warner, joking so slyly,
And Xenophon, Arnold and Whitcomb Riley.

And William Wordsworth and William Nye,
And Drake—how he sang of our flag in the sky!—
And Sidney and Coleridge and Colonel Hay,
And Whittier, Dryden, and Judge Tourgée.

And the poet who's written of "Hiawatha"—
A highly respectable Cambridge author—
His name shall abide to the end of time,
But oh, such a difficult name to rhyme!

This list, O Peters of Kansas, aims
Just to give you some random sample names;
Just to sort o' teach you the standing, you know,
Of a "certain profession" here below.

O Peters, your lusty, promising State
Is surely a prey to untoward fate.
She used to be bleeding, and oh—so ill
You treat her—she's certainly bleeding still!

O Peters, 'tis such an unfilial deed
To give your mother occasion to bleed!
When down on a "certain profession" you bore,
She must have been simply bathed in gore!

O Peters, Peters, forbear, forbear,
Such views of a "certain profession" to air!
The profession don't care a marquee sou;
But, Peters, they're awfully rough on you!

ANNUAL MEETING OF THE BROTHERHOOD OF COMMERCIAL TRAVELLERS.

THE annual meeting of the B. C. T. took place at the Hotel Marlborough, New York, on the evening of the 3d inst. The report of the Treasurer, Mr. Eckstein, showed a balance on hand of $68.18; the receipts having been $497.52, the expenditures, $429.34. The President, Mr. J. F. Hitchcock, in an address, remembered feelingly the names of E. C. Swayne and R. E. Bennett, the two members whom the Association lost by death during the year.

Among the amendments and alterations of the constitution adopted was the one abolishing the old annual fee, and substituting therefor an initiation fee of $1, and an annual fee of $2. This will leave members free to participate in the banquet or not, the contributions to that having so far been obligatory. The measure goes into effect at once.

A majority voted in favor of a banquet to be held this month.

The following members were appointed to serve on the various committees:

Committee of Arrangements—John H. Black, chairman; Louis Rhode, Frank W. Bailey, John A. McQuillen.

Reception Committee—T. J. Cagney, chairman; I. M. Loughhead and William B. Walker.

Souvenir Committee—William J. Kelly, chairman, and Charles S. Plummer.

Menu Committee—Samuel Gabriel, chairman, and Samuel Garre.

At the election of officers, the following were elected: President, John A. McQuillen; Vice-President, Trabue Van Culin; Secretary, John Hovenden; Treasurer, Samuel Eckstein; Trustees, J. Val. Koch and James T. Watkins.

The new officers will assume authority January 1, instead of immediately, as heretofore, a change in the by-laws providing for the new order.

PARAGRAMS FOR BIBLIOPELTS.

Halkett Lord, in The Bookmart.

WHAT is binding? Few things. One certainly is not. A bookbinder's promise is never binding.

The "forwarding" of most modern work looks as though it had been done by—an Express Company.

In the bookbinding, as in the agricultural implement trade, binders and reapers are in indissoluble partnership.

Cataloguers are too much addicted to ascribing bindings to Roger Payne. Take notice. True happiness is exemption from Payne.

In what material should you bind a book as a present for your best girl? In the bonds of matrimony. You'll find them pretty binding.

It is a trade slang phrase to speak of a book's binding as its "jacket." Looking to the garish quality of most modern work a better word would be "blazer."

Why fly-leaves? Is it because they so often take to themselves wings, and fly?

Don't send your books to Paris to be bound. Encourage home industry. Be patriotic. Emulate the noble sportsman who said to his bookseller, "Have it bound in Russia! No, sir! Not much! I want my books bound in New York."

Few books one can with patience read
The modern press affords,
Calf nor morocco do they need;
Their rightful garb is "boreds."

Law-books ought to be bound in shark's skin.

"Would you like this book half-bound, madam?" said the obliging bibliopole to the lady from Chicago. "For the land's sake, man!" she smartly replied, "what should I want with a book half bound? Have it finished."

By the way. Too much attention is paid nowadays to the "finishing" of books, to the neglect of the "forwarding." The worse the binder the more likely he is to "finish" your book for you.

As to the proper way of treating the erotic novel now in vogue—muslin's in order.

"Divinity calf" is a term we often see. Divinity calf is surely a "silk-stocking" binding.

There are a few books that are bound to be read; but there are many more that are bound so that they cannot be read.

I lent a book: he lost my book:
I then declined to lend,
My company he then forsook:
I lost both book and friend.

"Go a borrowing—go a sorrowing." Bosh. Your borrower don't sorrow. Sorry a sorrow. An apropos proverb would be, "Book lending is heart reading."

CHARLES EDWARD MUDIE.

THE portrait printed herewith, though late, will no doubt be of interest, representing as it does the features of a man whose influence in English literature was wider and more potent than that of any one of his contemporaries. By energy and foresight he built up an institution which is unique of its kind; and which has unquestionably been the means of making many of the best books of the century known to the public, particularly to the public of London. "He had," says the editor of the London Publishers' Circular, "not only a fine sense of what is good in literature, but the generosity to go out of his way to help the circulation of books which commended themselves to his judgment, but which were not often asked for. It was not simply the book that was in demand—the fashionable novel, the thrilling tale of adventure—that he supplied; he took pains to bring under the notice of his subscribers literature of the sterner and more thoughtful kind that might be supposed to influence life and conduct. While his position as a distributor rendered it imperative that he should keep a stock of popular literature, he never willingly circulated what was trashy, nor under any circumstances, if he could help it, what was immoral or irreligious in tendency. He gave umbrage sometimes, as men of independent judgment must; but he adhered to his principle—invariably, as will now be acknowledged, to the advantage of his patrons.

"One of the most pleasing traits of his character was his readiness to help young authors of merit who experienced difficulty in getting well before the public. In a quiet, unostentatious way he befriended more than one eminent writer of the past; nor do we doubt that some popular writers of to-day could tell interesting tales of the early assistance they received from 'Mudie.' Mr.

CHARLES EDWARD MUDIE.

Mudie's influence does not die with him. The great institution which he established remains to carry out his ideals in the new time. It was said of Napoleon that he was 'not a man, but a system.' Mr. Mudie also may be said to have been a system—and that survives. The library will not be affected by the death of its founder. For several years past the active management has devolved upon Mr. Arthur Mudie, who fitly takes his father's place."

THE STATUS OF FICTION IN CHINA.

THE North China Herald, of Shanghai, discussing Chinese notions about novels, says that the writing of this class of literature began in the thirteenth century, and continued to be a favorite occupation of Chinese writers for about three centuries. After this it was felt that enough had been provided, and the production almost ceased. The authors concealed their names. The moral teaching of the Confucian school was too powerful for those who loved to give rein to their imagination in novel and play-writing to be able to venture on publicity. It was never with the consent of the always dominant moral philosophers that novels grew to the position of influence they now possess in China.

This hostility has by no means ceased. Quite lately there appeared in a Chinese newspaper a paper written by an anonymous Confucianist against novels. He is deeply impressed with the need of continuing the crusade against licentious literature and romances commenced by one Chien during the last century, when he founded a school in Soochow for the promotion of the healthy study of the classical books. He held that novels are now so prevalent that they amount to a fourth estate in the realm of teaching; the Confucian, Buddhist and Taoist literatures being the first, second and third. But instead of inculcating ture they lead men into vice. Every one reads them or hears them read, and it may be questioned whether the moral influence for evil of Chinese works of imagination is, he says, not greater than that of the books of the three religions for good. They suggest to young men that they should lead a licentious life, and represent killing a man as a noble action. To read of these things produces disastrous results on public morality. The many cases of crime in the courts, and the number of those who adopt a robber's career, are due to the effect of Chinese novel literature.

This author was followed by Shih, who set the example of establishing a paper-burning urn in his family court. Into this urn went all novels and every sort of vicious literature on which he could lay hands, and especially the blocks from which they were printed. For these he made wide search, in the hope of extinguishing the evil at its source. In order to find money to buy them up, he first used his spare funds, and then sold his clothing, and even his wife's ornaments, in order that the work of destruction might be more complete. Others of influence in Soochow followed these examples, they created a public opinion, and the consequence was that representatives of sixty-five of the most respectable firms went together to the city temple, burnt incense, and made a vow not to engage in the trade in immoral books. An office was opened in the Confucian temple of the magistracy for buying up the blocks of all immoral books, including novels. There was an immense destruction of this class of literature in the city of Soochow, so that it became hard to meet with vicious publications. This was, however, nearly half a century ago, and the evil rose again. Twenty-five years ago the then governor of the district issued a new proclamation reiterating the order prohibiting immoral publications. At the present time there is a flood of books with a bad influence. Such reading as they furnish has more effect in leading young minds wrong, says the Confucianist writer, than all the influence on the side of right or the teaching of the sages. "The foreign reader of Chinese books of an imaginative kind cannot condemn them indiscriminately, because they contain beautiful characters, both of men and women, which exhibit an admirable idea of bravery filial piety, purity of life, loyalty and other noble qualities. But there can be no doubt of the bad influence of many of the native books which familiarize the minds of the young with scenes of vice, and hold up successful crime to sympathetic admiration. It must also be remembered that whatever evil there may be in the actual life of the Chinese, they have among them the firm friends of morality. The national conscience and the national literature alike testify with unflinching voice to the duty of every one to be moral, just and humane."

"PICK-UPS."

AN APPRECIATIVE CRITIC.—Clarice: "Oh, Mr. Pennington, there is one thing I do so like about your novels." Mr. Pennington (much pleased): "Yes? and what is that?" Clarice: "They are printed in such clear type."—Puck.

ON THE STEPS OF THE LIBRARY.—Grind: "Hello, Billy, what book have you got?" Billy Lowstand, '93: "Why, I've just got a new book written about our class, called 'Ninety-three,' by a chap called Hugo."—Yale Record.

OBITUARY.

ALFRED L. DENNIS, a prominent resident of Newark, died on the 8th inst. from pleurisy, in the seventy-third year of his age. He was born in Newton, Sussex County, N. J., and at the age of thirteen years removed to Newark, where he found employment for a short time as a grocer's clerk. He soon after entered the employ of William Tuttle, who kept a bookstore at Broad and Academy Streets, and learned there the trade of bookbinding. He mastered every detail of the business and gradually extended his knowledge of the book trade. Before he was of age he proposed to Mr. Tuttle that he should buy out the book business and run it on his own account. He said that he had no capital, but he felt certain that he could soon repay his employer. A bargain was finally made, and the new book-dealer immediately effected a great change in the character of his stock on hand. The "dead stock" was sent to New York auction rooms and disposed of, and the new proprietor introduced the custom of filling orders for such merchandise as his patrons might want. Several times a week he would go to New York City for such goods as had been ordered, and everything he did was characterized by promptness and despatch. This was the beginning of his career. His business soon grew to very large proportions, and his credit stood very high. He not only met his engagements with his old employer, but soon after the death of the latter, which occurred a few years later, Mr. Dennis purchased the property on which the old store was located.

While serving his apprenticeship as a book-binder Mr. Dennis had acquired a considerable knowledge of the different grades of binders' skins. Soon after his other business enterprises had been well established, Mr. Dennis began the importation of partially finished sheep skins from England, completing the process of preparing them for use, and then selling them to binders. Some of the largest publishing houses, with manufacturing establishments of their own, were among his customers. So important did this interest become that Mr. Dennis was invited to join the large importing firm of Abraham Bell & Co., in New York. This was in 1849. In 1861 Mr. Dennis retired from the book business in this city, disposing of his interest to his brother, Martin R. Dennis, with whom he had been associated in the business for a number of years.

He was connected as trustee, director or active member, with a number of public institutions. At one time he acted as President of the United Railroads and Canal Company of New Jersey, and later as President of the Jersey City Ferry Company.

In 1866 Mr. Dennis determined to aid in the founding of a public library at Newton, the place of his birth, and pledged $25,000, subject to certain conditions. Numerous private subscriptions increased the sum, the work was completed, and the library building dedicated in 1872.

In 1841 Mr. Dennis married Eliza, a daughter of Major James Shepard, of Norfolk, Conn. There were five children—Dr. Fred. Dennis, S. S. Dennis, Warren E. Dennis, Rev. Dr. James S. Dennis and Mrs. Eliza Bell. A number of years ago Mrs. Dennis died, and some years later Mr. Dennis was married to the widow of Cummins O. Cooper, of Hoonton. It is estimated that Mr. Dennis' estate will amount to several millions in value.

OLD BOOK CHAT.

IN Mr. Murray's office, in Albemarle Street, London, stands a row of thin books containing proof sheets and successive "revises" of Byron's works as they passed through the press, with the poet's corrections in his own hand. A writer who has seen them says the alterations made in the original text "are sometimes considerable, and in all cases the poet seems to have been fastidious in his choice of words as well as in the punctuation of his verses." The well known passages in the "Glaour," "He who hath bent him o'er the dead," containing

"Before decay's effacing fingers
Have swept the lines where beauty lingers," are written on the margin of a proof-sheet, and were not in the "copy" as sent to the printers.

THE house of Didot has sold its fonds de librairie, that is, its stock of plates, valued at 1,000,000*fr.*, to jobbers at Lille for 90,000*fr.* Its most valuable books are included, such as the Lacroix and Séré books, on art, costume and manners, and the effect will be to reduce considerably their market value. The moral that the book collectors draw from this is that a very costly work, not an encyclopædia, having necessarily a limited circulation, should be published in a limited edition printed from type.

"We learn," says the Academy, "that Mr. Th. G. Pinches, of the British Museum, has just discovered a new and important version of the Babylonian Creation story. It is on a tablet brought by Mr. Rassam from Kouyunjik, and forms a kind of introduction to an ordinary incantation. It begins with the time when the abode of the gods, plants, trees, cities, temples had not been made, when nothing had been created. 'At that time Eridu was made, E-sagila was built—E-sagila which Lugul-du-azaga founded within the abyss.' Then comes the making of Babylon and the earthly E-sagila, after which the gods and the Anunnaki, men and animals, the Tigris and the Euphrates are created. The tablet is unfortunately a fragment, but a considerable portion has been preserved, which it is to be hoped that Mr. Pinches will soon find time to publish with a translation."

IN the catalogue of "Additional" MSS. which is being prepared for publication by the authorities of the Bodleian Library, there are two items of some interest to Americans. One is the Journal of the Quaker George Fox's travels in America and the West Indies in 1671-3, the other is the Log-book of Admiral Byron during that officer's not very distinguished command in North America and in the West Indies in 1778-9. The Admiral lay for some time in Nantasket Road. Students will find the former MS. classified as A 95, and the latter as C 70. We may add, by the way, that among the Tanner and Rawlinson collections of MSS. will be found many documents relating to the colonial period of American history.

JOURNALISTIC NOTES.

The Century magazine is running a fast press day and night in order to print the first instalment of the delayed "Talleyrand Memoirs" in the January number. This first article will be preceded by what is said to be a brilliant pen-portrait of Talleyrand, by Minister Whitelaw Reid, who has made the selections from the most interesting chapters of the first volume.

The Christian Union has opened a new department which will be known to the young as "Uncle Peter." This new Uncle will answer questions that puzzle boys and girls and give them good advice as to what and how to read. Uncle Peter will examine all the books that reach him, talk about those of use to his young nephews and nieces, quote from many of them and occasionally borrow a pretty picture from publishers to brighten up his department of the live paper which he hopes to make even more effective in its work for young readers.

A. KERSHA, the publisher of Pantobiblion, noticed in our last issue, desires to inform the trade that he has made arrangements with Messrs. Swan Sonnenschein & Co., Paternoster Square, London, to receive subscriptions for the new periodical; and with A. P. Watt, 2 Paternoster Square, London, to make contracts for advertising. Those wishing to subscribe for or advertise in this journal, which promises to be a most valuable addition to special literature, will kindly bear in mind to deal directly in the one case with Swan Sonnenschein & Co., and in the other with A. P. Watt, both of Paternoster Square, London, E. C.

NOTES ON AUTHORS.

SIR RICHARD BURTON at the time of his death had practically completed a metrical translation of Catullus, and was engaged on a similar version of Juvenal and Ansonius, proposing to follow these with the Greek Anthology and other works.

"THE statement which has gone round the papers that Prince Bismarck is engaged upon a 'Life of the Emperor William I.' is pure fiction," says London Truth. "Prince Bismarck's literary work (when he really begins it) is to take the form of writing or dictating his own 'Memoirs,' but up to the present time he has not completed the arrangement of his vast collection of letters and papers."

IT is rumored that King Kalakaua of the Sandwich Islands has visited this country with a view of finding a publisher for a work he has written on the comprehensive subject of "Man-kind." A Herald correspondent says that the author "discusses the Darwinian theory in connection with the current religious beliefs, theosophy and spiritualism. His ideas in many cases are strikingly unconventional, and the work promises to become one of the curiosities of literature."

BUSINESS NOTES.

LOUISVILLE, KY.—Frederick Diehl, bookseller, has removed to 210 West Market Street, where he has more space and increased facilities for doing business.

NEW YORK CITY.—Norman W. Henley, who for a number of years has been connected with the publishing business, has opened a bookstore of his own at 150 Nassau Street, which he will carry on under the firm-name of N. W. Henley & Co. His large experience in the department of scientific, practical and technical books fits him to serve his patrons in this direction with intelligence and despatch. He is fully abreast with all that is new in that line. One of the special branches of the new firm is an excellent facility for the importation of foreign books. We wish the new concern all success.

LITERARY AND TRADE NOTES.

MATTHEW BENDER, Albany, N. Y., has in preparation a work on "The Law of Citizenship," by Prentiss Webster.

SEARLE & GORTON, publishers—a firm of women, by the way—will reprint shortly "Gipsy: the story of a dog," by Mrs. Helen E. Starrett.

HARPER & BROS. will publish at once "The Wonderful Adventures of Phra the Phoenician," by Edwin Lester Arnold, son of Sir Edwin Arnold.

BUNNER's delightful volume of stories, "Short Sixes," has gone through two editions, both exhausted before they were delivered. The third edition will be ready at once.

AVERY & Co., Orange, N. J., have published a card game from the German purporting to form "a quick, easy and interesting method of learning a language," and called "A Gift of Tongues."

LONGMANS, GREEN & Co. will publish shortly an account of the daring journey of Fridtjof Nansen and his little party of Norwegians and Lapps across the inland ice of Greenland. It will be illustrated.

THE POPE MANUFACTURING CO., Boston, Mass., have again issued their handy Columbia Cycle Calendar and stand. The matter for 1891 is fresh and new, notwithstanding the fact that this is the sixth year of its issue.

GEORGE H. SULLIVAN has prepared a memoir of his father, Algernon Sydney Sullivan, to which he has added the memorial tributes. The whole forms a compact little volume, exquisitely printed, and may be had at cost price at Brentano's.

THE prospectus is issued of an exhaustive history of the State of Mississippi covering the 350 years of her existence, from 1540 to 1890. It will fill two quarto volumes. Individual biography will be a special feature of the work.

GREENOUGH, HOPKINS & CUSHING, Boston, have published an attractive calendar for 1891, "With Modern Authors," compiled by Alice F. Stevens. Every page is assigned to a single author: thus, January is divided among Mr. R. W. Gilder, Mrs. Rose Hawthorne Lathrop, Dickens, and Mr. Wm. Hunter Birckhead.

W. M. GRISWOLD, Cambridge, Mass., has issued in cloth binding two volumes of "Travel," a series of narratives of personal visits to places famous for natural beauty and historical association. The parts forming these volumes were published in numbers—twenty-four to a volume—and include the best descriptions of places famous for natural beauty that could be found. The price has been put at $2.25 net per volume.

G. W. DILLINGHAM announces for January "Her Husband's Friend," by Albert Ross. This is the fifth book of the Albatross Series, by the same author, which in twenty-two months is said to have had a run of 365,000 copies, and there is yet no falling off in the sale. Mr. Dillingham has just ready a subscription-book entitled "Familiar Chats with Queens of the Stage," by Alan Dale, theatrical critic of the New York Evening World. The chats are chiefly of a personal nature with about thirty popular actresses.

CLERK MICHAEL, of the Senate Committee on Printing, has just prepared a supplement to the Congressional Directory, giving correct maps of the States, showing the boundaries of Congress districts and counties, giving the population of States by counties according to the recent census, and the total population of States as shown by the census of 1880 and of 1890. The supplement contains, in addition to other information, the apportionment law of 1880 and a list of titles of all Congress references to representation in Congress, and will no doubt prove a valuable book of reference.

BRENTANO's announce a new cook-book under the title, "Statesmen's Dishes, and how to cook them," containing practical autograph recipes by Mrs. Benjamin Harrison, Mrs. M. S. Quay, Mrs. T. B. Reed, Mrs. John G. Carlisle, Mrs. John J. Ingalls, and many other ladies prominent in official and social life in Washington; "Terrible Tales," a series of four volumes of short stories from the French, German, Spanish and Italian, many of which will appear for the first time in English; and the first volume in the Red Cross Series of health handbooks, entitled "What Ails the Baby?" by Dr. John Dewar.

A RUSSIAN official on duty in this city says: "I hear that some passages or phrases of Tolstoy's new book have a coarse surface in the English language; but there is no coarseness of ideas or of phraseology in any part of it in the Russian language. Many Russian words have delicate shades of meaning that cannot be put into English, and many Russian expressions or conceptions have no precise equivalents in English. The Russian speech is the outgrowth of the life and soul and history of the Russian race, just as the English speech is of another race; and the Russians find no coarseness in Tolstoy's language, though they may reject his social philosophy. It is hard for the people of one race to comprehend the workings of the spirit of another race."

THE CATHOLIC PUBLICATION SOC. CO. have in preparation "Meditations on the Gospels for Every Day in the Year," by Rev. P. Médaille, translated from the new French edition under the direction of Rev. W. H. Eyre, S. J.; "Acts of the English Martyrs," hitherto unpublished, by Rev. John H. Pollen, S. J., in the Quarterly Series; "The Precious Blood at Bruges in Flanders," by the Abbé Louis Vanhaecke; "Mary in the Epistles, or, the implicit teaching of the apostles concerning the Blessed Virgin," with introduction by Rev. T. Livius, C. S. S. R.; "Life and Writings of the Blessed Thomas More," by Rev. T. E. Bridgett, C. S. S. R.; "The Blessed Sacrament and the Church of Saint Martin at Liège," by the Abbé Cruls, translated by permission of Monseigneur Doutreloux, Bishop of Liège, by Wm. S. Preston. They have renewed their agreement with Kegan Paul, Trench, Trübner & Co. to act as their agents in this country for the Catholic works published by them and at present on their lists. They have also acquired the sole agency for the Jesuit Fathers' publications known as the Quarterly Series, of which in future they will carry a full line. Also of the St. Anselm Society, the principal publications of which they have always kept in stock.

AN interesting seizure was made on the 10th inst. by the customs officials attached to the New York Post-Office. It consisted of an old quarto volume printed in Italian and entitled "Le I tragedie di Giovanni Delfino, Senatore Veneziano, poi Patriarca d'Aguieja, E Cardinale di Santa Chiesa Cioe in Padova, CICCCCXXXIII." It was a book of tragedies, written by Cardinal Giovanni Del-fino, who was apparently also a Venetian Senator and Patriarch of Aguleja. The tragedies consisted of "La Cleopatra," "La Lucrezia," "Il Crespo" and "Il Medoro." This old volume was addressed to a party in Northampton, Mass., and came from Italy. When the book was opened it was found to contain a linsey-woolsey head-dress, such as is worn by Italian peasant women, and, in order to smuggle this article, valued at 25 cents, through the mails, the inside of the main portion of the old book had been cut away by some sacrilegious hand. The volume, thus mutilated, formed a sort of box into which the head-dress was packed. As the book was "printed in a language other than English," under the new tariff it was admissible free of duty. The old volume is finely printed and contains an admirable steel-engraving at the beginning, which was judged to be a portrait of the Cardinal author. This plan of smuggling is a very old one and very rarely, if ever, succeeds. It was estimated that the duty on the head-dress might be about 10 cents, and for this a volume said to be possibly worth $100 was sacrificed.

FR. STARKE, Halle a/S., has just published a collection of humorous sketches in the Saxon dialect, entitled "Nach Amerika."

PAUL PAREY, Berlin, has issued in his series of "Wandtafeln für Bakterienkunde," prepared by Dr. W. Migula, a representation of "Bacillus tuberculosis Koch."

THE next volume of the Camelot Series will consist of Alfred de Musset's comedies, translated by S. L. Gwynn, who has also written an introductory notice.

GEORG THIEME has only just now been able to come up with the demand for the supplement to the "Deutsche Medicinische Wochenschrift" (No. 46), containing Dr. Robert Koch's "Erste Mittheilung über die Heilung der Tuberkulose." Though fast presses were kept busy night and day, the demand far exceeded the supply until quite recently. A bookseller in Berlin ordered 1200 in advance, and duplicated his order on publication. The total number of copies thus far printed is said to be over a million. A prominent English journal offered the publisher $2500 for the use of sheets twelve hours ahead of publication, which was refused on the ground that the discovery of the German savant was to be given first through a German medium.

TERMS OF ADVERTISING.

Under the heading "Books Wanted," subscribers only are entitled to a free insertion of five lines for books out of print, evolution of address (in any issue except special numbers), to an extent not exceeding 100 lines a year. If more than five lines are sent, the excess is at 10 cents per line, and amount should be enclosed. Bids for current books and such as may be easily had from the publishers, and repeated matter, as well as all advertisements from non-subscribers, must be paid for at the rate of 10 cents per line.

Under the heading "Books for Sale," the charge to subscribers and non-subscribers is 10 cents per line for each insertion. No deduction for repeated matter.

Under the heading "Situations Wanted," subscribers are entitled to one free insertion of five lines. For repeated matter and advertisements of non-subscribers the charge is 10 cents per line.

All other small advertisements will be charged at the uniform rate of 10 cents per line. Eight words may be reckoned to the line.

Parties with whom we have no accounts must pay in advance, otherwise no notice will be taken of their communications.

Parties desiring to receive answers to their advertisements through this office must either call for them or enclose postage stamps with their orders for the insertion of such advertisements. In all cases we must have the full address of advertisers as a guarantee of good faith.

Houses that are willing to deal only on a cash-on-delivery basis, will find it to their advantage to put after their firm name the word [Cash].

THE LOST BOOK.

One of the most interesting and in a certain respect most remarkable books that ever was issued from our book-printing department has just left the press, under the title, "The True Theory of Christianity; or, The Lost Book," by ANDREW W. MADISON, New York, 86 pp.

The character of the book is neither political nor sectarian, but marks in concise form the Bible truths which cannot fail to awaken the greatest interest in every thinking man.

It is true that these truths do not agree with many dogmas accepted at the present time, but, as treated by the author, they appeal to one's common sense and conscience and appear to be in agreement with the unadorned, direct teachings of Christ, when the traditions are divested of the figurative language, the perversions and the arbitrary additions.

All friends of truth, of humanity and of progress, be they "orthodox" or "skeptics," who have at heart the well-being of mankind, and who believe that Christ instead of "Creed" should be preached to the world, will read with interest this original and skilful treatment of the theme expressed in the title.

Price, 15 cents. For Sale at the News-stands.

 "The True Theory of Christianity; or, The Lost Book," can be ordered of any bookseller, or will be sent postpaid, on receipt of price, by the author,

ANDREW W. MADISON,

NOTES IN SEASON.

TICKNOR & Co., Boston, will publish shortly by subscription an important work in six parts, folio, with numerous plates, "Architecture of the Renaissance in England," by J. Alfred Gotch and W. Talbot Brown.

A. S. BARNES & Co. have recently published a fine edition of Goodyear's "History of Art;" also, a new atlas by James Monteith, entitled "A School and Family Atlas," containing all the latest maps and statistics, and illustrated with numerous engravings showing the physical outlines of the different countries and the various characteristics of the industrial centres all over the world.

D. LOTHROP CO. have just published "Ways and Means," by Rev. F. E. Clark, and "Our Early Presidents, their wives and children," by Harriet Taylor Upton. They have also ready new editions of "The Artists' Gallery," Miss Fairfield's "Starting-Points," "Aids to Endeavor," Elbridge S. Brooks' "Story of the American Indian," Miss Deane's "Three Little Maids," Frances Eaton's "Queer Little Princess," the "Pansy Sunday Books," and Black Beauty."

H. E. HAFERKORN, Milwaukee, Wis., will publish in a few weeks "Dr. Koch's Method of Curing Tuberculosis" popularly treated by a German physician of high repute. The treatise has been translated into English by one properly qualified for the task. The volume will also contain Dr. Koch's "First Communication" on the subject, translated from the Deutsche Medicinische Wochenschrift. Mr. Haferkorn has just issued the part treating electricity in his valuable series of Handy Lists of Technical Literature.

CHARLES SCRIBNER'S SONS have just published a volume of essays similar to "My Study" and "My Portfolio," completed just previous to his death by Prof. Austin Phelps. It is entitled "My Note-Book," and contains a number of the author's briefer essays, with some detached thoughts, somewhat of the nature of table-talk. They have also just ready, in a neat volume, "Ballads," a new volume of verse by Robert Louis Stevenson. It comprises five vivid and picturesque narratives in verse, the most important embodying South Sea legends never before published. They have in preparation a new work by Prof. A. T. Perry, of Williams College, the well-known author of works on political economy, entitled "Principles of Political Economy." Also "The Life of Our Lord," by Rev. S. J. Andrews, D.D., largely rewritten and brought down to date in every respect. It will be printed from new plates and will contain a number of maps. This book has been a standard work for nearly thirty years, and is in constant demand. For the proper historical and critical adjustment of the facts of the life of Christ it stands in the first rank.

D. APPLETON & Co. have just ready in the Fiction Series for Young Readers "The Log School-House on the Columbia," a tale of the pioneers of the Great Northwest," by Hez-kiah Butterworth; in the Town and Country Series "A Fluttered Dovecote," by George Manville Fenn; and "Through Magic Glasses," a series of lectures on the uses of the telescope, microscope, spectroscope, phot camera, etc., and the wonders revealed through them, by Arabella B. Buckley (Mrs. Fisher). They announce for early publication "The Journal of William Maclay," United States Senator 1789-1791, edited by Edgar S. Maclay; "The Nugents of Carri-conna," an Irish novel, by Tighe Hopkins; "Ring-Riding," by H. W. Struss, of the New York Riding Club; "Socialism, Old and New," by Professor William Graham, a new book in the International Scientific Series; a new edition (the third) of "Brazil: its condition and prospects," with a carefully prepared account of the recent revolution and of the present government, by C. C. Andrews, ex-Consul-General to Brazil; a new edition of the "Evolution of Man and Christianity," by the Rev. Howard MacQueary, with a preface replying to recent criticisms; and a new edition of "Appletons' Winter Resorts," revised for the season of 1890-'91.

WEEKLY RECORD OF NEW PUBLICATIONS.*

The abbreviations are usually self-explanatory. c. after the date indicates that the book is copyrighted; if the copyright date differs from the imprint date, the year of copyright is added. Books of foreign origin of which the edition (annotated, illustrated, etc.) is entered as copyright, are marked c. ed.; translations, c. tr.; n. p. in place of price, indicates that the publisher makes no price, either net or retail, and quotes prices to the trade only upon application.

A colon after initial designates the most usual given name, as: A: Augustus; B: Benjamin; C: Charles; D: David; E: Edward; F: Frederic; G: George; H: Henry; I: Isaac; J: John; L: Louis; N: Nicholas; P: Peter; R: Richard; S: Samuel; T: Thomas; W: William.

Sizes are designated as follows: F. (folio: over 30 centimeters high); Q. 4to: under 30 cm.; O. (8vo: 25 cm) D. (12mo: 20 cm.); S. (16mo: 17½ cm.); T. (24mo: 15 cm.); Tl. (32mo: 12½ cm.); Fe. (48mo: 10 cm.). Sq., obl. nav., designate square, oblong, narrow books of these heights.

*Abbé, C. Our great actors: a series of 6 water-color portraits. Bost., Estes & Lauriat, 1890. 4°, in portfolio, $5.

Abbott, Mrs. Mary. The Beverleys: a story of Calcutta. Chic., A. C. McClurg & Co., 1890. c. 2-264 p. D. cl., $1.25.

A more extended and ambitious work than "Alexia," by the same author. It is a story of English and Irish people in India, and has a gracefully told story of love and marriage.

*Adams, G: Huntington. A handbook of the tariff on imports into the United States under the acts of 1890, and the bond and warehouse system now in force; with notes of decisions, [etc.] 2d rev. ed. N. Y., Baker, Voorhis & Co., 1890. c. 8+321 p. O. cl., $3.

Balch, F. H. The bridge of the gods: a romance of Indian Oregon. Chic., A. C. McClurg & Co., 1890. c. 2-280 p. D. cl., $1.25.

Opens in New England some two hundred years ago, The Rev. Cecil Grey, a young Calvinistic minister, full of religious fervor and a stern piety, determines, after losing his wife, to go out to the far western country, as a missionary to the Indians. His experience in the Oregon country forms a romantic setting to a truthful and realistic picture of the powerful and picturesque Indian tribes that inhabited the Oregon country two centuries ago. The book takes its name from an Indian legend, which describes a great natural bridge which once existed over the Columbia—a "Bridge of the gods."

*Ball, W: Platt. Are the effects of use and disuse inherited? an examination of the view held by Spencer and Darwin. N. Y., Macmillan & Co., 1890. 12+156 p. 12°, cl., $1.

*Ballantyne, R. M. The crew of the Water Wag-tail; a story of New Foundland. N. Y., T: Whittaker, 1890. 243 p. 12°, cl., $1.25.

Bancroft, Hubert Howe. History of the Pacific States of North America. V. 34: Literary industries. San Francisco, Cal., The History Co., 1890. c. 7+808 por. O. cl., $4.50; leath., $5.50; hf. cf., rus., or mor., $8; rus., mor., or tree cf., $10.

The concluding volume of the series on which the author has been at work for over thirty years. It is chiefly autobiographical, though incidentally it gives much interesting bibliographical and biographical memoranda of the authorities drawn upon in building up this monumental historical work.

Banks, Mattie B. Dame Dimple's Christmas celebration. N. Y., G: P. Putnam's Sons, 1890. c. 6+85 p. il. O. bds., 75 c.

Gives in charming story form the biographies of a number of dolls, together with their portraits.

*Bartholomew, J. G. Physical and political school atlas: a series of eighty maps with general index. N. Y., Macmillan & Co., 1890. 39 p. 4°, cl., $3.

Basmajian, K. H. Social and religious life in the Orient. N. Y., American Tract Soc., [1890.] c. 4-247 p. il. D. cl., $1.

The writer was born in 1853, in Adrianople, European Turkey. When sixteen he was apprenticed to a shoemaker, but his health suffered at the work. When eighteen he heard a missionary sermon in the American Protestant Church, and when he announced his intention of becoming a Protestant his father bade him leave the house. The Congregationalist Church accepted his request to become a missionary, and in 1873 he went to Broosa, sixty miles from Constantinople, to study under the auspices of the American Board of Missions. This book contains his thoughts on the Orient and the work needed there.

*Beddoes, T: Lovell. Poetical works; ed. with a memoir by Edmund Gosse; with etchings by Herbert Railton. N. Y., Macmillan & Co., 1890. 2 v., 16°, cl., $4.

Clarke, Ja. Freeman. Deacon Herbert's Bible-class. Bost., G: H. Ellis, 1890. c. 4-138 p. T. cl., 50 c.

First written as a series of papers printed in the Christian Inquirer several years ago. Deacon Herbert overhears several parishioners criticising their minister at the village post-office. He tells them how they can do their share by meeting regularly and telling their special needs to make the pastor preach more effectual and interesting sermons. For this object a Monday night Bible-class is formed in which all the village soon take an active part. The discussions of several meetings make this little volume. Intended specially for Sunday-school teachers.

Cohen, A. J., ["Alan Dale," pseud.] Familiar chats with the queens of the stage. N. Y., G: W. Dillingham, 1890. c. 3-399 p. por. O. cl., subs., $5.

In this handsome volume are recorded some chats with nearly thirty actresses, most of them young and pretty and all of them popular. The author gives some information which the many admirers of the ladies named will value, but the bulk of the work consists of the subjects' talk about themselves, and most of this is spirited and readable. The portraits which accompany the sketches are finely executed. The sketches are of Lillian Russell, Mrs. James Brown Potter, Rose Coghlan, Fanny Davenport, Lotta Modjeska, Isabelle Urquhart, Sadie Martinot, Georgia Cayvan, Mrs. Langtry, Mary Anderson, Agnes Booth, Minnie Palmer, Emma Juch, Marie Jansen, Marie Wainwright, Louise Beaudet, Pauline Hall, Marion Manola, Effie Ellsler, Mrs. Bowers, Ada Rehan, Georgie Drew Barrymore, Gertie Homan, Lily Post, Ellen Terry, Clara Morris, Rosina Vokes and Nellie McHenry.

At the present time the work of understanding and explaining the brotherhood and blood-bond of Aryan nations and their relation to the Semitic race, as well as of setting forth the meaning of that which in mental work, historic strivings and spiritual ideals ties the historic nations to one another has been measurably well done. The new work to be done is to demonstrate that there is a higher and a mightier bond—the relationship of created things with one another and their inseparable connection with that which some men reverence as God, but which other men call the Unknowable and Unseen. This will be achieved when the science of mythology is established. This volume endeavors to make clear some of the uses of mythology. Polish myth-tales could not be included, but will probably follow in another book. "The myths and folk-lore of Iceland" formed the first volume of the new science.

Everett, W. Thine, not mine; a sequel to "Changing base." Bost., Roberts Bros., 1891 [1890.] c. 1+297 p. il. S. cl., $1.25.

"Changing base," published twenty years ago by Lee & Shepard, told what Edward Rice learned at school. The present story tells what his lovable son Joe learned at school, at home and at play and introduces a sweet old grandmother, who teaches the constant lesson of unselfishness summed up in the title. Mr. Everett's long experience as a teacher enables him to make every-day school events full of life and often of amusement. The author wishes to combat the idea that indulgence and absence of restraint promote a boy's happiness.

- Griffis, W: Eliot, D. D. Honda the Samurai: a story of modern Japan. Bost., Congregational S. S. and Pub. Soc., [1890.] c. 300 p. 11. D. cl., $1.50.
- The author has already related in "The Mikado's Empire" how he came to be in Japan during the years from 1871 to 1874, the period that witnessed the death of feudalism and saw many changes as leading to civilization. Honda is a member of the Samurai, or upper class. In the form of fiction the author has given a mass of facts cemented together with a little imagination and romance. In the first part he pictures ancient and medieval Japan, in the next he shows the change of mind in Japan in the rush that followed Perry's peaceful armada, and then he shows the steady growth of the nation from 1868 to 1890. Mr. Griffis is pastor of a Congregational ch. in Boston, Mass.

- The third volume completes the work. It carries the Roman Catholic and Protestant Churches through the seventeenth, eighteenth and nineteenth centuries to the present time. The learned author compares these two systems as they have operated side by side, giving special attention to the Lutheran Church, the Reformed Church, the Moravians and the various 'new and fanatical sects.' Coming to the nineteenth century he first takes a general survey, then calls particular attention to Rationalism and Pietism, Evangelical Union and Lutheran Separation, Evangelical Confederation, Lutheranism, Melancthonism and Calvinism; the Disputes and forms of worship; Protestantism in Germany; Home Missions and Foreign Missions. The last 95 pages are devoted to chronological tables and a general index, covering the three volumes and adding much to their value.

- Anna Walter Maylin was born in London on the 19th of September, 1806. She was a remarkably precocious child, and it is said learned the alphabet before she was twenty months old. At a very early age she began to write original verses, stories, dialogues, puzzles, riddles, etc., for the amusement of her younger brothers. In 1817 the family came to America and settled in New Jersey, where Miss Maylin taught for twenty years. She was very religious and always practical. This little volume is made up of papers she desired to have published after her death. She was eighty-three when she died in 1889.

- Norris, W. E. Marcia: a novel. N. Y., Harper, 1890. 3+353 p. D. (Harper's Franklin sq. lib., new ser., no. 687.) pap., 40 c.
- A strong picture is drawn of an uncongenial husband and wife; the husband is a barrister verging on middle age, cold and reserved; the wife is young, beautiful and fond of society. After ten years of married life they separate, the wife having already given her affections to another man. Her husband's death in a little while permits her to marry this man, and much space is devoted to her after life. The scene is laid in London among fashionable people.

- Stevenson, Rob. L. Ballads. N. Y., C. Scribner's Sons, 1890. c. 3+85 p. S. cl., $1.
Mr. Stevenson's third volume of verse is conceived and executed on a much larger plan than that of either "A child's garden of verses" or "Underwoods." It is composed of fine spirited narratives, related with all Mr. Stevenson's metrical felicity and vividly picturesque descriptive powers. The most important poems are two long, elaborate and romantic versifications of South Sea legends, now published for the first time.

Some of these tales were dictated to the author in the original Russian at school in Russia, where she was born and spent her childhood. Others were related to her by her nurse and other servants, and some are translations of stories current among the people. Perfect recklessness regarding possibility lends a special charm to the Russian story. The book will be interesting to children, but is also important to students of folk-lore, who may trace the connection between many of the best loved English fairy tales and the almost unknown Russian stories.

- The wife of Major Dennis was a former playmate of Jack Trevor's when he lived in Blankhampton. Later the Major exchanged in the Fighting Fifteenth, and Jack renewed the former intimacy with Mrs. Dennis. At a juncture where the pair are very much in love, a strange woman appears on the scene. A vendetta follows, and the unexpected terminates a romantic and rather sensational story. By the author of "Bootle's baby."

AUCTION SALES.

[We shall be pleased to insert under this heading, without charge, advance notices of auction sales to be held anywhere in the United States. Word must reach us before Wednesday evening, to be in time for issue of same week.]

DECEMBER 22, 23, 3 P.M.—Miscellaneous. (647 lots.)—Bangs.

JANUARY 6, 10, 1891.—Leffingwell collection of autographs. Pt. 1: A to J.—C. F. Libbie & Co., Boston.

JANUARY, 1891.—The sale of the Adolph Strauch Library has been postponed until the middle of January.—Ezekiel & Bernheim.

FEBRUARY, 1891.—The collection of masterpieces belonging to George J. Seney, of New York. A handsome catalogue of this collection is in preparation, the cost of which will probably be $40 per copy.—American Art Association, 6 East 23d St., N. Y.

The Publishers' Weekly.

FOUNDED BY F. LEYPOLDT.

DECEMBER 20, 1890.

The editor does not hold himself responsible for the views expressed in contributed articles or communications.

All matter, whether for the reading-matter columns or our advertising pages, should reach this office not later than Wednesday noon, to insure insertion in the same week's issue.

In case of business changes, notification or card should be immediately sent to this office for entry under "Business Notes." New catalogues issued will also be mentioned when forwarded.

Publishers are requested to furnish title-page proofs and advance information of books forthcoming, both for entry in the lists and for descriptive mention. An early copy of each book published should be forwarded, to insure correctness in the final entry.

"Every man is a debtor to his profession, from the which, as men do of course seek to receive countenance and profit, so ought they of duty to endeavor themselves by way of amends to be a help thereunto."—LORD BACON.

PROMPTNESS IN HOLIDAY BOOKS.

It has been a serious difficulty for some years in the book trade, that publishers have so generally put off the final issue of holiday books until so close upon the Christmas season that it is a wonder they get fairly before the public at all. Year after year the situation remains the same. The general press of the country, time and again, is disturbed by a number of last year's books "issued too late last year for the holiday trade, and therefore essentially new," with requests for notice as thus "essentially new." Books depend considerably for their successful sale upon being put properly before the public through the newspapers; and yet publishers wait until a few weeks before Christmas, when these are crowded with advertisements, to ask a space for notices, and to require editors in an incredibly brief space of time to give attention to books among the most prominent of the year. The result is, they are disposed of in a few lines—with the barest possible mention—when, a month or so earlier, they would have commanded careful attention and extended notice.

Booksellers also have no fair chance to examine new stock, and hence cannot, and very likely do not order as they otherwise would; and so the best opportunity of the year for selling books is disregarded, and publishers are frequently left with a good portion of an edition on their shelves as waste capital until the next holiday season comes around.

There should be no difficulty in overcoming this state of affairs. To produce the finely illustrated and carefully printed volumes which form one of the staples of the holiday trade, the publisher must, and as a matter of fact does, look forward a whole year in advance. Why not include in this calculation the necessary margin for selling? Of course artists disappoint, and the printer and binder are not always to be relied on; but this ought to be allowed for in the calculation. The interests of the trade suffer on all sides from this dilatoriness, and it is to be hoped that in time the lessons of the past may be heeded, and books may be got ready in better season.

THE Hon. Amos J. Cummings contributes a very interesting account of "The Fight for Copyright" to the New York Sun for December 14. The account is defective, however, in that it would convey the impression that the work of the typographical unions in behalf of the Copyright bill was disregarded, or at least not duly appreciated. Mr. Charles J. Dumar, the very able President of New York Typographical Union No. 6, took part regularly as its representative in the meetings of the Joint Committee, and as a matter of fact participated in the deliberations of that body on several occasions. As to the work of the trade represented by Mr. Dumar in bringing the question to an issue, every one interested in the matter knows that it was very heartily recognized and appreciated.

BY PROF. CHAS. F. CHANDLER, PH.D., LL.D.

THE term "Photo-Mechanical" is given to all processes in which, by the aid of light, in connection with chemical and mechanical treatment, printing surfaces are prepared which can be used for multiplying impressions without the further aid of light.

Nicephore Niepce was the first to devise a photo-mechanical process. Some time prior to 1827 he succeeded in producing etched metallic plates, using the bitumen of Judea as his resist. This substance is rendered insoluble by light, and by coating metallic plates with it, exposing them in the camera and fixing with oil of lavender, Niepce obtained a reserved picture in bitumen on metal. That is, where the high lights fell on the plate the bitumen remained, having been rendered insoluble in the oil of lavender, by the action of the light. Where the shadows fell the bitumen retained its solubility and was washed away in the fixing process. On applying an etching agent the unprotected metal was attacked and dissolved and the positive picture was corroded into the surface, as in ordinary etching. On cleaning the plate it could be used for printing in the same manner as a plate etched in the usual way, from a drawing in wax, made by hand. The pictures were called Heliographs. The process of Niepce was not a success, as the pictures were indistinct and wanting in sharpness, and nothing further was accomplished in the art of photography till 1839, when Daguerre announced his great discovery of the Daguerreotype.

* Reprinted by permission of the New York Camera Club.

These pictures were taken on silvered copper, and it was soon found that electrotypes could be made from them which would show the picture in relief. These reliefs were not, however, sufficiently deep or sharp for practical use with printer's ink.

It was the development of Talbot's invention of the negative that finally revived photo-mechanical work, and made it possible to secure satisfactory results. Talbot, in 1839, made paper negatives.

Niepce de St. Victor invented glass negatives in 1848, using albumen as the vehicle for the silver salts.

In 1851 Frederick Scott Archer published his collodion process for making negatives, which marks the beginning of a new era in photography, and which made photo-mechanical processes practicable. The ordinary collodion negative, properly intensified, left little to be desired for line work, such as copying engravings, drawings, etc., and for some photo-mechanical processes it was entirely satisfactory for half-tone work; and portraits, landscapes, etc., could be readily reproduced by it. This is true of the Woodburytype, Albertype, Artotype, Indotint, Heliotint, Photo-gravure and Aquatint processes. These negatives were, however, found inadequate for reproducing a properly graded surface for lithographic or typographic printing.

Various methods were suggested for producing a grained surface on stone or metal. Some of these processes involve a preparation of the surface, but the most successful depend upon a peculiar grained negative, in which the picture is broken up into lines, dots or stipples. Among the inventors of half-tone negatives the names of J. W. Swan, Egloffstein, Woodbury, Petit, F. E. Ives and Meisenbach are most prominent.

Success in photo mechanical processes depends upon the use of substances which are sensitive to light, and which are used to produce, photographically, the design either flat for etching or direct printing, or in relief for moulding, for electrotyping, stereotyping, etc.

Bitumen or asphaltum was first used by Niepce (1827); chromatized gelatin, albumen and gum arabic by Talbot (1852), for etched plates; and chromatized gelatin was first used for transfers, and for reliefs for electrotyping and stereotyping by Paul Pritsch in 1854.

CLASSIFICATION OF PHOTO-MECHANICAL PROCESSES.

I. Those in which the picture is moulded in gelatine colored by a pigment.

1. Woodburytype or photoglyph.

II. Those in which the picture is printed in printing ink.

A. Collotype processes (Lichtdruck, Phototype), in which the picture is printed from a gelatine surface.

1. Albertype.
2. Artotype.
3. Indotint or Autoglyph.
4. Heliotype.
5. Leimtype.

B. Processes in which the picture is printed from stone.

1. Photo-lithograph.
2. Photo-caustic.
3. Ink photo.

C. Processes in which the picture is printed from a metallic relief surface: "typographic or block printing."

a. Swelled gelatine processes.

1. Photo-electrotype (copper).
2. Photo-engraving (type metal).

b. Photo-etchings.

1. Photo-zincograph (by transfer).
2. Zincotype (direct photo on plate with albumen or bitumen).
3. Typogravure (copper).
4. Chromo-typogravure (several plates).

D. Processes in which the picture is printed from an intaglio copper plate.

1. Photo-gravure.
2. Photo-aquatint.
5. Goupil-gravure.

WOODBURYTYPES. — The Woodburytype or Photoglyph was invented by W. B. Woodbury. A sheet of bichromatized gelatine is exposed under a negative; it is then washed to remove the unchanged gelatine that was protected from the light by the negative, and finally dried. This relief film is then placed upon a sheet of lead and forced into it by hydraulic pressure, thus producing an intaglio mould.

This mould is placed in a horizontal press and flowed with a solution of warm gelatine colored with pigment. A sheet of paper is then laid upon it, and the excess of colored gelatine is forced out by pressure. The paper print is hardened in a solution of alum. The result is a gelatine pigment picture. A sheet of glass is sometimes substituted for the paper, and transparencies and lantern slides of great beauty are obtained.

The Stannotype is a modification in which tin foil, properly backed by electrotyping or otherwise, is substituted for the lead plate.

The Photo-filigrane or Photo-diaphanic process consists in attaching the gelatine relief to a plate of steel and using it to produce, by pressure, transparencies in white paper, which resemble water-marks.

ALBERTYPES. — Joseph Albert, of Munich, in 1869, devised this most successful process for reproducing photographs in printer's ink.

A sheet of plate glass is coated with a thin film of chromatized albumen and gelatine, laid face down on black velvet and exposed to light. It is then washed and dried. The insoluble film adheres firmly to the glass and serves as a foundation for the second film, which consists of chromatized gelatine. This is exposed under a negative which has been reversed by stripping. The plate is then soaked in water to remove the soluble bichromate, the film is hardened with chrome alum and then dried. The result is an almost invisible picture in gelatine, which has become insoluble in water, and actually repellant for water; while the gelatine which was protected by the negative (the whites) retains its absorbing power.

The plate is fastened by plaster of-paris to the bed of the press, and the printing is then conducted very much as in ordinary lithography. A wet sponge is applied to moisten the whites, and an ink roller to ink the picture. A sheet of paper is placed on the surface, and on applying pressure the ink is transferred to the paper. The picture may also be printed on linen, silk, etc.

ARTOTYPES. — Obernetter, of Munich, invented this improvement on the Albertype in 1878. He uses a mixture of albumen and soluble glass for the foundation film, on which the sensitive film is afterward placed. As this film does not require to be hardened by light, opaque metallic plates may be substituted for the plate glass of the Albertype; otherwise the process is substantially identical with that of Albert.

INDOTINTS.—In this process, invented by T. C. Roche, of New York, the plate, usually of copper, is roughened or pitted by exposure to the sand-blast, in order to cause the sensitive film to adhere tenaciously. Extra toughness and tenacity are also produced in the film by the addition of alcohol to the chromatized gelatine. After exposure under the negative, the unchanged bichromate is washed out and the plate is dried. These plates can be used in the power press, and 1000 copies an hour may be printed from them.

HELIOTYPES.—Between the years 1869 and 1872 Ernest Edwards, formerly of London, now of New York, made a number of improvements in colliotype printing which resulted in the Heliotype. The most important features of the improvements are the hardening of the gelatine film by chrome alum, and the detaching of it from the support upon which it is first prepared. When completed it is a thin sheet or "skin" of gelatine, tough and flexible. For printing it may be placed on a plate of zinc, or it may be attached to a cylinder. It may be preserved and used for printing, as occasion may demand.

WOMEN WHO DESIGN BOOK COVERS.

"It is an interesting fact," says the Commercial Advertiser, "that the best designers of book covers in the United States are women. The finest work done for the leading publishers comes from them. Houghton, Mifflin & Co., who give unusual attention to chaste, artistic binding, go to a woman with their most important commissions. G. P. Putnam's Sons and Harper & Brothers get many of their designs from a clever woman in Brooklyn. This lady has supplied the cover for one of Harper's holiday books under circumstances that bear detailing. Every Christmas the house illustrates something with drawings by Abbey or Alfred Parsons for a fine gift volume. Last year Parsons did the cover, and the publishers were not satisfied. This year 'Wordsworth's Sonnets' was the choice, and Parsons did the pictures, but Miss Morse—her name slipped from the point of the pencil—was called upon to supply the quiet green and gold binding."

OLD BOOK CHAT.

LUZAC & Co., the London dealers in Oriental literature, have purchased the greater part of the oriental library of the late Sir Henry Yule, and will issue a catalogue of it at an early date.

EARLY in the new year will be issued, in pamphlet form, a descriptive catalogue of the Library and Print Room at the Ruskin Museum, Sheffield. It will be compiled by Mr. William White, the curator, and will embody extracts from some of Mr. Ruskin's works.

We are pleased to learn that a good proportion of the school sketches and manuscripts by Thackeray sold by Sotheby recently have found their way back to Charterhouse. There are already some interesting relics of Thackeray to keep them company at his old school. Besides a few of his sketches, Mrs. Thackeray Ritchie, many years ago gave to Charterhouse the original manuscript of "The Newcomes," and there is also preserved at Charterhouse the bedstead on which Thackeray slept during the last years of his life. The school illustrated journal, the Gryfriar, will before long issue reproductions of these sketches and manuscripts.

THERE was a gathering of the clans on the occasion of the recent sale in Philadelphia of the Washington relics, etc., which we have before noticed. Several well-known dealers from New York, collectors from all over were there, and fiercely did the battle wage for the possession of all properly authenticated relics. Some things fetched high prices, with here and there a genuine bargain. An autograph dealer bought for $30 a lot of specimens of Washington's writing. Tucked neatly away among them was the original survey of Mount Vernon, since sold, we hear, for $250. This dealer's good fortune left him very quickly, for a few hours later he lost a roll of eleven $10 bills. The same evening, too, he nearly secured another lot of MSS. for $7, but another New Yorker ran it up to $250 before letting it go. It has since been said the lot would be dear at $50. It is the fortune of war—and auctions. The most important book in the sale was the Family Bible of Lady Washington. In consequence of the indecision of the executors, this did not appear in the catalogue. The result was that no outside bids were left for it, and it sold at the comparatively low price of $760. This precious relic was secured by Mr. A. J. Bowden, of Mitchell's, New York City. Two thousand five hundred dollars has since been offered for the volume. It will, before being sold, be offered to the British Museum. We should, however, deeply regret to see such a valuable and interesting volume leave the country—and for such a destination! Three odd volumes of the Spectator, bearing the inscription "Mary Washington" in the handwriting of George Washington, sold for the enormous price of $480, Mr. Hearst, of the San Francisco Examiner, being the buyer. "Birch's Country Seats" was secured by the Mount Vernon Society for $25. A set of "Wilson's Ornithology," 9 vols., half mor., $54 (McClurg). The famous letter of Washington's relating to the attempted kidnapping of Arnold was bought by Mr. Hearst for $1000. It is safe to say that this sale was one of the most interesting that has taken place in this country, and has been a means of showing with what eagerness collectors in all parts of the country are looking for anything of personal interest relating to "The Father of his Country."

BIBLIOPHILUS.

OBITUARY NOTES.

JAMES CUNNINGHAM, senior partner of Cunningham, Curtiss & Welch, stationers, San Francisco, Cal., died Nov. 7, of pneumonia. He had been sick only three days and his death was very sudden and unexpected. Mr. Cunningham was born at Irvington, N. Y., about thirty-seven years ago, and after graduating at the Yale Scientific School began his business career by entering the employ of A. S. Barnes & Co., publishers, New York, where he remained two years. Thirteen years ago J. E. Hodge & Co., of San Francisco, failed, and the firm of Cunningham, Curtiss & Welch was formed, with Mr. Cunningham as senior partner, and purchased the bankrupt's business.

from the creditors. Mr. Cunningham went to San Francisco, where he has since resided.

GEORGE BELL, one of the most successful English publishers of the last half of this century, died November 27, at the age of seventy-six. He was a son of a bookseller at Richmond in Yorkshire, and was born there October 12, 1814. After going through the grammar school he became his father's assistant at the age of sixteen. Subsequently he was in the employment of Messrs. Whittaker, whose business he was eventually to acquire. About 1838 he began business for himself as a bookseller in Bouverie Street, but his ambition was to become a publisher. He commenced with religious works, to which he speedily added school-books. Subsequently he removed to Fleet Street, took Mr. Daldy into partnership, and issued several works for Dr. Hook, who edited for him a "Devotional Library." He then devoted his attention almost exclusively to educational books. In 1856 he purchased the old established business of Deighton at Cambridge, who for some years had been agent for the Pitt Press. On Pickering's decease he bought the Al-dine edition of the poets and superintended a re-issue of them. In 1864 Bell & Daldy purchased the plates and stock of Bohn's libraries and migrated to their predecessor's shop in York St., Covent Garden. In 1872 Mr. Daldy retired from the firm and was succeeded by two of Mr. Bell's sons, the firm-name becoming G. Bell & Sons. About thirteen years later, on the retirement of Mr. William Hood, he acquired the publishing portion of the business of Messrs. Whittaker, in whose house he had learned his trade. In 1888 he retired from the active management of the business, though he continued to take an interest in all that was connected with the house. The business is now in the hands of his eldest and youngest sons, Messrs. Edward and Ernest. The third is known as a painter. Mr. Bell won for himself a general reputation as a true gentleman and kind-hearted man, cautious and sound in business, averse to show and notoriety, and trusted by every one.

JOURNALISTIC NOTES.

The Fortnightly Review (published in this country by the Leonard Scott Pub. Co.) for December contains the first of a series of articles on the present political condition of France, entitled "The Outlook in France," by Wm. Henry Hurlbert, former editor of the New York World. In the same issue is printed Dr. Edward Berdoe's timely paper on Dr. Koch's Consumption Cure.

A LARGE color-plate of "Prince Charlie and Flora Macdonald" comes with the Cassell's Christmas annual Yule Tide. The text contains an illustrated story, "I Saw Three Ships," by the author of "Dead Man's Rock," and there are several full-page pictures of Christmas subjects—"A Modern Santa Claus" in a railway baggage car, a little girl "On Pleasure Bent," and sepia sketches by F. Barnard and J. C. Dolman.

The Political Science Quarterly for December opens with a thorough and impartial study of Henry C. Carey and his social system, by Prof. C. H. Levermore. Brander Matthews contributes a timely article on the Evolution of Copyright. Prof. E. R. A. Seligman concludes his series of articles on the Taxation of Corporations; and Prof. A. B. Hart gives a sympathetic sketch of Hermann Von Holst, both in his private life and his literary career. In addition to these leading articles, the number contains reviews of more than twenty recent publications, with the regular semi-annual record of political events.

AMERICAN readers will find much to interest them in the December number of the Nineteenth Century, published by the Leonard Scott Publication Co., New York, in the original English form. It opens with a striking paper by the Rt. Hon. Joseph Chamberlain, M.P., entitled "Shall We Americanise Our Institutions?" in which he discusses the advisability of introducing American Congressional procedure into the British Parliament, and makes an interesting comparison between the methods in vogue in the two legislative bodies. Equally important is an article by Louis J. Jennings on the Trade League against England, in which the author points out the probable effect of the McKinley Bill upon trade between the two countries. Mr. Gladstone's paper on "The Gospel of Wealth," in the previous number of the Review, calls forth responses from Cardinal Manning, Chief Rabbi Hermann Adler, and the Rev. Hugh Price Hughes, who in three papers point out the evils of irresponsible wealth, and reasons whereby it might be made available and useful. R. B. Cunninghame Graham briefly points out the ideal of the working classes in an article on "Idealism and the Masses." Louise Twining argues for the employment of women as public servants in positions of trust where their services would be as valuable as those of men.

BUSINESS NOTES.

BALTIMORE, MD.—Isaac Kilner has retired from the firm of John Murphy & Co., publishers and booksellers. The business will be carried on as heretofore by Messrs. Frank K. Murphy, Dennis Noble and Charles A. Murphy.

BARNESVILLE, MINN.—E. N. Erickson, bookseller, advertises to sell out his stock.

CORDELE, GA.—Phillips & Hall, booksellers and stationers, have dissolved partnership. C. B. Phillips will continue the business at the same place.

CORTLANDT, N. Y., George P. Hollenbeck, bookseller and stationer, has sold out.

DENVER, COL.—W. H. Lawrence & Co., booksellers, advertise that they are closing out. It is reported, also, that C. W. Paradise will sell out his stationery and book stock, together or separately. If he can dispose of the former in a lump he will make an auction sale of the book stock.

ELGIN, ILL.—G. W. Sears & Son, booksellers, have sold out.

FORT WAYNE, IND.—At a meeting of the creditors of Lenner, Cratsley & Co., stationers, the report showed liabilities $27,800, and assets $20,000. The firm offered 40 cents cash, the creditors insisting on 50 cents. Another meeting has been called to consider the matter.

GALESBURG, ILL.—E. S. Moulton, bookseller, has sold out his business.

GREAT FALLS, MON.—A new book and stationery store has been opened at this place.

GREENFIELD, MISS.—T. E. Bell, bookseller, has sold out.

day. The Methodist Book Concern is one of the principal creditors, but has not during the past year enforced payments from Faulkner & Allan. There are no preferred creditors. The liabilities are presumed to be about $20,000.

SULPHUR SPRINGS, TEX.—W. L. Bryson, bookseller and stationer, has sold out.

LITERARY AND TRADE NOTES.

IT is probable that Dr. Henry M. Field's next book of travel will be a description of the north coast of Africa from Tangier, in Morocco, eastward to Tunis. It will continue his two previous volumes on Spain and Gibraltar.

THE banquet of the Brotherhood of Commercial Travellers will be held on December 30, at the Hotel Marlborough, corner of 36th Street and Broadway, New York. Arrangements are being made to insure a pleasant social time.

THE WELCH, FRACKER COMPANY have just brought out "A Brief History of the English Drama from the Earliest to the Latest Times," by William Edward Golden, A.M. The history is necessarily concise, being comprehended by a volume of very modest size, and its style is well suited to accomplish the excellent purpose of the work.

EXTRA illustrated editions of Mrs. Oliphant's well-known books, "The Makers of Florence" and "The Makers of Venice," have been in preparation for some time past, but the publishers, Macmillan & Co., found it impossible to get the books ready for the holiday trade this year. The first of the series, "The Makers of Florence," will be issued at an early date.

HARPER'S MAGAZINE. NEW BOOKS.

JANUARY, 1891.

In this number, CHARLES DUDLEY WARNER, in a paper of great practical value, describes "The Outlook in Southern California." Many illustrations of scenery and interesting objects in the fruit-growing regions of California accompany the paper. The very popular series of illustrated articles on South America is resumed by Mr. CHILD in this number, giving his "Impressions of Peru." F. ANSTEE contributes an article on "London Music Hall," which is illustrated from a number of drawings by JOSEPH PENNELL. In "Another Chapter of My Memoirs," M. DE BLOWITZ tells how he became a journalist, and relates some interesting reminiscences of the Franco-Prussian War and the days of the Paris Commune. The chief place in fiction is given to the opening chapters of Charles Egbert Craddock's new novel, "In the 'Stranger People's' Country," illustrated by W. T. SMEDLEY. "At the 'Casa Napoléon'" is a story of life in the Spanish Quarter of New York City, written by THOMAS A. JAVIER, and illustrated by SMEDLEY. "A Modern Legend" is a beautiful short story by VIVA D. SCUDDER. "Saint Anthony—a Christmas Eve Ballad," by Mrs. E. W. LATIMER, is accompanied by three striking illustrations from drawings by C. S. REINHART. Several other choice poems are included. The usual variety of subjects is discussed in the Editorial Departments, conducted by GEORGE WILLIAM CURTIS, WILLIAM DEAN HOWELLS and CHARLES DUDLEY WARNER.

NOTES IN SEASON.

HARPER & BROS. will publish shortly Lamb's "Tales from Shakespeare's Comedies," annotated by Dr. W. J. Rolfe, with a view, in part, to its serving as an introduction to Shakespeare.

HOUGHTON, MIFFLIN & Co. will issue early next year a one-volume edition of Lowell's "Biglow Papers," with all the notes prepared for the new edition of Lowell's complete works; "A Psalm of Death, and Other Poems," by Dr. S. Weir Mitchell; and "Francis Wayland," in the series of American Religious Leaders, by Prof. James O. Murray, of Princeton.

JOEL MUNSELL'S SONS, Albany, N. Y., announce an edition of one hundred copies of the original "Mother Goose's Melody," as first issued by John Newbery, of London, about A.D. 1760, reproduced in fac-simile from the edition as reprinted by Isaiah Thomas, Worcester, Mass., about A.D. 1785. The volume will have introductory notes by William H. Whitmore, and 28 pages of historical and bibliographical notes, in addition to the original work in fac-simile, which consists of 96 pages.

D. LOTHROP COMPANY publish this week "Songs of the Southland," by Miss S. F. Price; "Songs of Life," by Francis E. Marston; and the new edition of Austin Phelps' book, "The Still Hour," with a new closing chapter added by Prof. Phelps just before his death. They announce as among the first books of 1891, to appear early in January, "Miss Dee Dunmore Bryant," by Pansy; "Ways and Means," by Rev. F. E. Clark, D.D., and "A Modern Exodus," by Faye Huntington.

FLEMING H. REVELL has in press a second volume of sermons by the Rev. John McNeill, the "Scottish Spurgeon." The first volume, issued a few months ago, is said to have had an unusually good sale, and the sale of the forthcoming volume is expected to fall in no way behind. Mr. Revell has nearly ready a "Syllabus of Old Testament History," by Prof. Ira M. Price, of the Theological Seminary at Morgan Park, Ill. It is a chronological analysis of the history in the Old Testament, with copious references to the best and latest literature on contemporaneous history.

THE UNITED STATES BOOK COMPANY have just ready two new volumes by Rudyard Kipling which they have added to their Westminster Series under the titles of "Under the Deodars" and "The Light that Failed," the first efforts of this popular writer at a long novel. In the same series there is a new novel by B. L. Farjeon, called "Merry, Merry Boys." Two important contributions to contemporary literature are Richard le Gallienne's estimate of "George Meredith, Novelist and Poet," with excellent bibliography by John Lane; and "Letters to Living Authors" by J. A. Stewart, illustrated with portraits of the different authors. Of the latter there is also a limited edition de luxe.

CHARLES L. WOODWARD, 78 Nassau Street, N. Y., receives subscriptions for "the articles, humorous, entertaining, wise and otherwise, contained in the Almanacs of Nathaniel Ames, of Dedham, Mass., which were a popular form of literature in the Colonies, 1726-1764, which publications were continued by his son, of the same name, 1765-1775." Nathaniel Ames was a physician and tavern-keeper at Dedham, and the father of an interesting family of children, among whom were Fisher Ames, a noted Massachusetts lawyer and statesman and a prominent Federal politician, and Nathaniel Ames, a physician and almanac maker, opposed to his brother in politics, being a Jeffersonian of the most uncompromising sort. The book will be edited by Samuel Briggs, Vice-President Western Reserve and Northern Ohio Hist. Soc., Corresponding Member Rhode Island Hist. Soc. and of the Dedham [Mass.] Hist. Soc. It will contain about 400 pages, and will be interspersed with appropriate illustrations.

WEEKLY RECORD OF NEW PUBLICATIONS.*

The abbreviations are usually self-explanatory. c. after the date indicates that the book is copyrighted, if the copyright date differs from the imprint date, the year of copyright is added. Books of foreign origin of which the edition (annotated, illustrated, etc.) is entered as copyright, are marked c. ed.; translations, c. tr.; n. p. in place of price, indicates that the publisher makes no price, either net or retail, and quotes prices to the trade only upon application.

A colon after initial designates the most usual given name, as: A: Augustus; B: Benjamin; C: Charles; D: David; E: Edward; F: Frederic; G: George; H: Henry; I: Isaac; J: John; L: Louis; N: Nicholas; P: Peter; R: Richard; S: Samuel; T: Thomas; W: William.

Sizes are designated as follows: F. (folio: over 30 centimeters high); Q. (4to: under 30 cm.); O. (8vo: 25 cm.); D. (16mo: 20 cm.); S. (16mo: 17½ cm.); T. (24mo: 15 cm.); Tr. (32mo: 12½ cm.); Ps. (48mo: 10 cm.). Sq., etc. mark, designate square, oblong, narrow books of these heights.

- Adams, J. Coleman, D.D. Christian types of heroism: a study of the heroic spirit under Christianity. Bost., Universalist Pub. House, 1891 [1890.] c. 3-208 p. D. cl., 75 c.
- The author points out "types" among the martyrs, the apologists, the hermits and monks, the prelates and knights, the reformers, the missionaries, the philanthropists and the statesmen who have lived in history. Among the greatest Christian statesmen he counts Abraham Lincoln and William E. Gladstone.
- Alarcón, Pedro A. de. The strange friend of Tito Gil; from the Spanish, by Mrs. Francis J. A. Darr. N. Y., A. Lovell & Co., [1890.] c. tr. 2-133 p. 11. S. cl., $1.
- The strange friend of Tito Gil is Death. Tito was a shoemaker by trade, adopted by a rich count and cast out by his countess. He loves a noble maiden, and when separated from her commits suicide. The history of six hundred years is compressed in the weird little story, which ends with the day of judgment, when the spirits of Tito and Elena enter the Promised Land.

Black, W. Stand fast, Craig-Royston: a novel. N. Y., Harper, 1890. 3+439 p. D. (Harper's Franklin sq. lib., new series, no. 688.) pap., 50 c.

Old Mr. Bethune imagines himself the descendant of an ancient Scotch family, whose motto for centuries has been "Stand fast, Craig-Royston." He is engaged in getting up a work on Scotch ballad poetry, and imagines he has squandered a fortune. He feels the world owes him a living, and, greatly to his granddaughter Maisie's mortification, he accepts favors from all sides. The plot enables Black to introduce quotations from Scotch literature with artistic effect. The romantic interest is slight but tender and pretty. The descriptions of Scotch scenery, manners and customs are elaborated with exquisite care.

Blunt, Rev. J. J. Undesigned coincidences in the writings of both the Old and New Testaments; introd. by T. Sanderson, D.D. N. Y., Wilbur B. Ketcham, 1890. 10+361 p. 12°, cl., $1.50.

Church, Rev. Alfred J. A young Macedonian in the army of Alexander the Great. N. Y., G. P. Putnam's Sons, 1891 [1890.] 6+325 p. il. D. cl., $1.25.

A vivid description of the Olympian games ushers in the story and introduces the heroes, a young Greek and a Macedonian, who have been contesting the prize in the boys' foot-race. The Macedonian gains the prize, but his adversary challenging his right to it as a "barbarian" he is obliged to yield it. When, some years after, the Macedonian at the destruction of Thebes, had his opportunity for revenge, he spares the Theban. The two young men become ardent friends and follow Alexander through his long series of conquests in Persia, Egypt and Palestine. The narrative abounds in local color, and the character of Alexander, in both its strength and weakness, is admirably portrayed.

The articles on the Bible which appeared in The Sunday-School Times. Mr. Gladstone's advocacy of the orthodox view challenges the position taken by Mr. Huxley and the agnostic or so-called scientific school. The story of the Creation, the sketch of the Old Testament, the meaning of the Psalms and the chief points of the Mosaic legislation are set forth. Mr. Gladstone does not think the Bible can be dethroned from the position it has so long held in the estimation of Christendom.

The author writes of Jesus as the genius of Galilee, introducing many characters supposed to inhabit the lake village 1900 years ago. He says the world is bound to move heavenward, just the same as though the bulwark of traditional religion had never been assailed; just the same with Jesus as a genius, as with Christ, the divine second person of the Godhead. Epilogue gives authorities on which the writer founds his conception of Christ's life in Galilee.

"Pauline," "Ellice Quentin" and "The countess's ruby" are three separate studies of women's hearts. Pauline is a great singer, who finally abandons the stage for a quiet home as the wife of a portrait painter. Ellice Quentin gives up her love for social position. The Countess Almara, a beautiful pagan, makes havoc of the lives of two Boston men, who are friends, by a flirtation, in which a ruby ring plays a sensational rôle.

Kilbon, G: B. Knife work in the school-room. Springfield, Mass., Milton Bradley Co., [1890.] c. 60 p. il. D. cl., 50 c.

For those between the ages of seven and thirteen there is no satisfactory course of manual work arranged, and the object of this treatise is to make some suggestions that may help solve the difficulty. The problems described, being designed for the first year of the four years' course, have been experimentally tried in some of the Springfield schools. The knife course was first introduced into the grammar grades to give the boys something to do while the girls were taking their weekly sewing lesson.

Anna Kingsford ranked among occultists as a seer, interpreter and prophet of a high order of spirituality. Many of the explanations given in this volume are supposed to have been revealed to her and noted down while in a trance. Many of the ideas are poetic and helpfully suggestive.

Latch, E: B. Indications of the first book of Moses called Genesis. Phil., J. B. Lippincott Co., 1890. c. 9+409 p. D. cl., $1.50.

The author expects of his readers the difficult mental gymnastics required to understand his "Indications of the Book of Job." By an ingenious system of diagrams he shows the salient points of the work of creation and fall of man. He believes the labors of Jesus Christ as the subjugator of the human race commenced with the fall of the first man of Adam's race, but that his labors as the Son of man as Redeemer commenced from the day of Abraham. His system of chronology and periods of time is also most intricate.

Leggett, M. D. A dream of a modest prophet. Phil., J. B. Lippincott Co., 1890. c. 207 p. D. cl., $1.

A story of a supposed visit to the planet Mars. The author finds Mars much smaller than the earth but inhabited by twice as many people. Everybody is found in robust health and with a contented mind. No large cities curse this model world. Everybody is ambitious and industrious and wonderfully temperate in eating and drinking. The laws of heredity have been studied and a perfect race is the result. The modest prophet learned much that would improve the Earth.

Jean Peyral, a peasant of Cévennes, dons the uniform of a Spahi when he enters the French army. His regiment is quartered for a time at Saint Louis, Africa, where glimpses of the barracks, the life of the native Africans, and the dissolute conduct of the Spahis make a suitable background for Jean's sensuous African romances. Peyral finally exchanges places with a comrade. The result of this is a tragic incident, which ends a novel by the author of "An Iceland fisherman."

Lowth, W. Lawton. The blood is the man. San Francisco, Cal., The Bancroft Co., 1890. c. 2-101 p. D. pap., 25 c.

Dr. Baaja, deprived by a physical blemish of the privilege of mingling in society, found solace in studying books treating of the undeveloped occult force in man and nature. He discovered that in the blood lies the cause of all that has been achieved by the human family. The masculine and feminine principles are represented by the red and white corpuscles. In his practice he transfuses healthy blood into a dying man, who recovers but finds his whole nature changed by the new blood in his veins.

- In a romantic English West Country parish a gifted painter wins the love of a fisherman's beautiful daughter. She follows him to London and he lives with her for several years. She is faithfully devoted to him and resorts to every device to earn bread and butter for him when he is sick and ill-paid. He founds a school of realistic art, becomes instructor, and there meets a girl student who embodies his highest ideal. The author of "Col. Enderby's wife" and "Mrs. Lorimer" is rarely gifted in the dissection of woman's motives, aspirations and love, and with her rich material works out several domestic and social problems with skill and independent courage.

The Publishers' Weekly.

FOUNDED BY F. LEYPOLDT.

DECEMBER 27, 1890.

The editor does not hold himself responsible for the views expressed in contributed articles or communications.

All matter, whether for the reading-matter columns or our advertising pages, should reach this office not later than Wednesday noon, to insure insertion in the same week's issue.

In case of business changes, notification or card should be immediately sent to this office for entry under "Business Notes." New catalogues issued will also be mentioned when forwarded.

"Every man is a debtor to his profession, from the which, as men do of course seek to receive countenance and profit, so ought they of duty to endeavor themselves by way of amends to be a help thereunto."—LORD BACON.

THE book trade, with the rest of the community, has reached the end of another year, and, unlike many other lines of business, is in a position to congratulate itself over as satisfactory a year as could be wished for. Reports from all the large cities, East and West, are unanimous in the verdict that this has been decidedly the best holiday season in years. We trust that when the accounts are footed up after the yearly stock-taking, which comes in most cases with January 1, this verdict will be approved. The year also has been unattended by any serious failure, or the demoralization that cut so seriously into the book business of the last two years. On the whole we may feel encouraged. The outlook, too, for the new year has many elements of encouragement. Copyright seems to be assured, and though the measure awaiting the action of the Senate does not meet with the approval of some (no bill would be likely to receive unanimous welcome), we feel that it will help to smooth out many of the rough places over which the trade in the past has had to drag its weary, suffering way. And gradually the dawn of a better day will brighten the horizon.

EVERY effort has been made by the bibliographical department of the office of THE PUBLISHERS' WEEKLY this year to make the Weekly Record of New Books as complete as possible. Its efforts have been approximately successful, and the Supplementary Lists which have hitherto disfigured our "Annual Catalogue" will be omitted. Any titles for 1890 reported after the issue of this number of the WEEKLY will be filed away for publication in the next five-yearly supplement of the "American Catalogue." It is our ambition to make our bibliographical helps as nearly perfect as possible. To attain this we spare neither labor nor expense; but these alone cannot achieve our purpose—we still need the co-operation of the publishing trade to assist us in making our lists as complete as we would have them. It is a small matter for every house to see that all its publications are promptly reported for record—it is next to impossible for us to keep watch on every book issued. We trust that in time publishers will recognize the importance to themselves, from a purely mercantile point of view, of having this feature of their business carefully looked after. So much has been done in this direction during the past ten years that we do not despair of seeing our ideal fully realized in time.

THE ANNUAL CATALOGUE for 1890, which forms the continuation of the forthcoming volume of the "American Catalogue," will be through the press, we hope, next month. We may say without egotism, that no such complete annotated trade catalogue is published anywhere in the world. Not only has it present value as a help to selling books, but in years to come it will form collectively the best handy survey of the literature of this country. The early volumes are already out of print; the few remaining copies of the last two years will also be exhausted shortly. Those desiring supplies would therefore do well to register their orders in time.

THE Hospital Saturday and Sunday Association of New York City again claims our attention on behalf of its worthy charity. Every year the Association provides care and medical attendance for upwards of thirty thousand deserving individuals at the hospitals and through the dispensaries and out-door departments connected with these institutions. The amount annually collected by the Association goes directly to the care-taking of the sick poor, and is especially devoted to the free treatment of those recommended by contributors to its fund. Contributions from the trade will be received by Mr. Charles Lanier, Treasurer of the Hospital Saturday and Sunday Association, 17 Nassau Street, New York.

SUPPLEMENT TO THE LEXICON OF THE BOOK LOVER.

MR. GEORGE H. ELLWANGER, in his exceedingly interesting book "The Story of My House," recently published by D. Appleton & Co., contributes the following to the vocabulary of the bibliophile:

- Bibliodæmon*: a book-fiend or demon.
- Bibliophage*, Bibliocataphage, Bibliotelet, Bibliopollyon, Bibliophthor, Bibliolaigos: a book-eater or devourer.
- Bibliolestes*, Biblioklept, Bibliocharybdis: a book-destroyer, ravager or waster.
- Bibliolestes*, Biblioklept: a book-plunderer or robber.
- Bibliocharybdis*: a charybdis of books.
- Biblioriptos*: one who throws books around.

Mr. Ellwanger's book contains four chapters that may be read with interest and profit by the bookseller as well as the book-lover.

COPYRIGHT CASES.

D. APPLETON & Co. recently discovered that a volume of about 240 pages, entitled "Financial and Commercial New York" (purporting to be issued by "The Evans Publishing and Engraving Co." of Philadelphia) contained upwards of forty illustrations made for "Appletons' New York Illustrated." The piratical pamphlet is not for sale but is distributed gratuitously by firms in New York, who have bought copies, some fifty and some as many as two hundred, as consideration for advertising, biographical sketches and commendatory notices. Failing to discover the printer or ostensible publisher of the book, the Appletons are applying for injunctions to restrain the various firms advertising in it from distributing the publication. This will probably bring its career to a close.

A JURY before Justice Patterson, in the Supreme Court, New York, December 18, brought in a verdict for $3398.98 in favor of John Hardy, in his suit against the city for extra expenses in connection with his compilation of the "Manual of the Corporation of the City of New York, by John Hardy, Clerk of the Common Council." The manual was copyrighted in 1871. Assistant Corporation Counsel Dean raised the point that the old city charter provided that no officer of the city government should receive any compensation except his salary. Justice Patterson reserved his decision upon that point.

THE ENCYCLOPEDIA BRITANNICA REPRINT IN CANADA.—The fight of the Blacks against the reprinters of their Encyclopedia Britannica has been carried into Canada. On the 17th inst. the Collector of Customs at Winnipeg, seized a number of sets of the pirated edition. The Department of Justice of the Dominion has decided that all the volumes of the encyclopedia are liable to be confiscated if they contain any articles copyrighted by an English author or publisher.

OBITUARY NOTES.

THE Rev. Robert Dick, inventor of the Dick mailing machine, temperance lecturer and publisher, died in Buffalo, N. Y., December 16, aged seventy-six years.

ADOLPHE BELOT, the French dramatist, and author of "Les Etrangers de Paris," "Châtiment," etc., died in Paris December 18. He was born at La Pointe-à-Pitre, Island of Grande-Terre, French West Indies, November 6, 1829.

THE death of Mr. A. L. Sieghortner robs the book trade in New York and those who visit here of an old friend. Mr. Sieghortner was a Boniface of the old school, supervising in person every detail of his restaurant. His kindly and cheery welcome will be missed by all who were entertained by him. He was born in Switzerland, and came to this country in 1847, beginning his career as waiter in the old Delmonico hostelry in Beaver Street, New York. He opened a restaurant at No. 9 Lafayette Place, where George Routledge & Sons' present headquarters, where the larger part of his patrons were members of the book trade. For a number of years he furnished the Semi-Annual Trade Sale Dinner. Some years ago he removed to No. 32 Astor Place, to which attaches many pleasant reminiscences of occasions made more enjoyable for the presence of the host.

NOTES ON AUTHORS.

A MOVEMENT is afoot to raise money for a monument to mark the grave of Audubon, the eminent naturalist, in Trinity Cemetery, New York.

NICHOLAS P. GILMAN, author of "Profit-Sharing between Employer and Employee," is engaged upon a new work, entitled "Socialism and the American Spirit."

THE ex-Emperor Dom Pedro has nearly completed a Portuguese translation of "The Arabian Nights." It is understood to have been made from Lady Burton's revised version of her husband's edition.

CHAPLAIN W. H. MILBURN (the "Blind Preacher") is finishing, with the assistance of Mr. Charles Burr Todd, a volume entitled "The Mississippi Valley—chapters on its explorers, pioneers, preachers and people." The later chapters will be full of reminiscences and anecdote.

A. L. O. E. (Miss Tucker), one of the best-known of modern English writers for young people, is engaged in mission work in a city of Northern India. She is described as a charming old lady, living in a pretty little cottage, and spending the larger part of her days in visiting, praying and singing with the women of the Zenanas.

PERSONAL NOTES.

MR. B. M. CORYELL, formerly with the Western News Company and recently with Belford, Clarke & Co., has just assumed the charge of the selling department of the United States Book Company.

WILLIAM S. LEGGAT, Jr., connected with the firm of Leggat Brothers, New York, was alighting from a New Haven train in Mt. Vernon at 9 o'clock, Wednesday night December 24, to go to his home on Fifth Avenue in that village, when the train started suddenly and threw him to the ground. The wheels ran over one of his feet, crushing it at the instep. Mr. Leggat was driven to his home, where he was attended by Dr. Banning.

JOURNALISTIC NOTES.

THE [London] Publishers' Circular after the first week in January will appear weekly instead of fortnightly, having been published twice a month for fifty-three years. The Circular issued its holiday number as a quarto, instead of its regular octavo shape.

THE Scotts Observer will be known henceforth under the title of The National Observer. It will continue, as heretofore, to be published as a weekly, simultaneously in London and Edinburgh. The staff of the journal, with W. E. Henley as editor, remains unaltered.

MR. DE BLOWITZ, the famous correspondent of the London Times, will contribute another chapter of his memoirs to Harper's Magazine for January. In telling how he became a journalist he will relate many interesting reminiscences of the Franco-Prussian War and of the downfall of the Paris Commune in 1871.

TRUE to its policy of treating the most timely questions of public interest by the men most closely identified with them, The North American Review will publish in its January number an article on "The Future of the Indian Question," by General Nelson A. Miles, and an article on the "Irish Question," by Mr. Lecky, the historian.

THE hand of the new editor of The Atlantic Monthly is shown in the January number by the arrangement which replaces the department known as Books of the Month by a more extended "Comment on New Books." "The Contributors' Club" is also enlarged in range and extent, and forms a new department at the end of the magazine.

THE Monist (philosophical quarterly) for January, 1891, will contain: "The Architecture of Theories," by Charles S. Peirce; "Illustrative Studies in Criminal Anthropology"—(1) "La Bête Humaine" and "Criminal Anthropology," (2) "Psychiatry and Criminal Anthropology," (3) "Secretions of Criminals," (4) "Power of Smell," (5) "Taste," (6) "Walk," (7) "Gestures," (8) "Morphological Anomalies—Skeleton, Skull, Wrinkles," (9) "Tattooing," by Prof. Cesare Lombroso; "The Squaring of the Circle," the history of the problem from the most ancient times to the present day, by Hermann Schubert; "The Criterion of Truth," a dissertation on the method of verification, by Dr. Paul Carus; "Five Souls with but a Single Thought," the psychology of the star-fish, by Carus Sterne; "German Philosophy in the Nineteenth Century," by Prof. Friedrich Jodl; besides the regular departments of book reviews, etc. (The Open Court Pub. Co., Chicago.)

- AMONG the features of The Forum for next year will be: "Results of the Census," a series of articles by Gen. Francis A. Walker; results of the latest research and of the most recent achievements in all important lines of work, in science and in industry, by specialists; for examples, Dr. Austin Flint will write on "Dr. Koch's Discovery;" Dr. Richard Gatling on the "Development of Fire-Arms," Frank H. Cushing on "The Hemenway Expedition;" Gaston Tissandier, the French scientist, "Dirigible Balloons;" Prof. Emile de Laveleye on "The Partition of Africa," and so on; political discussions by the leaders of opinions of both parties in the United States, and by foreign statesmen; "Shibboleths of the Time," a series of critical examinations of popular opinions, by W. S. Lilly, the British essayist; autobiographical essays, a series to which some of the most noted men of the time, American and British, have already contributed; discussions of social and religious problems in the United States; and literary articles, discussing the tendencies of literary work along all directions of activity, by the foremost critical writers.

HEARD IN TWENTY-THIRD STREET.—In bookstore No. 1. Lady: "Have you the Apocrypha bound separately?" Clerk: "Never heard of it, madam."—In bookstore No. 2. Lady: "Have you the Apocrypha bound separately?" Clerk: "Well, really, I don't know, madam. You had better inquire in another department. I wait on Bibles."

A GOOD WORKING COMBINATION. — First Drummer: I came across a peculiar firm out West, composed of a stationer and a doctor. Second Drummer: I suppose the stationer tries to sell books and the doctor binds his wounds.—American Stationer.

BUSINESS NOTES.

BROOKFIELD, MO.—C. E. Z. Turner, bookseller, it is reported, has made an assignment.

CHICAGO, ILL.—Henry D. Chapin is again located in the old book business at 138 South Halsted Street. He will be glad to receive catalogues from all book-dealers.

CINCINNATI, O.—The Thomson Book Co. has succeeded to the book business of S. C. Cox & Co.

CINCINNATI, O.—E. C. Stevens (George E. Stevens & Co.), bookseller, according to the American Stationer, has made an assignment.

COLUMBIA, MO.—Gordon & Chandler, booksellers, have dissolved partnership.

COLUMBUS, O.—Hammond & Son, booksellers have sold their store at Newark, O., and will establish themselves here in January next.

DENVER, COL.—W. H. Lawrence & Co., booksellers, Denver, Col., advertise to sell out.

ELLENVILLE, N. DAK.—H. H. Christianson, bookseller, intends closing out his business.

HENDERSON, KY.—Gavin Norment has purchased the stock of M. F. Holloway, bookseller and stationer.

HERINGTON, KAN.—F. Grimes, bookseller, is going out of business.

INDIANAPOLIS, IND.—We are pleased to hear that The Bowen-Merrill Company is now definitely settled in new quarters on West Washington Street. The building is 33 x 195 feet, four stories high, with a total floor space of 25,740 square feet. The basement is devoted to the wholesale paper department, which extends the full length of the building. The first floor is the retail salesroom. It is artistically and luxuriously fitted up, one of the features of the decoration being a cheerful fireplace. Suitable engravings adorn the walls, comfortable chairs are provided; in fact, all the advantages of an inviting reading-room are to be found about this snug chimney corner. In the centre of this floor are arranged long rows of showcases, stocked with select lines of books. The law-book department, with its thousands of carefully selected authorities and reports, is a special and important feature. In the various other departments every style and variety of book is shown, while the school-book department presents an attractive display. The second floor is devoted to the wholesale department exclusively, the third to the shipping department and storeroom, while the fourth, or last floor, is the receiving and distributing department.

KANSAS CITY, KAN.—C. P. Dana, bookseller and stationer, has gone out of business.

LA CROSSE, WIS.—W. S. Hanscomb's stock of books and stationery was sold out at sheriff's sale, December 6.

MUSCATINE, IA.—Thos. H. Fitzgerald has sold out his stock of books and stationery.

NEW YORK CITY.—S. Field McLean, recently with Fleming H. Revell, has "booked" himself in a venture of his own at 775 Broadway. Mr. McLean, besides acting as New York agent for McDonald, Gill & Co., of Boston, will push the latest five volumes in evangelical literature. Catalogues of the various religious houses will be welcomed.

PARKERSBURG, W. VA.—W. R. Dye & Co. booksellers, have sold out.

POTTSTOWN, PA.—A. Evans and Horace A. Custer, booksellers, were burned out on December 13.

SAGINAW, MICH.—E. St. John's bookstore was damaged by fire, December 8.

SAN DIEGO, CAL.—O. W. Mack, bookseller, advertises to sell out his stock.

SEATTLE, WASH.—The Seattle Book Company has just opened up a handsome store at 719 Second Street, in the Hinckley block, having lately removed from 214 Cherry Street. Mr. S. F. Street, the manager of this firm, settled in Seattle three years ago, and up to the time of the fire was with Mr. G. S. Davies, in his well-known bookstore on Front Street. After the fire he opened a small store on the corner of Third and University Streets, under the firm-name of The Seattle Book Company, and about six months ago moved to 214 Cherry Street, from which place he removed to his present location. Their line will be miscellaneous books, fine stationery, blank-books, school and office supplies, and they will make specialties of Sunday-school and church supplies, gospel hymns and Chautauqua books.

SPARTA, MICH.—W. E. Hinman, bookseller, is closing out his business.

TACOMA, WASH.—E. C. Vaughn & Co., booksellers, have removed from 1203 to 926 Pacific Avenue, where they have much more desirable quarters.

TRINIDAD, COL.—W. E. Lawler has removed his bookstore from Superior, Neb., to this place.

TWO RIVERS, WIS.—Fred. C. Hartung, bookseller, is closing out his stock.

LITERARY AND TRADE NOTES.

THE UNIVERSALIST PUBLISHING HOUSE, Boston, have just published "Christian Types of Heroism: a study of the heroic spirit under Christianity," by John Coleman Adams, D.D.

GINN & Co. have just ready "Quintus Curtius," the first two extant books, edited for sight-reading by Dr. Harold N. Fowler, of Phillips Exeter Academy, with an introduction on reading at sight by Prof. James B. Greenough, of Harvard College. They will publish next February a work on "Mechanism and Personality," by Prof. Francis A. Shoup.

OF the beautiful volume entitled "Ada Rehan, a study, by William Winter," the Tribune says, "only 100 copies are being printed. One of its five chapters—the one relating to Miss Rehan's four London seasons—has been prepared by Justin H. McCarthy, and contains several of his poems about the actress. The book is to be privately printed and is illustrated with twenty-four portraits of Miss Rehan."

THE "Standard Dictionary of the English Language," which Funk & Wagnalls have in preparation, is announced to contain over 2100 pages and more than 4000 illustrations. Among the editors for special departments are Prof. R. O. Doremus, chemistry; Benson J. Lossing, American history; Carroll D. Wright, statistics; Alfred Ayres, mispronunciation; Anton Seidl and W. J. Henderson, music, and Prof. F. A. Marsh, spelling and pronunciation.

HARPER & BROTHERS have nearly ready for publication an "Elementary Latin Dictionary," by Charlton T. Lewis, Ph.D. The work is substantially an abridgment of Dr. Lewis' larger work published about a year ago. Space, however, has been gained by the omission of many detailed references and illustrative citations, and the vocabulary has been extended so as to include not only all words used by the Latin authors most commonly studied in schools, but also those used by Catullus, Tibullus, Propertius, and Tacitus in his larger works.

WM. J. C. DULANY Co., Baltimore, Md., sent out a clever Christmas card to their friends and patrons. It was a stout card, on the left-hand corner of which were stamped in fac-simile a pen and pencil eraser (Faber's best?) and a lead-pencil with sharpened point. The rest of the card bore this sentiment:

WITH THE SEASON'S GREETING.
This Pencil and Rubber I send you, old friend,
With instructions for use, to which please attend.
When your thoughts are of me, and they're cheerful and pleasant,
Please Pencil them down, and they'll always be present.
And if of my friendship you've ever a doubt
Let the thought be at once and forever Rubbed out.

HUNT & EATON publish "Scripture Selections for Daily Reading," prepared by Rev. Jesse L. Hurlburt, D.D., upon a new plan, namely, to give a reading for each day in the year and to complete the Bible in a year; selecting the most appropriate portions, well suited in length and subject, for private devotion, family worship or the public service. The first month's readings are from Genesis, the second from the gospels, alternating each month between the Old and New Testaments. They are arranged, as far as practicable, in chronological order, interspersed with selections from the Psalms. The print is large and clear.

T. FISHER UNWIN will publish shortly a book on "Chess for Beginners," by R. B. Swinton.

HART & Co., Toronto (Canada), have just published a new book of verse by Mrs. S. Frances Harrison ("Seranus"), author of "Crowded Out."

WM. HEINEMANN, London, will issue at once Mr. Hall Caine's much-discussed play "Mahomet." The public will therefore have an opportunity of judging the propriety of a work upon this subject being presented on the stage.

LONGMANS & Co. propose to follow the example of Macmillan & Co., in publishing some of their important books at net prices. They will publish early in the new year a novel about early Christianity by Archdeacon Farrar, entitled "Darkness and Dawn."

THE lectures on Egyptology recently delivered in America by Miss Amelia B. Edwards will shortly be published with considerable additional matter and many illustrations. The book will be issued simultaneously in England and in the United States.

BURNS & OATES, London, have in press a collection of documents on the English Catholics who suffered death under Elizabeth and James. The papers are drawn from various sources—the Public Record Office, the Westminster and Stonyhurst archives, and elsewhere. The book is edited by Father Pollen, and Father John Morris contributes a preface.

H. WELTER, Rue Bonaparte, 59, Paris, has ready "The Discovery of North America," a critical and documentary investigation, with an essay on the early cartography of the new world and account of two hundred and fifty ancient maps and globes, existing or lost, by Henry Harrisse, the author of the "Bibliotheca Americana Vetusissima." The work is complete in one large 4to volume of about 600 pages, with 25 fac-similes of ancient charts and globes, reduced to the size of the book. The work will be printed for subscribers only, and will not in any case exceed 350 copies. Subscriptions should be sent before January 31, 1891, to the publisher. Mr. Welter also issues "Tresor de chronologie, d'histoire et de géographie," by Le Comte de Mas Latire.
